West Hatch School, Chigwell

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement about the official visit of his hon. Friend the Member for Dartford (Mr. Dunn), the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, to West Hatch school, Chigwell.

Mr. Dunn: I visited West Hatch high school, Chigwell on 28 January to see the valuable work being done there on health education. I sat in on a fifth year lesson and saw at first hand the perceptions of the pupils about the misuse of drugs. I was impressed by the lesson and the school's approach to this subject, as well as the authority's general programme of work on this topic.

School Meals

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many local education authorities are currently able to provide in full for the demands for lunchtime meals in all secondary schools.

Mr. Dunn: Most LEAs in England are now able to provide a full school meals service in secondary schools.

In a survey undertaken last autumn, some 22 authorities reported small numbers of schools with a partial, not full, service. Recruitment of school meals supervisors was the main problem and this is gradually being overcome.

Education Act 1981

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish in the Official Report, the information available to him on the numbers of children with statements under the Education Act 1981 in each local education authority in England; and what is his estimate in each case of the percentage of these children who are persons to whom section 29 of the National Assistance Act 1948 applies.

Mr. Dunn: The information about children with statements, derived from returns by local education authorities, is set out in the following table. Assessments for the purposes of section 29 of the National Assistance Act 1948 are carried out by social services departments, and are a matter for my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Social Services.

Lancashire County Council

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will meet representatives of Lancashire county council as a matter of urgency to discuss their 1987-88 education capital allocation.

Mr. Dunn: My right hon. Friend is prepared to do so if appropriate. Officials from my Department are to meet officers from the Lancashire LEA on Tuesday 10 February to discuss the authority's capital allocation for 1987-88.

Liverpool University

Mr. Terry Fields asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if his Department was consulted regarding the sale of Liverpool royal institute by Liverpool university to John Bannister, director of Liverpool Heritage Developments Limited, formerly Dunebourne Limited; if the sale was conditional upon specific usage; what financial benefits have been accrued to date by Liverpool university; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: My Department was not consulted. Decisions on matters of this kind are for the university and the University Grants Committee.

School Accommodation

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information was received by his Department in response to the circular letter to local education authorities in mid-1986 seeking information in connection with the authorities' plans for education capital expenditure in 1987-88 on (a) numbers of sub-standard places in unremodelled secondary schools in which the oldest teaching accommodation was built before 1919 and in which less than one-third of total teaching accommodation is in post-1945 permanent construction and (b) numbers of such places considered to serve areas of educational and social disadvantage; if he will publish such information as he has available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: The information requested is set out in the table. It does not present a reliable national picture of the incidence of substandard places or of areas of educational and social disadavantage for several reasons. For example, a number of authorities failed to supply any information, or supplied only a part of what was requested. In addition, authorities themselves are asked to judge what constitutes an area of educational and social disadvantage: the information at (b) cannot therefore be taken as consistent or comparable.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science, further to his reply to the hon. Member for Yeovil on 2 February, Official Report, column 470, concerning recent information on sub-standard places in primary schools, what comparable or broadly comparable information is available from responses made by local education authorities in other years since 1979; if he will place copies in the Library of each circular letter sent by his Department in any year since 1979 requesting information of sub-standard primary places or schools; if he will publish in the Official Report a table similar to that given in his reply of 2 February, showing figures for the earliest year since 1979 for which such figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Petroleum Revenue Tax

Mr. Greenway asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the outcome of his consultations with the industry on the Government's proposals on petroleum revenue tax valuation and pricing announced on 18 November.

Mr. Norman Lamont: We received many helpful comments in the consultative process we initiated. These will be taken into account in putting the new valuation rules into legislative form to take effect, as announced, from 1 January 1987.

On the PRT pricing problem, we now propose to amend our approach. The legislation to be included in the 1987 Finance Bill will apply to all North sea crudes. It will hinge on a producing company nominating particular transactions to the Inland Revenue, within the specified time limits before the oil is actually delivered, if those transactions relate to oil it has produced itself. In all cases where such a nomination is made, and the deal actually transacted as nominated, the price taken for PRT will be as under the present rules. Further details are contained in a press notice which the Inland Revenue is issuing today. In addition, a detailed outline of the scheme itself is being sent to all participators in United Kingdom oilfields; and this is also available on request from the Inland Revenue head office.

The new pricing scheme will apply in respect of deliveries from 1 March 1987. The Government are considering the need for further provisions to cover certain deliveries which would, under the proposed new rules, be brought in for PRT at "market value" but where a higher price may be achieved. We will in any case monitor the operation of the proposed rule very closely, and would not hesitate to propose further legislation should this be needed.

European Community Budget

Mr. Gould asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the rate of exchange between the pound sterling and the European currency unit used in each year since 1973 to calculate the United Kingdom contribution to the European Economic Community budget; how this compares with the market rate and the rate of exchange used for agricultural purposes; and what rates are being assumed for the purposes of the 1987 budget.

Mr. Brooke: Information concerning the average annual market rate of exchange between the European currency unit and the pound sterling for the years 1973 to 1987 is given in the table. I refer the hon. Member to the reply I have given today to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) concerning the exchange rates used to calculate the United Kingdom contribution to the European Community budgets since 1973 and for the rates of exchange used for agricultural purposes.

Note: The annual market exchange rates up to and including 1985 have been taken from table 41 of the European Commission document "European Economy", vol. 29, July 1986. For 1986 and 1987 the rate is the European Economic Community budget exchange rate.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report the rate of exchange between the pound sterling and the ecu used each year from 1973 to date for determining (i) the United Kingdom's contribution to the European Economic Community budget and (ii) intervention prices under the common agricultural policy; and if he will bring up to date the information on appropriations for the European Economic Community budget given in his written answer to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) on 22 May 1986, Official Report, columns 307-8, together with the figures for 1986 and the forecast for 1987.

Mr. Brooke: The information is set out in the tables. The budget exchange rates for the period 1973 to 1976 inclusive are not readily available (table A).

Notes:
(1) Until 1979 the budget was established in units of account (u.a.). Between 1978 and 1980 it was established in European units of account (eua). Since 1981 it has been established in European currency units (ecu). For the period 1981 to 1983 the eua and the ecu had the same value.
(2) The budget exchange rate is the rate used to convert member states' estimated VAT revenue for a particular budgetary year from national currency to an amount expressed in ecu. Member states' monthly VAT contributions during the budgetary year are then paid on the basis of one twelfth of the ecu amount; the amount of the monthly payment in national currency made by the member state being determined by the rate of exchange in force on the first working day after the 15th day of the previous month.
(3) ua for 1977, eua for 1978 to 1981, ecu for 1982 to 1987.

Notes:
1. The sterling figures up to and including those for 1985 have been derived using the annual average exchange rates set out at table 41 of the European commission document "European Economy", Vol. 29, July 1986. For 1986 and for 1987 the Community budget exchange rate of 1 ecu = £0·62127 and 1 ecu = £0·62738 have been used, respectively.
2. Spain and Portugal joined the Community on 1 January 1986.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will bring up to date the information on value added tax and own resources given in his answer to the hon. Member for Dagenham (Mr. Gould) on 16 May 1985, Official Report, columns 191-92, together with an estimate for 1987.

Mr. Brooke: The information requested is given in the table. In order to provide consistent data for all years up to and including 1987 the table has been recalculated using European Commission GDP data (table 6 of the statistical annex to "Europe Economy", No. 29, July 1986). As was the case for the reply of 16 May 1985, the calculations for the United Kingdom do not take account of the offsetting effect of VAT abatements or refunds.

Notes:
(1) For value-added tax columns for the years 1980 to 1985 the calculation of the percentage of GDP used the amount contributed by member states, inclusive of the balances and adjustments of previous financial years. Figures for 1984 and 1985 include contributions to the intergovernmental agreements (IGAs) for those years. VAT figures for 1985 have also been amended to make them consistent with all other figures used for VAT.
(2) Greece joined the Community on 1 January 1981 and for the years 1981 to 1985 paid, instead of VAT, a financial contribution based on GNP.
(3) From 1979 to 1980 the European budget was established and implemented in European units of account (EUA). As from 1981, the budget was established and implemented in European currency units (ECU). For 1981, the value and composition of the ECU was the same as the EUA.
(4) GDP base figures for all member states are drawn from Table 6 of the Statistical Annex to "European Economy" (No. 29, July 1986).
(5) VAT and other own resources base figures for the years 1980 to 1985 have been taken from the Official Journal of the European Communities Court of Auditors Reports for 1984 and 1985. IGA contributions in 1984 and 1985 have been taken from Table 2 of the Statement on the 1986 Community Budget (Cmnd. 9907). Amendments to 1985 VAT are taken from the 1985 final adopted budget (p70) published on 5 August 1985. For 1986, own resources figures are drawn from the final adopted budget published on 4 August 1986. The figures for 1987 are the revenue estimates for that year.

Government Data Network

Mr. Cohen asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will list the Departments that will be connected to the Government data network on the first phase of the project, and those Departments that may be added to the network at a later stage.

Mr. Brooke: If the proposed Government data network goes ahead, it is expected that it will be used initially by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise, Home Office, Department of Health and Social Security and Inland Revenue. It is too early to consider what other Departments might use the network at a later stage.

Mr. Cohen asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what new interactive, interrogative and batch facilities will accrue to his Department from the connection to the Government data network; and what is the estimated saving to his Department from joining the network.

Mr. Brooke: There are no plans at this stage for the Treasury to use the proposed Government data network.

Capital Transfer Tax

Dr. David Clark asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if a capital transfer tax offset plan under the Finance Act 1976 was conducted in the last financial year in respect of 30,000 acres centred around Bolton Abbey in the Yorkshire Dales national park.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Under the tax confidentiality rules, I cannot comment on individual cases.

Dr. David Clark asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he is satisfied by the operation of waiving capital transfer tax for landscape schemes under the Finance Act 1976.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Yes, particularly since the amendments introduced in paragraph 2 of schedule 26 to the Finance Act 1985 strengthened the statutory requirements relating to the form of the undertakings required from owners in return for conditional exemption.

Dr. David Clark asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many schemes have been approved each year since 1976 to offset capital transfer tax in exchange for landscape scheme arrangements;

(2) what has been the cost to his Department in each year since 1976 to offset capital transfer tax for landscape schemes.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 1 December 1986 at columns 465-467 in response to his question about heritage exemption claims for outstanding scenic land.

Dr. David Clark asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what machinery he has established about publicising landscape schemes offset against capital transfer tax under the Finance Act 1976.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Publicity about public access to heritage property which has been conditionally exempted from capital tax is incorporated in the terms of the management agreement which is negotiated to give effect to the undertakings about preservation and public access that are required as a precondition of exemption. Requirements will differ from case to case but, outstanding chattels apart (for which different arrangements apply), these will normally comprise some or all of the following.

(a) Owner to inform the British Tourist Authority (the Scottish Tourist Board and the Highlands and Islands Development Board in Scotland) of the opening arrangements and subsequent changes.

(b) Owner to advertise the opening arrangements in one or more suitable publications with national circulation.

(c) Owner to display a notice outside the property giving details of the opening arrangements.

(d) Owner to agree that the advisory body or bodies (or its/or their agents), which confirmed the property's eligible quality and with whom the terms of the detailed management agreement will have been negotiated, can divulge the access arrangements to anyone who enquires about them.

(e) Owner to agree to such other publicity as the advisory body, or bodies, consider to be appropriate. This could include displaying a notice in some public place in the locality (e.g. the local post office, local library, local tourist office or town hall) or in a local preservation society's newsletter.

The management agreement would also normally provide scope for additional measures to be agreed, if appropriate, between the owner and the advisory body or bodies at a later stage.

Dr. David Clark asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many of the landscape schemes offset against capital transfer tax under the Finance Act 1976 are in national parks.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Precise information is not available, for the reasons explained to the hon. Member in the answer given on 1 December 1986 at columns 465-467 in response to his question about heritage exemption claims for outstanding scenic land. I understand that the Countryside Commission's estimate, however, is that of the order of three quarters of the landscape schemes on which its advice is sought are in either national parks or areas of outstanding natural beauty.

Small Businesses

Mr. Blair asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will list which representative groups from the small business sector he or his Treasury colleagues have met, or intend to meet, concerning Budget representations.

Mr. Brooke: Treasury Ministers have met several organisations representing the small business sector, including the CBI Small Firms Council, and the Union of Independent Companies, to discuss their Budget submissions. No further meetings between Treasury Ministers and the small business sector are at present planned. My hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Employment, who is responsible for the small-business sector, has also had similar meetings with most of the major small business organisations.

Energy Saving

Mr. Rost asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many applications he has received from local authorities, health authorities, and others in the public sector, for authorisation to engage private sector energy management companies for contracts on a shared-energy savings basis, where no public sector investment is involved; how many such applications have been approved; and what replies have been sent to those whose applications have not been approved.

Mr. MacGregor: Responsibility for the possible engagement of private sector energy management companies lies in the first instance with the appropriate public sector authority, in pursuit of its policies for the efficient use of energy conservation management, so information in the form requested is not available. However, I am aware that schemes are being considered in this area. I would encourage private sector involvement provided it represents the most cost-effective approach.

Covenants (Tax Relief)

Dr. McDonald asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will publish in the Official Report the number of young people aged over 18 years who had covenants made by their parents and the cost of such tax relief in terms of revenue forgone in 1985-86 and the estimated figures and costs for 1986-87;

(2) if he will publish in the Official Report the number of children under 18 years who are beneficiaries of covenants made by their grandparents and the cost of the tax relief in terms of revenue figures of the Exchequer in 1985-86, and the estimate for 1986-87.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I shall let the hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Higher Rate Taxpayers

Mr. Marlow asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the number of higher rate taxpayers as a proportion of the population for each county in England and Wales.

Mr. Brooke: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

VAT

Sir Fergus Montgomery asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many representations were received from (a) business organisations and (b) individuals, regarding the present value-added tax regulations for mail order firms in each of the years 1979, 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984, 1985 and 1986;

(2) what assessment has been made by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise of the cost to retail business of compliance with the proposed new requirements in the consultation paper, "VAT: Small Business Review";

(3) what assessment has been made by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise of the cost to retail traders providing self-financed credit facilities of compliance with the proposed new requirements in the consultation paper, "VAT: Small Business Review";

(4) what is his estimate of the benefits to the United Kingdom economy as a whole of implementing the changes outlined in the consultation paper, "VAT: Small Business Review", in respect of the mail order industry;

(5) what consultations took place with the mail order industry before the consultation paper, "VAT: Small Business Review" was published;

(6) what compliance cost assessment of the costs and benefits to the mail order industry of the changes proposed in the consultation paper, "VAT: Small Business Review", was carried out by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise in accordance with the provision of paragraph 3.12 of "Building Businesses . . . Not Barriers" (Cmnd. 9794) and if he will publish the findings.

Mr. Brooke: I shall let my hon. Friend have replies as soon as possible.

Disabled People

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if it is his intention to allocate funds in the current year for the implementation of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: I have nothing to add to the reply given by the Minister for the Disabled to the hon. Member for Caernarfon (Mr. Wigley) on 26 November 1986 at column 289.

EC (Own Resources)

Mr. Nicholas Baker asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the recent judgment by the European Court of Justice concerning advance payments of traditional own resources to the European Community.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 19 December 1986, c. 746]: I regret that my previous reply incorrectly stated that the amount drawn on class III, vote 1, budget of the European Communities, to pay advances of non-VAT own resources in 1986 was £431 million. This amount is in fact the unspent provision on the vote. The amount drawn was £499 million.

Stamp Duty

Mr. Latham asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will set out in tabular form (i) the estimated cost to public funds and (ii) the estimated number of properties exempted if stamp duty on house purchase were to become payable only on houses costing (a) £35,000, (b) £40,000, (c) £50,000 and (d) up to £100,000 in steps of £10,000 at a time after £50,000.

Mr. Ian Stewart [pursuant to his reply, 6 February 1987]: The stamp duty threshold applies to all property other than stock or marketable securities. For 1987-88, the estimated cost of raising the threshold to the amounts shown, and the further numbers of properties exempted, would be as follows:

Threshold (£)	Estimated Cost (£ million)	Numbers of Properties ('000)
40,000	195	580
50,000	315	840
60,000	395	990
70,000	450	1,070
80,000	495	1,130
90,000	525	1,170
100,000	555	1,200

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Rural Economy

Mr. Cash asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures will be taken to sustain the rural economy.

Mr. Jopling [pursuant to his reply, 22 January 1987, c. 721]: With the European Community now producing surpluses in many of the main agricultural commodities, a new balance of policies has to be struck, with less support for expanding production, more attention to the demands of the market, more encouragement for alternative uses of land, more response to the claims of the environment, and more diversity on farms and in the rural economy.

The Government are therefore taking a number of new policy initiatives to assist the process of change. A scheme will be introduced to encourage the development of farm woodlands to take land out of agricultural production. This will build on the existing forestry grant schemes, but will also provide for annual payments to cover the gap between planting and the likely first income from most types of timber. The payments will vary by area in recognition of the fact that the agricultural income foregone from planting trees on farms will be higher in some areas than in others, but the maximum rate of aid will be £125 a year per hectare. The aim is to plant up to 36,000 hectares over the first three years of the scheme, at the end of which the scheme will be reviewed. The detailed arrangements will be the subject of consultation with interested parties prior to the introduction of appropriate legislation, but the scheme will incorporate provisions for the protection and enhancement of the environment, including special encouragement for broadleaved trees.

The Government also propose an expansion of the forestry programme, with particular emphasis on the private sector and with due regard to environmental considerations. The planting of a higher proportion of trees on low ground of better quality than hitherto will be encouraged by the release to forestry of better quality land; the Forestry Commission will keep in mind the need to encourage planting on this land in their regular reviews of grant rates. We shall continue to encourage broadleaved planting by higher rates of grant, as now. The aim is new planting of 33,000 hectares a year, compared with a current planting target of 30,000 hectares.

The designation of environmentally sensitive areas under section 18 of the Agriculture Act 1986, the first of which are due to come into force next month, will be extended early in 1988. In doing this the Government will build on the lists proposed by the Countryside Commissions, the Nature Conservancy Council and their equivalent in Northern Ireland. There will be consultations on the detailed arrangements.

Diversification of enterprise on farms will be encouraged by the introduction of a scheme under section 22 of the Agriculture Act 1986, providing for the grant-aiding of ancillary businesses on or adjacent to farms. This will include activities such as value-added food processing and the provision of recreational and amenity facilities. There will also be extra help for marketing of the products of diversified businesses. In working up these schemes it will be necessary to ensure that they are complementary to the activities of the existing agencies working in this field, particularly the Development Commission, COSIRA, the small firms service, local enterprise agencies and tourist boards.

Within my budget for research, development and advice I shall be placing more emphasis on the possibilities for novel crops and livestock which have a prospect of being realistic alternatives to commodities in surplus, and on the socio-economic and environmental implications of the changing farming scene.

Finally, my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for the Environment and for Wales are today putting out for consultation a draft circular containing guidance on the future planning regime for agricultural land. It will include more encouragement to local authorities to take a positive attitude to diversification and to be helpful about the conversion of redundant farm buildings.

These new initiatives are expected to cost about £25 million a year when they are fully operational. This comprises an estimated £10 million on farm woodlands, £3 million on traditional forestry, £7 million on ESAs—doubling the existing provision — and £5 million on diversification and marketing. The alternative use of land will lead to compensating savings in CAP expenditure. This does not imply any change in the overall public expenditure totals.

In addition, I and my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland, for Wales and for Northern Ireland, plan to publish next month a document setting out how the Government see the changes affecting farmers, emphasising that it is for individual farmers to decide how to run their own businesses, but describing how the Government's policies towards farming are being adjusted to reflect the changing scene and potential in the rural economy as a whole. The Government's overall objective is to facilitate the conditions which encourage a healthy rural economy based on enterprise, adaptability and fair competition.

Sheep Farmers

Mr. Wigley asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much compensation has been paid to sheep farmers in (a) England, (b) Wales and (c) Scotland following the losses endured as a result of the effects of the Chernobyl nuclear accident; and how much was paid in each area under the the categories of (a) fat lambs, (b) store lambs and (c) breeding lambs.

Mr. Jopling: Information on payments authorised under the sheep compensation scheme 1986 is not available in the categories requested. The payments authorised for each leg of the scheme are indicated by area in the table below. The qualifying criteria for compensation were the same in each area, and so the figures reflect the extent to which the different areas have suffered disruption to their normal marketing patterns.

Payments authorised under the sheep compensation scheme 1986 up to 30 January 1987

	Leg 1[1] £	Leg 2[2] £	Leg 3[3] £	Total £
Cumbria	13,424	50,950	170,772	235,146
North Wales	23,976	782,699	1,652,192	2,458,867
Scotland	68,624	287,491	991,067	1,347,182
TOTAL	106,024	1,121,140	2,814,031	4,041,195

[1] Leg 1: compensation to producers for losses on finished lambs rejected for variable premium on grounds of overfatness after their areas have been released from restrictions.

[2] Leg 2 (which is still open): compensation for market losses on sheep sold, marked and subject to slaughter restrictions, at store and fatstock markets.

[3] Leg 3: compensation for certain direct costs/losses which resulted from the impact of the restrictions on the affected sheep enterprises.

Grey Seals

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) whether his Department accepts the conclusions of the Natural Environment Research Council report, "Interactions between Grey Seals and United Nations Fisheries", published in 1984; what research is currently being carried out on interactions between grey seals and fisheries by his Department; and if he will make a statement;

(2) by whom, and where, research projects funded by his Department on (a) the ecology of the grey seal or (b) interactions between grey seals and commercial fisheries, are being carried out; and over what period of time in each case.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Bees (Varroasis)

Mr. Speller asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to prevent the spread into the United Kingdom of the disease varroasis of bees.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Imports of bees into the United Kingdom are strictly controlled by licence. Licences are issued only for queen bees, with attendant workers, from countries with a high bee health status. They are not issued for imports coming from countries where varroasis is known to exist. It is a condition of the licence that the consignment must be accompanied by a certificate of health from the country of origin and that the attendant workers must be sent to my Department's bee unit at Luddington for post mortem examination.

Mr. Speller asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the varroasis of bees posters issued by his Department are displayed at all ports; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My Department has circulated to port authorities a poster headed "Foreign Bees Keep Out". This poster publicises the dangers of the bee disease varroasis. Port authorities were asked to display it in places where it will be seen by port workers, seamen and lorry drivers.

The prominence which ports give to these posters is a matter for them in the light of other priorities but my Department does remind them from time to time of the importance of keeping out varroasis.

Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowances

Mr. McQuarrie asked th Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any proposals to raise the ceiling of the hill livestock compensatory allowances; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jopling: The arrangements for the hill livestock compensatory allowances to apply this year were announced in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Devon, North (Mr. Speller) on 17 December 1986. My right hon. Friends and I have no proposals to raise the financial ceilings this year.

Green Pound

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he proposes to request the European Economic Community for a further reduction in the green pound at an early date; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will indicate the percentage gap in the green pound in comparison between the United Kingdom and the Republic of Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Beef

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, if he has any plans to make adjustments on the exports of cull beef which could assist the farming industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Pork

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, what is the imbalance of imports of pork in cash terms from the Dutch producers as against the price which can be obtained in the market by United Kingdom producers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Suckler Cow Premium

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Devon North (Mr. Speller) Official Report, 29 January, column 338, if he is now in a position to announce the rate at which the suckler cow premium will be paid; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

EEC Food Exports

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will raise at the next meeting of the Agriculture Council the approval by the authorities in Bavaria to export to the third world 5,000 tons of milk powder with radioactivity levels 10 times as high as permitted for consumption within the European Economic Community; and if, in particular, he will seek to clarify whether export rebates funded from European Economic Community finances will be repayable in respect of this export.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 6 February 1987]: No.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, what was the total amount of export rebate paid by the EEC in respect of exports of food to the Republic of Libya in the year 1985.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 6 February 1987]: I regret that statistics on export refunds are not available by country of destination.

TRANSPORT

Motorways (Warning Systems)

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of motorways in England have illuminated advance warning systems.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: All of the motorways in England have advance warning systems: 90 per cent. take the form of an illuminated matrix signal, giving the recommended action drivers should take; the remainder, which are flashing amber lights, give warning of a hazard ahead.

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether his Department is satisfied with the operation of illuminated advance warning systems on motorways.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The operation of warning systems is a matter for individual police forces.

The Department continually seeks to improve the operation of its warning systems and on 50 miles of the M1 is enhancing them to detect slow moving or stationary traffic, alert the police control centres and automatically switch on more closely spaced matrix signals.

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether his Department proposes to extend the provision of illuminated advance warning systems on motorways in England.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Yes. The Department proposes to extend the matrix type of warning signal, displaying the recommended action that drivers should take, to all motorways in England.

A1-M1 Link Road

Sir Anthony Grant asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to make a decision on the inspector's report on the M1-A1 link road; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: My right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for the Environment and for Transport hope to announce their joint decision within the next few weeks.

Motorway Service Areas

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list any proposals for additional motorway service areas currently under consideration for the existing motorway network in England, not including the M25.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Motorway service areas currently planned for the existing motorway network, excluding the M25, are as follows:

(a) M4: Reading area (precise site not yet chosen).
(b) M11: Birchanger, near Stansted.
(c) M20: i. West Kingsdown near Brands Hatch;
ii. Westhanger, at junction 11.
(d) M27: Meon, near Fareham.
(e) M40: Stokenchurch, near High Wycombe.
(f) M42: i. Northern section in the Tamworth/north Warwickshire area;
ii. South-eastern section.
(g) M54: Telford.
(h) M56: Hapsford.

PSV Tests

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Gower on 3 February, Official Report, column 525, if he will place in the Library a copy of the proposed changes in comfort and convenience checks for public service vehicles carrying more than eight passengers undertaking the annual test.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: A copy of the Department's consultation letter of 14 October 1986, reference VSE 4075/42, was placed in the Library at the time. The changes in checks on public service vehicles are listed in annexes A and B to that document. I have sent a copy to the hon. Member.

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish in the Official Report for each private operator in Wales in 1985-86 the number and percentage of vehicles which failed the annual PSV test both initially and after minor modifications had been carried out.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: This information is not available.

Motorways (Facilities)

Sir Raymond Gower asked the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made in providing parking areas and facilities along existing motorways in England; and what plans he has for the next five years.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: There are 40 motorway service areas open in England. Within the last two years, new service areas were opened at Ferrybridge, at the junction of the M62 and A1, and on the southbound side of the M5 at Sedgemoor. The northbound side of Sedgemoor will open at Easter.

For the future, the main aim is to get new service areas at strategic locations roughly 30 miles apart both on the existing motorways where there is a gap in provision and on new ones. Proposals have been made for 14 sites, including four to serve the M25. These are at various stages. In addition, four other locations are under consideration. The sites and locations are as follows:

(a) M25: South Mimms (under construction); Thurrock (developer/operator selected); Clacket lane, near Westerham (subject to public inquiry); and Iver
(b) M4: Reading area
(c) M11: Birchanger, near Stansted (developer/operator selected)
(d) M20: West Kingsdown, near Brands Hatch (subject to public inquiry); Hollingbourne, east of Maidstone; and Westhanger, at junction 11
(e) M27: Meon, near Fareham
(f) M40: Stokenchurch, near High Wycombe; Ardley, at junction with A43; and Barn hill where the motorway crosses the Fosse way
(g) M42: Northern section, in the Tamworth/north Warwickshire area, and on the south-eastern section
(h) M54: Telford
(i) M56: Hapsford, at junction with A5117
(j) Birmingham northern relief road: potential site being investigated

As this programme proceeds, I shall review the possible need for additional sites in particular areas.

M3 (Barend to Chilworth)

Sir David Price asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to be able to announce his determination of the public inquiry held in Eastleigh in the summer of 1985 into the extension of the M3 motorway from Barend to Chilworth.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I hope to be able to make an announcement in the spring.

Heavy Lorries

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many overseas lorries were found to be overweight in 1986.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Figures for 1986 are not yet available. In the 12 months ending 30 June 1986, 11,489 foreign vehicles were weighed by the Department's traffic examiners and local authority trading standards staff and 3,280 vehicles were found to be overloaded.

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many weighbridges there are in the west midlands; how many tests were carried out in 1986; and how many lorries were found overweight, giving figures for the United Kingdom and overseas lorries.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Department has provided five weighbridges in the west midlands traffic area. A further site is under construction. In the 12 months ending 30 June 1986, 5,974 United Kingdom registered vehicles were weighed by west midlands traffic examiners and some local authority trading standards staff. Of these, 934 vehicles were overloaded. Of 348 foreign vehicles weighed, 25 were overloaded.

Motor Vehicles (Child Restraints)

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has any proposals to make the use of child restraints in motor vehicles compulsory; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Not at present. All new cars registered from 1 April this year must be fitted with rear seat belts and/or child restraints. That should encourage more parents to use child restraints. Our aim is to increase the voluntary use of restraints and voluntary fitting in cars which do not already have them.

We will continue to press home to parents the message that the use of restraints saves children's lives. Parents can obtain advice and a copy of the Department's leaflet, "Protect Your Child in the Car" by ringing our road safety hotline (0800 234888).

A38(M) Birmingham

Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what recent investigations have been made into the safety of parapet rails on the A38(M) Aston expressway, Birmingham; by whom; at what cost; with what results; what are the existing rails constructed from; and when they were fitted, by whom, and at what cost;

(2) on what date work is due to start on replacing parapet rails on the A38(M) Aston expressway, Birmingham, how long the work is due to take; and on what date a press notice concerning interruption to traffic flow was issued;

(3) for what reason a contract to replace parapet rails on A38(M) Aston expressway, Birmingham; was negotiated with R. M. Douglas rather than the work being put out to tender; and at what price the contract was settled;

(4) from what materials replacement parapet rails are to be constructed for use on the A38(M) Aston expressway, Birmingham; and how many of such rails are estimated to need replacing;

(5) whether he will estimate the number of metre traffic cones to be used in connection with the replacement of parapet safety rails on the A38(M) Aston expressway, Birmingham;

(6) whether he will give the number of accidents, involving vehicles crashing through the parapet rails on the A38(M) Aston expressway, Birmingham, since its opening and where vehicles have fallen through the rails.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The A38(M) Aston expressway, Birmingham, is a local road for which Birmingham city council is the responsible highway authority. I have no detailed information about the council's investigations into the parapet rails or the work which it intends to carry out.

Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with West Midlands police about traffic management at junction 6, north and south on the M6, while parapet rails are replaced on the A38(M) Aston expressway; and whether there are plans to close motorway exits during this work.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: None. Birmingham city council is the responsible highway authority for the A38(M) and is the Department's agent for the M6 junction 6. It has made the necessary traffic management arrangements. There are no plans to close the motorway exits from M6 because of the council's work.

Fishing Industry (Light Dues)

Mr. Randall asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what discussions he had with representatives of the fishing industry about the new Government measure to introduce light dues for the fishing industry; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what estimates he has made of the cost to the British fishing industry of the Government's proposals for extending light dues to that industry; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what length fishing vessels will be affected by the Government's proposals for introducing light dues for the fishing industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: We will be putting proposals to representatives of the industry shortly. The Government will make an announcement in due course.

Mr. Randall asked the Secretary of State for Transport what estimates he has made of the impact of the Government's increases in light dues on the port of Hull; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The total amount of light dues that may be collected in a port over 12 months depends upon so many unpredictable factors that no estimates can usefully be made of the local effects of proposed changes in the dues tariff. But if the shipping traffic in Hull in 1987-88 is identical in all respects with that of 1986-87, and if the other variables are identical in both years, the total increase in light dues collected will be 13·85 per cent., that is the increase in the dues tariff.

BREL (Crewe)

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Transport if, when he next meets the chairman of British Rail, he will raise with him the future of British Rail Engineering Limited, Crewe, in relation to the possible mothballing of rolling stock; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: British Rail's rolling stock requirements are a management matter for the board.

Trains (Punctuality)

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will seek to place a statutory duty on British Rail to provide information on train punctuality and complaints to the Central Transport Consultative Committee and to the local committees.

Mr. David Mitchell: I see no reason to do so. British Rail and the Central Transport Consultative Committee reached an agreement about the supply of information towards the end of last year. The new arrangements should be given a chance to work.

Trunk Roads

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has concerning the total level of expenditure upon trunk roads in (a) the north-west region and (b) the south-east region in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Here is the information for the last five years:

	DTp Administrative Region
	North-west £ million	South-east £ million
1982-83	103	98
1983-84	89	151
1984-85	74	167
1985-86	63	141
†1986-87	86	100

† Planned.

It is possible to provide this information for earlier years only at disproportionate cost.

Car Ownership

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has concerning the level of domestic car ownership in (a) the north-west region and (b) the south-east region; and how that level compares with the figure for 10 years previously.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The proportion of households with cars in 1984-85 was (a) 54 per cent. in the north-west region and (b) 69 per cent. in the south-east region. The corresponding figures in 1974-75 were (a) 50 per cent. and (b) 59 per cent.

British Airways

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will make a further statement about the privatisation of British Airways.

Mr. Moore: Over a million applications for shares were received in the United Kingdom public offer which closed on 6 February. Applications for up to 100,000 shares amounted to 2·9 billion shares in total, and 5,000 applications at higher levels amounted to a further 4·9 billion shares. Clawback was triggered and accordingly the number of shares to satisfy public and employee applications was 341·4 million. I have decided that the basis of allocation will be as follows:

Shares applied for	Allocation
400–1,500	200
2,000–5,000	250
6,000–10,000	300
15,000–35,000	350
40,000–100,000	1 per cent. of amount applied for

The public directly will gain the biggest benefits from this sale. Over a million private investors will be able to add British Airways to their portfolios. The overwhelming majority of British Airways employees have also applied for shares. As a result, private investors and employees will hold 47 per cent. of the shares. The public will also benefit through institutions such as pension funds and insurance companies which will hold 36 per cent. Overseas investors will receive 17 per cent.

I am delighted that the public has placed such faith in this great British company, and that British Airways can look forward to the future with the support of a broad base of shareholders.

EMPLOYMENT

Hotels and Guest Houses (Insurance)

Mr. Greenway asked the Paymaster General if he has any plans to introduce legislation to provide for a higher level of insurance of residents' goods insured by hoteliers and guest houses; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The Government have no plans to introduce such legislation.

Jobcentres (Staffing)

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General whether there are any plans to cut staffing levels at jobcentres in (a) Bury, (b) Ramsbottom, (c) Prestwich and (d) Radcliffe employment office; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: Final plans for staffing levels of individual jobcentres in 1987-88 have not yet been made. Nationally, there will be an increase of over 400 staff, employed mainly in jobcentres, on programmes which cover the principal jobcentre activities, including helping long-term unemployed people through job clubs and the restart programme, between March 1987 and March 1988.

This national total has yet to be allocated to regions. When they receive their allocation, regional management will decide on the distribution of the staff within their regions.

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General (1) if he will give details of the numbers by which jobcentre staff are to be cut in each region of the United Kingdom;

(2) on what basis the planned cuts in jobcentre staff have been decided; and how they have been allocated between regions;

(3) when the proposed cuts in jobcentre staff will take effect.

Mr. Lee: Plans for the allocation of staff at national and regional level are prepared by programme rather than location.

Between March 1987 and March 1988, there will be an increase of over 400 staff employed mainly in jobcentres, on programmes which cover the principal jobcentre activities, including helping long-term unemployed people through job clubs and the restart programme. The national total has yet to be allocated to regions.

Job Clubs

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General whether there are any plans to allow job clubs to function on a full-time basis.

Mr. Lee: No. Job clubs usually run four half days per week. Occasionally the job club resource centre is available to members all day. There are also a number of "double" job clubs using the same premises mornings and afternoons, with separate groups of members.

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General what percentage of the increased numbers of job clubs currently planned will be run by jobcentres and by other organisations.

Mr. Lee: Of the planned 1,000 job clubs by 31 March 1987, it is proposed that 535 should be run by jobcentre staff and 465 by other organisations. Any further expansion beyond 1,000 would be through other organisations.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Cohen asked the Paymaster General if he will give a detailed breakdown by ward of the latest unemployment figures for (a) Kensington and (b) Leyton; and what percentage the figures in each ward and the totals represent of the total population in each constituency.

Mr. Lee: The following information is in the Library. The only source of information on the population in Parliamentary constituencies is the decennial census of population. The 1981 census identified populations of 68,097 and 78,430 respectively, present on census night in the Kensington and Leyton constituencies. Estimates of the current population are not available. The table shows the numbers of unemployed claimants on 11 December 1986 in each of the electoral wards in the Kensington and Leyton constituencies, together with the percentages and figures present of the total population resident in 1981 in each constituency.

Avondale	747	1·1
Campden	239	0·4
Colville	934	1·4
Golborne	885	1·3
Holland	448	0·7
Kelfield	454	0·7
Norland	209	0·3
Pembridge	521	0·8
Queen's Gate	377	0·6
St. Charles	582	0·9
TOTAL	5,396	7·9

Leyton constituency Electoral wards	Number of unemployed claimants	Percentage of population in 1981
Cann Hall	692	0·9
Cathall	985	1·3
Forest	711	0·9
Grove Green	635	0·8
Lea Bridge	594	0·8
Leyton	947	1·2
Leytonstone	815	1·0
TOTAL	5,379	6·9

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Paymaster General what information he has concerning the numbers of people unemployed in (a) the north-west region and (b) the south-east region in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and what percentage of the total work force in each of those regions these figures represent in each of those years.

Mr. Lee: The following information is in the Library. The table gives annual averages of the numbers of unemployed claimants excluding school leavers, adjusted for discontinuities, together with the corresponding unemployment rates calculated as a percentage of the working population for the south-east and north-west regions for each year since 1976.

	South East Region		North West Region
	Number of claimants	Unemployment percentage rate	Number of claimants	Unemployment percentage rate
1976	277,300	3·4	169,900	5·6
1977	291,800	3·5	176,600	5·8
1978	265,600	3·2	174,400	5·7
1979	226,600	2·7	165,600	5·4
1980	284,100	3·3	214,900	7·0
1981	492,500	5·7	324,800	10·7
1982	598,200	7·0	374,800	12·5
1983	646,800	7·7	408,000	13·6
1984	710,500	8·0	422,100	13·9
1985	747,500	8·2	430,800	13·9
1986	768,200	8·5	432,900	14·0

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Paymaster General what information he has concerning the numbers and percentages of the work force in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available who have been employed in (a) manufacturing industry and (b) service industries in (i) the north-west region and (ii) the south-east region.

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Paymaster General how many people have been employed in total in the north-west region in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; what percentage of the total work force in that region this figure represents; and how it compares with the figures in the south-east region in each of those years.

Mr. Lee: The tables give, for north-west region and south-east region, the civilian employed labour force (which is the sum of employees in employment and the self-employed), and the numbers of employees in employment in the industries specified at June each year from 1976 to 1986. These figures are also expressed as a percentage of the civilian working population (which is the sum of the civilian employed labour force and the unemployed) in each region. Estimates of the total numbers employed, broken down by industry within region, are not available as the self-employed statistics are not analysed in this way.

Table 1 Employment in North-West Region

Skill Shortages

Mr. Craigen asked the Paymaster General in which employment regions of the United Kingdom skill shortages have emerged; if he will quantify the number of unfilled vacancies arising from skill shortages; and in which industries.

Mr. Lee: Difficulties in recruiting skilled labour have been reported in all regions, particularly the south-east. There are no comprehensive figures available on the number of unfilled vacancies in the economy arising from skill shortages. A survey of vacancies held by jobcentres in April 1986 estimated that 5,535, or 3·3 per cent. of them, had remained unfilled for two months or more due to a lack of people with the relevant skills or expertise. Jobcentres are believed to handle about one third of vacancies.

Special Employment Programmes

Mr. Craigen asked the Paymaster General what is the number of people on special employment programmes in each of the employment regions of the United Kingdom; and what percentage of places relate to those regions.

Mr. Lee: The numbers of people participating in the community programme, the voluntary projects programme, community industry, and the enterprise allowance scheme in each region of the United Kingdom are:

Region	Participants	Percentage of total
South-East	25,591	7
London	28,356	8
South West	25,668	8
West Midlands	36,011	11
East Midlands	28,655	8

North-West	55,739	16
North-East	34,270	10
Wales	29,246	9
Scotland	42,075	12

In addition, 60,869 people are part participating in the job release scheme, the new workers scheme, the young workers scheme and the job-splitting scheme. This figure is not included in the table because regional information for these measures is not collected on the same basis.

Community Programme

Mr. Craigen asked the Paymaster General what is the number of 18 to 25-year-olds in each of the employment regions of the United Kingdom presently on the community programme; and what percentage of places relate to each of those regions.

Mr. Lee: It is not possible to give a breakdown of places in the form requested. However, during the 12 months ending the 12 December 1986, the latest date for which statistics are available, the total number of entrants to the community programme, together with the number and percentage of those aged 18 to 24 years in each of the Manpower Services Commission's regions are as shown in the table below.

	18 to 24 years	Percentage of Total	Total
South East	11,820	58·1	20,310
London	14,754	58·8	25,091

Liverpool Royal Institute

Mr. Terry Fields asked the Paymaster General what information he has as to the conditions relating to use by community project schemes attached to the sale of Liverpool royal institute to Liverpool Heritage Developments Ltd., formerly Dunebourne Ltd.

Mr. Lee: I understand that the building in question was sold by Liverpool university to Liverpool Heritage Developments Ltd., and that the deed of sale contains a requirement that the building will be used for community purposes.

Liverpool Heritage Developments Ltd.

Mr. Terry Fields asked the Paymaster General what is the value of past and current contracts between (a) the Manpower Services Commission, and (b) the Merseyside Task Force and Liverpool Heritage Developments Ltd., formerly Dunebourne Ltd.

Mr. Lee: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Manpower Services Commission Schemes

Mr. Hicks asked the Paymaster General (1) what is the cost of each Manpower Services Commission scheme and the numbers involved in (a) the south-west region and (b) Cornwall, respectively, in 1985-86 and 1986-87;

(2) for the Manpower Services Commission, YTS, adult training and community programmes, what is the total numbers involved since their inception for (a) England, (b) the south-west region and (c) Cornwall; and what are the available proportions who found permanent positions after taking part in these schemes.

Mr. Lee: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Sizewell Public Inquiry

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Paymaster General, further to his reply to the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey on 30 January, Official Report, column 422, concerning the report on the Sizewell public inquiry, if he will make it his policy to ensure that relevant information on resources and workload implications for the Health and Safety Executive is made available to hon. and right hon. Members before the report is debated in the House; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: I have nothing further to add to my previous reply to the hon. Member on 30 January at column 432.

Manufacturing Jobs

Mrs. Peacock asked the Paymaster General what was the net loss in manufacturing jobs in Yorkshire and Humberside in the years 1974 to 1986.

Mr. Lee: Between June 1974 and June 1986, there was a net decrease of 307,000 employees in employment in manufacturing industries in the Yorkshire and Humberside region.

Some of the decrease in the figures will be the result of the reclassification of jobs such as industrial cleaning, catering, computer services, and road haulage, previously done by manufacturers' own employees and now done by subcontractors. This developing feature of our economy has the effect of exaggerating the extent of the move from manufacturing to service sector employment.

Average Incomes

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Paymaster General what information he has concerning the level of average incomes in (a) the north-west region and (b) the south-east region in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available.

Mr. Lee: The information available relates to average gross weekly income of households as shown in the family expenditure surveys and is as follows:

	North West £	South East £
1976	76·53	90·98
1977	86·82	105·09
1978	98·59	118·33
1979	116·67	134·06
1980	139·10	171·37
1981	170·08	194·45
1982	169·53	198·83
1983[1] (a)	178·95	223·14
1983 (b)	176·63	221·86
1984	178·92	239·59
1985	187·31	255·86

[1] Under the housing benefit scheme introduced in stages from November 1982, some cash transactions were eliminated leading to a reduction in the level of cash income. For 1983 figures are given (a) covering the same transactions as in the earlier years and (b) on a cash transactions basis consistent with the years 1984 and 1985.

Note.—Gross income as defined in the family expenditure survey comprises cash income (eg from employment, investments, pensions and cash social security benefits) together with selected other benefits such as the imputed value of owner occupied accommodation and the value of luncheon vouchers. It does not cover most non-cash benefits such as free prescriptions or benefits in kind (eg free coal, company cars). Gross income will not reflect rent and rates rebates, except in so far as described in note 1 above.

Training

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Paymaster General if he will publish in the Official Report details of the divergence between predicted and actual expenditure in 1986 on each Manpower Services Commission programme area within the vocational educational and training group and the employment and enterprise group.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [pursuant to his reply, 5 February 1987, c. 761]: The Manpower Services Commission keeps records on the basis of the standard financial year for accounting for Government expenditure. The year runs from 1 April to 31 March.

The latest available figures cover the year ended 31 March 1986. In that year divergences on programmes were as follows:

	£ million
Vocational educational and training group
Youth Training Scheme	+17·1
Technical Vocation Educational Initiative	+0·6
Adult and Occupational Training	−15·4
Non-Advanced Further Education	−1·3
Employment and enterprise group
Employment Rehabilitation Centres	−1·9
Geographical Mobility Scheme	−1·2
Disabled Persons	−0·8
Enterprise Allowance Scheme	−7·2
Voluntary Project Programme	−1·1
Long-term Unemployed	−0·5

Overall, Manpower Services Commission cash expenditure in the year ended 31 March 1986 came to within £1 million of the cash limit of £1,562 million.

In addition the following divergencies occurred on agency programmes administered by the Manpower Services Commission on behalf of the Department of Employment:

	£ million
Sheltered Employment	−1·7
Community Industry	−0·9
Community Programme	−41·6

Small Firms

Mr. John Browne asked the Paymaster General what measures Her Majesty's Government have introduced since 1979 which directly assist the small firms sector.

Mr. Trippier [pursuant to his reply, 22 January 1987, c. 655-8]: I regret that my previous reply to my hon. Friend requires correction. Item 23 of the reply relates to a proposal that has not yet been implemented. There were a number of other inaccuracies that have been corrected. The correct text in full is as follows:

Our measures have concentrated on tackling the particular disadvantages faced by people setting up a new business or expanding an existing small firm.

Finance

The availability of finance to small firms has been improved by:

The loan guarantee scheme started in 1981, which aims to provide finance to viable businesses which fail to get commercial financial backing. Individual term loans up to £75,000 are made available for between two and seven years, with a Government guarantee on 70 per cent. of each loan. Small businesses in most sectors are eligible. The 1986 Budget extended the scheme for a further three years and reduced the cost to borrowers by halving the premium on loans.

The business expansion scheme, started in 1983, provides income tax relief on new equity investment in unquoted companies. The scheme was extended in the 1986 Budget and targeted better towards genuinely risky enterprises.

The venture capital scheme encourages the provision of finance by enabling individuals and investment companies to claim income or corporation tax relief on losses incurred on disposal of new shares issued by unquoted trading companies.

The enterprise allowance scheme, started in 1982, encourages unemployed people to start their own businesses. It pays an allowance of £40 per week for up to a year. More than 200,000 people have already started up businesses with the help of the scheme. There is now greater emphasis on business advice, counselling and training for people in EAS.

Premises

The small workshops scheme was designed to stimulate private sector investment in small industrial premises. From March 1980 to March 1983, a 100 per cent. initial building allowance was given for capital expenditure on the construction of workshops not exceeding 2,500 sq. ft. The scheme was extended for a further two years for premises not exceeding 1,250 sq. ft., and ended, as planned, in March 1985. Research indicates that the scheme led to a substantial increase in premises for small businesses.

English Industrial Estates Corporation has concentrated on providing premises for small businesses (up to 2,500 sq. ft.). Special rental and tenancy agreements have been devised to meet the needs of small businesses and entrepreneurs. EIEC works with a number of public sector agencies—the Department of Trade and Industry, the Development Commission, and universities. Similar programmes are undertaken by the Scottish and Welsh Development Agencies.

Training

The Manpower Services Commission has provided training courses for the self-employed and small businessmen since 1977, but since 1984 the volume and range of provision has greatly increased to give over 50,000 training places in 1986-87. For business start-ups there are the business enterprise and new enterprise programmes; for established business projects there are the private enterprise and management extension programmes; and for graduates there are the graduate enterprise programme, and the graduate gateway programme.

Government purchasing

The Government have improved small firms' access to information about purchasing departments, their procedures, requirements and points of contact. A Department of Employment booklet on "Tendering for Government Contracts" has been supplemented by some individual departments' own publications and information published on Prestel. Tendering and approval procedures have been simplified by exempting suppliers to most Government Departments from normal approval procedures for contracts under £10,000, allowing non-approved firms to tender for non-urgent contracts subject to subsequent approval, and regular reviews by Departments of tender lists to encourage new suppliers.

The Ministry of Defence launched in 1986 a small firms initiative to increase competitive opportunities for small firms. This includes the creation of the small firms advice division in the Procurement Executive to supervise the initiative, provide a focal point for developing MOD policy towards small firms, and provide advice and assistance to small firms; a small firms research initiative to enable small firms able to generate innovative products and processes cost effectively to obtain a larger share of MOD research funds; appointment of small firms representatives to the boards of MOD research and development establishments; steps to ensure all local MOD purchasing officers are keenly aware of the initiative; and plans to hold a conference or regional seminars to explain the initiative to small firms.

Innovation

The small firms merit award for research and technology — SMART — started in 1986, aims to encourage small firms and potential entrepreneurs to bring forward highly innovative ideas that cannot attract existing sources of funding. This competitive scheme is being run by the Department of Trade and Industry on a one-year trial basis in biotechnology and instrumentation.

Taxation

The ability of individuals to start businesses and develop them has been improved by a wide range of tax changes. Capital gains tax exemption limits have been increased to £6,300. Retirement reliefs have been extended to cover retirement at 60, retirement through ill health and disposal of shares in family holding companies of trading groups. Indexation has been improved and extended as have rollover reliefs. Reliefs have also been introduced to facilitate the incorporation of businesses, and losses on loans made for business purposes can now be offset against capital gains tax.

Significant changes to capital transfer tax were introduced between 1979 and 1985 to increase thresholds from £25,000 to £67,000 and increase rate bands. From 1981, only transfers within the preceding ten years were taken into account in assessing cumulative total CTT liability. In 1986, the charge on lifetime gifts was abolished and the tax renamed inheritance tax with the threshold increased to £71,000 with further increases in rate bands. These changes will further facilitate the transfer of a business from one generation to the next without the need to dilute assets to meet the consequent tax liability.

Income tax relief is available on personal borrowings raised to make investments in partnerships, close companies, co-operatives and employee buy-outs. Relief is also available for interest on loans to partners buying plant and machinery for use in their partnership business.

Losses incurred in any of the first four years of trading by a new business carried on by an individual can qualify for special income tax relief. This can be obtained against earnings during a three-year period before the new trade started.

Expenses incurred in the process of setting up a new business are now deductible from subsequent trading profits so long as the expenditure is undertaken in the three years prior to the start up.

Deregulation

Two White Papers "Building Businesses . . . Not Barriers" (Cmnd. 9794) and its predecessor "Lifting the Burden" (Cmnd. 9571) included detailed proposals for improvements in areas such as planning, VAT collection and employment law, and have generally aimed to simplify business dealings with Government. The enterprise and deregulation unit at the Department of Employment is co-ordinating action, for example in reviewing licensing and local legislative procedures, and a new system monitors the compliance costs of new regulations to business.

Planning authorities have been urged, through Department of Environment circulars, to approve applications for small business development, unless there are strong and specific objections. For example, Department of Environment circular 14/85 on development and employment reaffirmed the principle of presumption in favour of development, and urged planning authorities to have special regard to the needs of small firms and the self-employed.

Simpler and more flexible building regulations came into force in England and Wales in November 1985. Small detached buildings with floor area less than 30 square metres and with no sleeping accommodation are now exempt from control.

Measures have been introduced to ease the burden of employment protection legislation on employers, particularly small employers. A longer qualifying period is now required for unfair dismissal complaints.

Industrial tribunals are now required to take account of the size and administrative resources of a firm in deciding on the fairness or unfairness of a dismissal.

Changes to the maternity reinstatement provisions have included relieving firms with five or fewer employees from the obligation to reinstate an employee where it is not reasonably practical.

Redundancy rebates have been retained for firms employing fewer than 10 employees.

A number of changes have been made to health and safety regulations and procedures to ease burdens on small employers:

Giving specific training to Inspectors to increase awareness of small firms' interests.

Designating one of the Health and Safety Commission commissioners to represent small firms' interests.

A small firms working group sub-committee has been set up to consider new leaflets geared to small firms, ways of seeking out unregistered small firms, and the training of local authority health inspectors in the problems of small firms.

Information required from small companies has been reduced:

Under the Companies (Accounts) Regulations 1979 particulars of turnover are no longer required to be included where annual turnover is less than £1 million.

The Companies Act 1981 further reduces the amount of detailed financial information that small companies must file with the Registrar of Companies and simplifies the arrangements for approval of company names.

The Government have announced their intention of relaxing the rules governing the amount of information small companies are required to disclose in their accounts within the constraints of EC law and Inland Revenue needs. They also intend to extend the Companies Act definition of a small company to the maximum allowed under EC rules.

Advice

The small firms service has been greatly expanded and improved since 1979. The service provides advice and information to small firms. Particular developments have included more small firms centres and counselling teams, a factsheet system, and a computerised database. Since 1985, the service has concentrated on specialist counselling skills and supplementing the work of local enterprise agencies.

Encouragement has been given to the growth of local enterprise agencies, independent private sector-led organisations which provide help and advice to small firms. Full relief from corporation tax is given for business contributions (in cash or kind) to LEAs in the United Kingdom approved by the Government. A major five-year scheme of financial assistance started in 1986 aims to establish a network of viable self supporting agencies. Similar financial assistance has also been made available to LEAs in Scotland and Wales through, respectively, the Scottish Development Agency and the Welsh Development Agency.

The Council for Small Industries in Rural Areas provides rural small businesses with advice through 33 offices on local opportunities and conditions, business management, marketing and technical advice, skill training and financial services.

Outside consultancy advice is subsidised in the business and technical advisory services run by the Department of Trade and Industry which provides subsidised consultancy to small and medium-sized firms on productivity, design and quality assurance. BTAS was extended to include marketing from September 1986.

The business improvement services package of schemes, run by the Department of Trade and Industry, aims to help small firms in areas affected by job losses in particular industries—steel, textiles, shipbuilding, deep sea fisheries and tin-mining areas. Grants are available for consultancy advice on marketing, financial management, the application of computers and licensing in of products and processes, as well as for common services for groups of small firms and for investment projects.

Support in particular sectors

The Government sponsor the Co-operative Development Agency. Sponsorship of the CDA was extended in 1981 and 1984. The Co-operative Development Agency and Industrial Development Act 1984 provided additional funding, effectively extending the Agency's mandate for a further six years, and gave it limited additional powers.

The small engineering firms investment scheme operated in two phases to help small engineering firms to invest in certain types of advanced capital equipment. The scheme cost about £130 million.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Opposition Parties (Financial Assistance)

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Lord Privy Seal if he will set out in tabular form the amount of money paid to each political party in each year since 1979, under the terms of the resolution of the House relating to financial assistance to opposition parties.

Mr. Biffen: The total sums paid to qualifying Opposition parties by way of financial assistance for each calendar year since 1979 are as follows:

Financial assistance to Opposition parties

Table Office (Computerisation)

Mr. White asked the Lord Privy Seal what steps are being taken to purchase a computer to assist with the processing of early-day motions and questions in the Table Office; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Biffen: A user requirement for a system to handle both early day motions and the "ration" of oral parliamentary questions in the Table Office has been drawn up, and investigations as to the most appropriate link to the Library's POLIS (parliamentary on-line information system) are currently in progress. A detailed timetable for implementation will be drawn up as soon as these are complete.

THE ARTS

British Rail Pension Fund

Mr. Fisher asked the Minister for the Arts whether he has met the trustees of the British Rail pension fund to discuss the future availability for public exhibition of its art collection.

Mr. Luce: No. Items from the British Rail pension fund are already on long term loan for exhibition to public collections, including the Fitzwilliam museum, Cambridge, the Castle museum, Norwich, the Kelvingrove museum and art gallery, Glasgow, and several others.

SCOTLAND

Mental Patients

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will make a statement on Government policy on the care of mentally handicapped patients in hospitals and in the community in Scotland.

Mr. John MacKay: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Moray (Mr. Pollock) on 22 January at column 663.

Chiropodists

Mr. MacKenzie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will introduce legislation to make the registration of chropodists obligatory.

Mr. Rifkind: No. Discussion with the various bodies representing the chiropody profession failed to produce any clear consensus of opinion and, as my right hon. Friend the Minister for Health indicated in his reply of 15 May 1985 at column 161, the Government do not propose to introduce any legislation regarding the profession.

National Health Service Property (Sales)

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all surplus National Health Service property sold since 1979 in excess of £50,000, the price obtained and the date of sales by region and district.

Mr. John MacKay: I refer the hon. Member to the answers given to the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow (Dr. Godman) on 5 and 11 June 1986 (Vol. 98, at column 603 and Vol. 99, at column 204, respectively).

Receipts from sales in 1979-80 and 1980-81 amounted to £55,798 and £529,627 respectively.

Receipts for 1986-87 to date amount to £3,053,052.

Information about the selling price in individual cases is subject to the normal confidentiality between purchaser and seller in land transactions in Scotland.

Properties disposed of in 1986-87 to date are as follows:

NHS (Job Losses)

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the total job losses by category of worker since 1979 in the National Health Service by region and district.

Mr. John MacKay: Information in this form is not held centrally. The numbers of staff in post in each of the main NHS staff categories are included in Scottish Health Statistics for 1979 to 1985, copies of which are available in the Library.

Hospital Beds

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list district by district the number of beds in 1979 and the latest available year indicating the percentage increase or decrease.

Mr. John MacKay: I refer my reply to the hon. Member's question on the same subject on 4 February, Vol. 109, c. 710 which included the information now requested.

Accommodation Assistance

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to assist local authorities to provide accommodation for homeless and poorly housed single people below pensionable age.

Mr. Ancram: The Scottish Development Department has issued guidance to local authorities, in part 7 of the Scottish Housing Handbook, on design standards for hostels and other forms of housing for single people; and the 12·5 per cent. increase which we have authorised in capital investment on the housing revenue account block for 1987-88 will enable authorities which have this as a problem to do more for single people. I hope that local authorities will also look to the contribution which other providers in their areas, such as housing associations, can make to meeting the needs of single people.

Cervical Cancer

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the screening arrangements for the early detection of cervical cancer in each of the health board areas of Scotland and as to what consideration has been given to adopting the new cancer test developed by the charity Quest For A Test For Cancer.

Mr. John MacKay: My right hon. and learned Friend has received and is presently considering the report of a Scottish Health Service planning council working group which has been reviewing the cervical cytology service in Scotland.

We have no information about the test to which the hon. Member refers.

Disabled Children

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will publish in the Official Report the information available to him on the numbers of children under the age of 16 years in each local authority in Scotland who are disabled persons to whom section 12 of the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968 applies;

(2) if he will publish in the Official Report the information available to him on the numbers of children with records of their special educational needs in each education authority in Scotland; and what is his estimate, in each case, of the percentage of these children who are disabled persons to whom section 12 of the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968 applies.

Numbers of recorded pupils as at 31 December 1985

Education Authority	Number
Borders	131
Central	107
Dumfries and Galloway	66
Fife	124
Grampian	248
Highland	150
Lothian	244
Strathclyde	1,897
Tayside	89
Orkney	7
Shetland	7
Western Isles	25
TOTAL	3,095

While local authorities have a duty under the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Act 1970 to inform themselves of the numbers of chronically sick and disabled persons within their areas, they are not required to keep registers for the purpose. Information about the number of disabled children to whom section 12 of the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968 applies is not held centrally.

Grey Seals

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether his Department accepts the conclusions of the Natural Environment Research Council report, "Interactions Between Grey Seals and United Kingdom Fisheries," published in 1984; what research is currently being carried out on interactions between grey seals and fisheries by the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: The report itself suggests that the findings should be interpreted with caution because of the complex nature of the questions addressed, with consequent difficulty in arriving at firm conclusions. The Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland regards the report as contributing usefully to the fund of knowledge in this area. Research work now being undertaken by the Department includes studies into the diet of seals and the effectiveness of scaring devices.

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland by whom, and where, research projects funded by his Department on (a) the ecology of the grey seal or (b) interactions between grey seals and commercial fisheries, are being carried out; and over what period of time in each case.

Mr. John MacKay: The Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland is not currently funding research projects on the ecology of the grey seal.

The Department's scientists are carrying out a programme of research into the interaction between grey seals and commercial fisheries. In addition the Department is funding two research projects: a three-year contract with the university of Aberdeen, and a one year contract with the marine resources assessment group of the Imperial College of Science and Technology.

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the levels of expenditure for each of the last five years, including the current financial year, allocated by the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland for research into (a) the ecology of the grey seal and (b) interactions between the grey seal with commercial fisheries.

Mr. John MacKay: The levels of expenditure allocated by the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland for research into the interaction between grey seals and commercial fisheries for each of the last five years are as follows:

1983-84	1,755
1984-85	9,817
1985-86	34,260
[1]1986-87	78,250

[1] Estimated.

The Department has allocated no funds over the last five years for research specifically on the ecology of the grey seal.

Drug Misuser Groups

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what new arrangements he has made for the funding of voluntary injecting drug misuser groups; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: Health boards will assume responsibility with effect from 1 April 1987 for the support of local drug projects currently funded by the Scottish Home and Health Department. The detailed arrangements will be set out in a circular to be issued shortly.

Light Dues

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received from Scottish fishing organisations about the implications for the fishing fleet of the proposed extension to larger fishing vessels of liability to light dues.

Mr. John MacKay: My right hon. and learned Friend has received no representations on this matter. Any such proposals are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport.

Farmers (Bank Borrowings)

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will indicate the percentage increase in bank borrowings by Scottish farmers in the years 1979 to 1986 showing each year separately; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: Estimates of bank borrowings by Scottish farmers are based upon a survey of the major clearing banks undertaken by the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland in May each year. It is thought that a small part of the rise between 1983 and 1984 was the result of a change in classification procedure. The percentage changes are as follows:

	Percentage
1980	+34·9
1981	+20·2
1982	+6·4
1983	+11·5
1984	+11·7
1986	+9·9

Despite the disastrous weather conditions of 1985, the rise in borrowings recorded at May 1986 was lower than that seen in 1983 or 1984 and well below that for the years 1979 to 1982. This is partly due to the fact that the rate of inflation has been brought down to a much lower level. It is expected that the improved harvest of 1986 will result in a lower rate of increase in borrowings at May 1987. The Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland will continue to monitor these trends closely.

Disabled People

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he has taken any steps to prepare a list of authorised representatives as defined in section 1 of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what discussions he has had with interested parties on the need for laying orders to bring into force the provisions contained in the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he plans to implement in Scotland the provisions of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986; and if he will make a statement;

(4) if he has had any discussions with interested bodies with a view to securing names of persons with a specialised knowledge of the needs of disabled persons who can be co-opted to committees as defined in section 10 of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: As indicated in my reply to the hon. Member for Monklands, West (Mr. Clarke) on 4 December 1986 at column 793, my right hon. and learned Friend has proposed to implement certain provisions in the Act with relatively slight resource implications in the course of 1987-88. These are at present the subject of consultation with the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities. Depending on the outcome I hope that the necessary commencement order can be laid in the near future.

Early implementation of sections 1 and 2 is not proposed at present and it is not, in any case, for my right hon. and learned Friend to draw up lists of representatives for this purpose.

On appointments to bodies covered by section 10 of the Act, it is intended to hold discussions with the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities and other relevant interests at an early date.

Teacher Training

Mrs. McCurley asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he has reached decisions on the arrangements for intake to teacher training courses at Scottish colleges of education in session 1987-88; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: Provisional arrangements suggested in a discussion paper issued by the Scottish Education Department have been the subject of consultation with the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities, the General Teaching Council for Scotland and the Joint Committee of Colleges of Education in Scotland. In the light of views expressed by these bodies, comments from individual colleges of education and other organisations, and education authorities' estimates of their future secondary school staffing requirements, my right hon. and learned Friend has decided that the total numbers of students to be admitted to pre-service teacher training courses in session 1987-88 should be 650 to the primary BEd degree course, 300 to the primary postgraduate course, 185 to secondary specialist BEd degree courses and 405 to secondary postgraduate courses (on the basis that this last figure may be exceeded, if necessary, in order to admit any additional suitable applicants in mathematics, physics and technological education).

My right hon. and learned Friend is seeking the comments of the governing body of each college on the following proposed quotas within the overall levels mentioned:

College	Primary Intake		Secondary Intake
	Proposed quotas		Proposed quotas
	Proposed BEd degree course quotas	Proposed post-graduate course quotas	BEd degree (Specialist) courses[3]	Postgraduate courses

[1] College to be formed by merger of Aberdeen and Dundee Colleges of Education.
[2] College to be formed by merger of Moray House College of Education with Dunfermline College of Physical Education.
[3] Secondary specialist BEd Degree courses in physical education, technological education and music.

In regard to secondary intake, my right hon. and learned Friend is advising the colleges to give priority in session 1987-88 to students applying for admission to courses leading to a teaching qualification (secondary education) in mathematics, physics, business studies, chemistry, computing, technological education and religious education.

Neo-natal Deaths

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the number and rate per 1,000 live births of post neo-natal deaths by month of occurrence (a) from sudden infant death syndrome, (b) respiratory diseases, (c) congenital abnormality, (d) others and (e) total for Scotland (i) nationally and (ii) by health board for each month 1981 to the most recent available date.

Mr. John MacKay [pursuant to his reply, 4 February 1987]: Following are the figures readily available. A copy will be placed in the Library of the House.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Rates (Non-payment)

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many summonses he issued for non-payment of rates during the periods 1 January to 31 December 1985 and 1 January to 31 December 1986.

Mr. Needham: The Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland issued processes for the non-payment of rates as follows:

	Number
1985	43,000
1986	63,300

National Health Service Hospitals

Mr. Rogers asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many National Health Service hospitals have been opened in Northern Ireland; and what is the bed gain as a result of these openings, for each year since 1979.

Mr. Needham: Two Health Service hospitals have been opened in Northern Ireland since 1979, one in 1981 and one in 1985. There has been no bed gain as a result of the openings.

Mr. Rogers asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the numbers of staff employed by the National Health Service in Northern Ireland expressed as whole-time equivalents as well as actual full-time and part-time numbers.

Mr. Needham: At 31 December 1986, 47,870 whole-time equivalent staff were employed by the health and personal social services in Northern Ireland. The actual numbers of full-time and part-time staff were 36,570 and 27,766 respectively.

Mr. Rogers asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many National Health Service hospitals have been closed in Northern Ireland; and what is the total bed loss as a result of the closures, for each year since 1979.

Mr. Needham: The available information is as follows:

Number of Health Service hospitals closed

Year	Number
1979	Nil
1980	Nil
1981	2
1982	2
1983	1
1984	Nil

The services formerly provided at these hospitals have either transferred to new purpose-built accommodation or moved to more modern facilities on existing hospital sites. In 1979 the average total number of available hospital beds in Northern Ireland was 17,124 as compared with 16,595 in 1985—a bed reduction of 529.

Mr. Rogers asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the numbers of available beds in National Health Service hospitals in Northern Ireland for each year since 1979 expressed as totals and by specialty.

Mr. Needham: The information is as follows:

Average available beds in hospitals administered by the Health and Social Services Boards in Northern Ireland

Anglo-Irish Agreement

Mr. Flannery asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions he has had with the leaders of political parties in the Irish Republic about the future of the Anglo-Irish agreement.

Mr. Tom King: I have regular discussions about the Anglo-Irish agreement with the Government of the Irish Republic within the framework of the intergovernmental conference. I have not met the leaders of the other political parties in the Republic.

Housing

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the housing waiting list in the Province at the latest date.

Mr. Needham: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive, but I understand from the Executive that the total number on the Housing Executive's waiting list at 31 January 1987 was 23,429.

Appointments (Disabled People)

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to the reply to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe, on 21 January, Official Report, column 585, if he is satisfied that each of the bodies listed has appointed a person with knowledge of disability; if people so appointed are made known to organisations of and for people with disabilities in Northern Ireland; what is his estimate of the cost of informing himself as to whether these bodies are complying with the law; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: I am satisfied that all the appointments to the public bodies listed in the answer that my hon. Friend gave on 21 January have had due regard to the provisions of section 9 of the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons (NI) Act 1978. While there is no requirement that such appointments should be made known to organisations representing the disabled, information about the overall composition of the individual bodies is available. No detailed estimate of the cost has been made but I am satisfied that it would be disproportionate.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish in the Official Report the information available to him on the numbers of children with special educational needs in each education authority in Northern Ireland; and what is his estimate, in each case, of the percentage of these children who are persons to whom the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons (Northern Ireland) Act 1978 applies.

Dr. Mawhinney: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Handicapped Children

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish in the Official Report the information available to him on the numbers of children under the age of 16 years who are registered as handicapped in each health board in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: The information is not available in the form requested as there is no statutory requirement for health and social services boards to maintain "registers" of handicapped persons.

However, estimated figures for 1985[1] show the number of physically and mentally handicapped children under the age of 16, known to or in contact with the boards, as follows:

Physically Handicapped

Board	General Classes	Blind	Partially Sighted	Hearing Impaired	Mentally Handicapped

Northern	178	17	13	43	261

Northern Ireland	1,100	69	78	292	1,140

Education Expenditure

Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals he has for capital expenditure programmes in the education budget of his Department in 1987-88.

Dr. Mawhinney: A total of £46 million will be available for capital expenditure next year. This will provide for increased expenditure on minor works and equipment, especially in schools, and for the commencement of 28 major new capital projects with a total estimated cost of £26 million.

Cash Limits

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the cash limits for the Northern Ireland Office and for Northern Ireland Departmental Services for 1986-87.

Mr. Scott: Subject to parliamentary approval to the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for the Northern Ireland Office — class XVIII, vote 1 — for 1986-87 is being increased by £7,151,000 from £474,626,000 to £481,777,000 to cover increased requirements for expenditure on law, order, protective and miscellaneous services. The increase is mainly due to higher than previously anticipated levels of police and prison officers' overtime working, partly offset by savings arising from a slippage in the prisons capital works programme and a reduction in the average value of criminal injury and damage compensation claim settlements. Supplementary provision to cover the announced carry-forward allowed under the end-year flexibility scheme is not being sought by the Northern Ireland Office and so this enhancement to the cash limit is net of that amount. This increase is being offset fully by a decrease in the cash limit for Northern Ireland Departmental services NID 1 from £2,300·1 million to £2,293·0 million and does not therefore add to the total of public expenditure.

WALES

Improvement and Repair Grants

13. Mr. Grist asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give the number and value of improvement and repair grants in (a) Wales and (b) Cardiff since 1979-80.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Between April 1979 and September 1986, 45,059 improvement grants and 60,020 repair grants were paid in Wales, with a total value of some £153·5 million and £151·9 million respectively.

In Cardiff, there were 2,783 improvement grants and 7,234 repair grants, whose total values were £9 million and £19·9 million respectively.

Rhondda Valley

15. Mr. Rogers asked the Secretary of State for Wales when he next intends to visit the Rhondda valley.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: I have, at present, no firm plans to do so. My hon. Friends and I have made a number of visits to the Rhondda valley in recent years, and I was pleased to be able to be present at the launch of the Rhondda review last week.

Housing Starts

16. Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many housing starts were made in the Rhymney Valley, Mid-Glamorgan and Wales, respectively, in 1986.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The provisional figure for 1986 is 8,408 housing starts in Wales, of which there were 204 in the Rhymney valley and 1,125 in Mid Glamorgan.

Home Education

17. Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many children are being educated out of school and in the home in South Glamorgan; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 2 February.

Welsh Language

18. Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement about the future of the Welsh language and the progress he has made with a Welsh language development committee.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Agreement with the WJEC on the setting up of the committee, which was announced on 21 January, is an important step forward in our support for the Welsh language.

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he intends to publish in full all the responses he receives from his consultations with specified organisations in Wales concerning a new Welsh Language Act after the consultation period has ended on 31 March.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: I shall decide how best to make public the results of the consultation exercise in the light of the number and quality of responses received.

Cardiodiagnostic and Cardiac Surgery Unit

19. Dr. Roger Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received and from whom with regard to the setting up of a paediatric cardiodiagnostic and cardiac surgery unit in Wales.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Representations for the development of the existing paediatric cardiology and cardiac surgery facilities in Wales centred in Cardiff have been received from hon. Members, clinicians and members of the public. Funds have already been made available to South Glamorgan health authority for the appointment of a consultant paediatric cardiologist. Detailed planning of an enlarged cardiac regional service is under way, including as the first phase a paediatric cardiac unit.

YTS

20. Mr. Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many young people at the latest available date have obtained places on the YTS; and what is the latest available percentage rate for those who succeed in subsequently obtaining jobs.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: At the end of December 1986, 21,735 young people were undergoing YTS training in Wales. Fifty five per cent. of YTS leavers between April and July 1986 went into jobs, the highest proportion since the current surveys began in July 1985.

Rural Economy

21. Mr. Geraint Howells asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the present state of the rural economy in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The rural economy in Wales faces problems and challenges arising out of the urgent need to stem the costly production of surplus food. The Government are actively responding with a range of measures including the rural enterprise initiative which I launched last March and which intensified the scale and the range of support available. Further measures to encourage the alternative uses of agricultural land are being announced today by my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

Machynlleth (Hospitals)

22. Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for Wales when he will announce his decision upon the future of the Machynlleth chest hospital, and the Machynlleth and Corris district hospital, respectively; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The one-month period in which individuals or organisations may appeal to my right hon. Friend against the proposals of Powys health authority for future hospitals provision in Machynlleth expires on 28 February. Following that date careful consideration will be given to all of the views expressed, including those of the hon. Member. My right hon. Friend's decision will be announced as soon after that date as is possible.

NHS (Corporate Programme)

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on progress in developing a corporate programme for the National Health Service in Wales, following the publication of his Department's document "Policies and Priorities for Health Services in Wales".

Mr. Mark Robinson: Preparatory work on "A Corporate Management Programme for the Health Service in Wales" has been completed and a consultation document is to be issued today. The main aim of the programme is to detail the work which must be undertaken on an all-Wales basis, to improve the management of the NHS in the Principality to the benefit of patient care and to help authorities deal positively with the problems they face in common.

This is the first time that a planning document of this kind has been prepared for Wales. I believe it will have a very constructive influence on the way in which the NHS develops in the years to come. A copy of the consultation document is available in the Library of the House.

Water and Sewerage Facilities

Mr. Gwilym Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he is satisfied with the arrangements involving the Welsh water authority, local planning authorities and developers covering any potential damage to existing water supplies and sewage facilities arising from building developments on green field sites; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The statutory provisions and other consultation arrangements under which the Welsh water authority, the local planning authorities and developers negotiate planning consents provide a satisfactory framework for the general avoidance of damage to existing water supply and sewerage facilities. I am advised that generally the Welsh water authority has no difficulty in recovering the cost of repairing any damage caused by developers.

NHS Hospitals

Mr. Rogers asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many National Health Service hospitals have been closed in Wales: and what is the total bed loss as result of the closures for each year since 1979.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Nineteen NHS hospitals have been closed in Wales since 1979. It is not meaningful to compute changes in totals of bed numbers from hospital closures alone since the net overall change is a combination of hospital closures, new hospital openings and changes in existing hospital provision. However, the totals of the bed complements for the hospitals closed were:

1980	176
1981	201

	Numbers
1982	Nil
1983	76
1984	262
1985	162
1986	293

NHS Property

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list all closures of National Health Service property district by district since 1979.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Information on closures of all types of National Health Service property in Wales is not kept centrally. Records are kept of closures of NHS hospitals in Wales, of which the following have occurred since 1979:

Clwyd
- Prince Edward War Memorial
- Llangwfan
- Colwyn Bay Maternity
- Wrexham War Memorial

East Dyfed
- Cilmaenllwyd

Gwent
- Snatchwood
- Cefn Mably

- Galltysil

Mid Glamorgan
- Glyncarnel
- St Tydfils
- Blackmill
- Bridgend and District
- Cefn Hirgoed

West Glamorgan
- Llwyderw
- Dymma Hall

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list all surplus National Health Service property sold since 1979 in excess of £50,000, the price obtained and the date of sale; and if he will list these figures by region and district.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The information is given in the following table:

NHS Staff

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give the total of job losses by category of worker since 1979 in the National Health Service by region and district.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Such information as is held centrally relates to staff-in-post whole-time equivalents and is as set out in the following table:—

[1] Medical and dental figures for September 1986 are not yet available
[2] Adjusted to allow for reduction in nurses' working hours in 1980

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many people, or whole-time equivalents, are directly employed by the National Health Service in Wales in each district health authority area in each of the following categories (a) medical and dental, (b) nursing and midwifery, (c) professional and technical, (d) works professional, (e) maintenance, (f) administrative and clerical, (g) ambulance and (h) ancillary; and what are the corresponding figures for each year since 1977.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The required information is given in the following table:

Legislation

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many separate items of subordinate legislation affecting Wales were created in each parliamentary Session since 1979; of these, how many were made by his Department, and how many were made jointly with other Departments; and if he will list the items, indicating those which were debated on the Floor of the House or in Committee.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: I shall reply to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Handicapped Children

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report the information available to him on the numbers of children under the age of 16 years who are registered as handicapped in each local authority in Wales.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The required information is not available centrally.

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report the information available to him on the numbers of children with statements under the Education Act 1981 in each local education authority in Wales; and what is his estimate in each case of the percentage of these children who are persons to whom section 29 of the National Assistance Act 1948 applies.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The number of children with statements is as follows:—

Children with Statements as at January 1986

Local Education Authority	Number
Clwyd	1,227
Dyfed	408
Gwent	780
Gwynedd	692
Mid Glamorgan	3,401
Powys	180
South Glamorgan	1,200
West Glamorgan	1,858
WALES	9,746

It is not possible to estimate the percentage of these children who are persons to whom section 29 of the National Assistance Act 1948 applies.

Doctors

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what is (a) the number of general practitioners and (b) the number of general practitioners per 1,000 of the population in each Welsh health authority area; and what are the corresponding figures for each year since 1979.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Information relating to unrestricted principal general practitioners at 1 October each year is given in the following table:—

Health Care

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what preparation of public expenditure in Wales has been devoted to health care in each year since 1979.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Expenditure on health services as a percentage of the total expenditure is given in the following table:

	Percentage
1979-80	26·3
1980-81	28·5
1981-82	30·8
1982-83	31·4
1983-84	30·6
1984-85	32·7
1985-86	33·1
1986-87	32·7

NHS Expenditure

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the expenditure per head of the population on the National Health Service in Wales in each year since 1979 at current and outturn prices.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The information is set out in the following table:

	Adjusted to 1986-87 prices by GDP deflator £	Cash £
1979-80	165·79	276·22
1980-81	212·76	298·81
1981-82	242·72	310·40
1982-83	267·58	319·07
1983-84	283·92	324·10
1985-86	327·44	337·26

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what is the planned change of resource input into the National Health Service in Wales in real terms between 1986-87 and 1987-88, 1988-89 and 1989-90 both as a whole and in terms of (a) hospital services, (b) general practitioner services, (c) general dental services, (d) ophthalmic services and (e) pharmaceutical services.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The available information is as follows:

Percentage increase between 1986-87 and 1987-88 in real terms[1]

	Percentage
National Health Service	4·3
Hospital and Community Health Services	4·0
General Practitioner Services	5·2
General Dental Services	4·4
Ophthalmic Services	4·6
Pharmaceutical Services	4·9

[1] The 1987-88 provisions, which are subject to parliamentary approval, have been revalued to 1986-87 prices using the GDP deflator.

No decisions have yet been taken about the distribution of resources for the years beyond 1987-88.

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give figures for expenditure on the NHS in each health authority area in Wales in current and outturn prices for each year since 1979, showing the amount allocated to (a) hospital care, (b) general practitioner care and (c) other forms of expenditure.

Mr. Mark Robinson: I will write to the hon. Gentleman.

Spectacles

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many pairs of glasses were prescribed per 1,000 of the population in each Welsh health authority area in Wales during the last year for which figures are available; and what are the corresponding figures for each year since 1979.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The required information is given in the following table:

Persons supplied with lenses per 1,000 population

[1] Due to legislative changes in April 1985 subsidised NHS lenses were no longer available to adults in higher income groups.

Prescriptions

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many prescription items per person were prescribed in each Welsh health authority area during the last year for which figures are available; and what are the corresponding figures for each year since 1979.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The number of prescriptions issued per person on NHS prescribing and dispensing lists is given in the following table:

Family practitioner committee	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985

Doctors

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many general practitioner consultations there were per person in each of the Welsh health authority areas during the last year for which figures are available; and what are the corresponding figures for each year since 1979.

Mr. Mark Robinson: This information is not available centrally.

Patient Costs

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what was the average cost of treatment for each patient in each Welsh health authority area, and in Wales in general, in the last full year for which figures are available; and what are the corresponding figures for each year since 1979 at current and outturn prices;

(2) what has been the percentage change in the average cost of a course of hospital treatment under the National Health Service in Wales since 1979.

Mr. Mark Robinson: To average patient costs in the form requested does not allow for meaningful comparisons to be made. I would, however, refer the hon. Gentleman to the publications "Welsh Costing Returns" and "Key Statistical Indicators for NHS Management in Wales", copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Drugs

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the expenditure on drugs by each health authority in Wales in (a) the hospital service, (b) the general practitioner service and (c) other services, both at current and outturn prices since 1979.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The information is not available in the form requested. The following tables show (a) expenditure by health authorities on drugs for all purposes including hospital services and community health services and (b) payments made by family practitioner committees to pharmacists, general medical practitioners and general dental practitioners for the supply and dispensing of drugs.

b. Expenditure on the supply and dispensing of drugs by pharmacists, general medical practitioners and general dental practitioners. Services provided by Family Practitioner Committees

Notes:

1. Figures for 1985-86 are, at this stage, provisional.
2. Prior to 1982-83 the Dyfed area health authority covered the whole county.
3. From 1982-83 to 1984-85 the East Dyfed health authority was responsible for the Dyfed Family Practitioner Committee which covered the whole county.
4. From 1 April 1985 the responsibility for family practitioner services was transferred from health authorities to independent family practitioner committees.

Hospital Budget

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the increase, in percentage terms, of the total hospital budget of the National Health Service in Wales since 1979.

Mr. Mark Robinson: There is no centrally prescribed budget for hospital services in Wales, but the expenditure incurred by Welsh health authorities on such services between 1979-80 and 1985-86 increased by 89·1 per cent. at outturn prices.

DEFENCE

Precision Guided Munition System

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the United Kingdom's participation in plans for a precision guided munition system.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: United Kingdom participation in the 155 mm autonomous precision guided munition project is currently under consideration.

Phoenix Project

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the Phoenix project to come into service.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Phoenix is expected to enter service at the end of the decade.

Air Defence Systems

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about future air defence systems and expected in service dates.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: As I made clear in the RAF debate on 22 January at columns 1050-51, the RAF's air defence capability will greatly increase in three key areas during the next few years. One hundred and sixty-two of the air defence variant of the Tornado have been ordered, of which 39 have been delivered so far. Installation of the improved UKADGE system is continuing well and will be gradually brought into operation during the next few years. Six new transportable radars have now been delivered and preparation of new command and control systems is under way. We are buying the Boeing E-3A aircraft to provide the RAF with a modern and effective airborne early warning capability from the early 1990s.

DROPS

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence if, when the Multilift chainlift system procured by his Department in 1975 was trialled at the central ordnance depot at COD Bicester, it was invariably able to pick up its load on the parade ground there; and if he will make a statement

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Department has no record of how the Multilift equipment performed when it was demonstrated at a materials handling exhibition held at COD Bicester in 1975.

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence what specific trials objectives were set for the Multilift chainlift system procured in 1975; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The purpose of trials was to try out the chainlift system as part of the Army Department's examination of demountable body systems for the movement of bulk loads.

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence if his Department procured any other DROPS equipment from Multilift prior to the procurement of the Multilift chainlift equipment in 1975; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No bulk load lifting equipment was purchased from Multilift by the Army Department before 1975.

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence what was the relationship between the Multilift chainlift trials in 1975 and the study undertaken by the fighting vehicles research and development establishment in 1969; what subsequent studies, concept papers or other documents were produced on this subject; on what dates; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The trials of the Multilift chainlift equipment in 1975 were carried out as part of the Army Department's study of the possible military application of demountable body systems for the movement of bulkloads which had been recommended by the fighting vehicles research and development establishment's study report in 1969. The Department's study of logistics requirements, concepts of operating and load handling methods continued during the subsequent period, leading to the emergence of the DROPS concept in 1979-80 and the formulation of the general staff target in 1982. Papers were produced for the relevant departmental committees during that period as and when decisions were required.

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Multilift chainlift system purchased for trials in 1975 was expected to be capable of operating in rough terrain; whether Multilift represented the equipment as having such rough terrain capability; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No.

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence what was the purpose for which Multilift trials equipment was purchased in 1975; if the handling requirement was solely to pick up loads on hard and level ground; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The equipment was purchased to enable the Army Department to try out the chainlift system as part of its examination of demountable body systems for the movement of bulk loads. Its use for picking up loads on other than hard and level ground was not then envisaged.

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence what follow up there was to the fighting vehicles research and development establishment study in 1969 which initiated the DROPS concept; how long the gaps in development were; what were the reasons for such gaps; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The study by the fighting vehicles research and development establishment in 1969 did not initiate the DROPS concept as such. It recommended further study of the possible military application of demountable body systems for the movement of bulk loads. This further study, involving the consideration of logistics requirements, concepts of operating and load handling methods, was a continuing process during the 1970s leading to the emergence of the DROPS concept in 1979-80 and the formulation of the general staff target in 1982.

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence for which of the situations in which the Army would need to use a rough terrain demountable body system in the field the Multilift chainlift system trialled in 1975 was suitable and for which it was not suitable; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Multilift chainlift system tried out in 1975 would have been suitable for handling loads on level and firm ground in the field, but not on rough terrain. However, at that stage the use of such a system on rough terrain was not envisaged.

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence what lessons were learned from the trials of the Multilift chainlift system in 1975; how these lessons were reflected in the choice of the next generation of trials and trials equipment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The trials provided practical experience of the chainlift method of lifting bulk loads and thereby contributed to the development of the Army Department's thinking on the use of demountable body systems. The purpose of the next series of trials was to provide practical experience of the hooklift method.

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence what were the lessons learned from the 1975 trials of a Multilift chainlift system in relation to the suitability of such a system for DROPS use; what DROPS concept papers were produced as a result of those trials; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The trials provided practical experience of the chainlift method of lifting bulk loads and thereby contributed to the development of the Army Department's thinking on the use of demountable body systems. No DROPS concept papers were produced as a result of those trials.

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence how long precisely the trials of the 1975 Multilift chainlift equipment lasted; what were the dates and main conclusions of any trials reports produced; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Information on the precise duration of the trials is not now available, but they are thought to have lasted about seven months. No report was produced specifically on the trials of that equipment.

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will state the cost of the 1975 DROPS trials including the cost of the Multilift chainlift equipment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Information on the cost of the trials of the chainlift equipment purchased from Multilift in 1975 is not available. It would be contrary to normal practice to disclose the cost of the equipment.

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will state the total cost of the 1984-85 DROPS trials, including the cost of procuring the equipment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The total procurement costs of the trials equipment was some £4·6 million: intramural costs of the field and detailed engineering trials undertaken in BAOR and RARDE Chertsey respectively were part of the total activity costs of the establishments concerned.

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence by what administrative or management process his Department's DROPS programme was funded, authorised and carried out between the date identified as the start of the programme in 1969 and the date given for the first formal tasking in 1982; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The DROPS procurement programme started formally in 1982 with the establishment of the staff requirement. The exploratory and conceptual work undertaken by the Army's logistic and scientific staffs prior to this date was funded in the normal way from resources available to them for these purposes generally.

Cash Limits

Mrs. McCurley asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he proposes to make any changes to current defence cash limits for 1986-87.

Mr. Younger: Yes. The following changes are being made, subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary spring supplementary estimate.

£000s

Class 1	Current cash limit	Increase/ decrease	Revised cash limit
I. 1	7,082,974	[1] −6,009	7,076,965
I. 4	1,473,831	[2] +15,000	1,488,831
I. 5	430,345	[3] −15,000	415,345

[1] Reduced provision.
[2] Transferred from I. 5.
[3] Transferred from I. 4.

The decrease in provision mainly reflects savings in Falklands costs. Other changes allow for transfers within the Ministry of Defence cash limit block to reflect the expected pattern of expenditure and for a number of small inter-departmental transfers. The net effect of all these changes is a reduction in public expenditure of £7 million.

"Keeping the Peace"

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Defence how much it cost his Department to produce the film "Keeping the Peace"; where and to whom it will be shown; if he will place a transcript in the Library; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stanley: The production costs of the new public information film "Keeping the Peace" were approximately £130,000. In addition, some £51,000 will be spent on marketing and distribution. The film is designed to meet the ever-increasing needs of interested groups, including schools, for information on defence. It is available to anyone who wishes to borrow it. I have placed a copy of the transcript in the Library.

Defence Projects

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the answer of 4 February about notification of defence projects, if the National Audit Office was informed before 7 October 1986 of each defence project since 1983 which would have been included in the major project statement to the Public Accounts Committee but for consideration of national security where (a) the project definition exceeded £10 million or (b) the project cost has exceeded £250 million.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Yes.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is his practice about advising the Comptroller and Auditor General as to whether details of projects should be given to the Chairman of the Public Accounts Committee where his Department has informed the National Audit Office of defence projects which would have been included in the major project statement to the Public Accounts Committee but for considerations of national security.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is not for my right hon. Friend to advise the Comptroller and Auditor General, who has complete discretion in the discharge of his functions.

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the answer of 4 February, if he is able, without disproportionate effort, to give the number of projects whose expenditure falls within each band of £50 million, from £100 million to £250 million and in respect of which details have not been published on grounds of national security; and if he will name the projects where possible.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No. Details of projects, particularly those at the early stages of development, quite often constitute classified information and may not therefore be published, although this may change as the project progresses. It is not possible without disproportionate effort to establish the number of projects where details have not been published on grounds of national security.

Boeing AWACS

Mr. Wilkinson asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether the final installation and check out of the Boeing E-3A airborne early warning and control system aircraft for entry into service with the Royal Air Force will be conducted in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is for the company to decide where the Boeing E-3A installation and check-out work will be done, but in making that decision they will no doubt give careful consideration to the fact that carrying out the work in the United Kingdom will have advantages not only for the Royal Air Force but also for themselves in meeting their commitment to offset 130 per cent. of the value of the E-3A contract through work in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Wilkinson asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is his latest estimate of the value of work to be awarded to British companies involved in the introduction to service of the Boeing E-3A airborne early warning and control system aircraft.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The ultimate value of this work won by British companies subcontracting to Boeing will not be known for some years. However, my Department will be monitoring the value of the contracts as they are let.

Orbital Slots

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all orbital slots filed by his Department at the International Telecommunications Union.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No.

PRIME MINISTER

Alcohol

Mr. Colvin asked the Prime Minister what estimate can be made of annual consumer expenditure on alcoholic drink in the United Kingdom broken down by off-licences and on-licences.

The Prime Minister: Consumers' expenditure on alcoholic drink in the United Kingdom in 1985 was estimated to be £4,117 million through "off-licences" and £11,666 million through "on-licences". These estimates are published in the Central Statistical Office blue book, United Kingdom national accounts.

Nurses

Mr. Dobson asked the Prime Minister if she will set out in the Official Report details of the pension entitlements of nurses working in the National Health Service and the armed forces, respectively.

The Prime Minister: All nurses working full time in the National Health Service, and those part-timers working more than half time who opt to do so, contribute 6 per cent. of their remuneration for their pensions. These pensions depend on length of service, superannuable earnings and a variety of other factors which can be precisely determined only in relation to individual circumstances. In general, the main benefit is a pension payable on retirement at a minimum age of 55 for women nurses, and 60 for men, although it may be paid earlier following ill health retirement. The pension is generally $\frac{1}{80}$th of final pay for each year of service in the National Health Service, final pay being defined as the best year's pay out of the last three before retirement.

The armed forces' pension scheme is non-contributory. However, the relative value of the scheme benefits is taken into account by the armed forces pay review body in determining recommended rates of pay for the armed forces, and an appropriate deduction made from comparator earnings. That deduction is currently 10 per cent. Under the armed forces' pension scheme, retirement benefits, payable immediately on retirement, are awarded after 16 years service from age 21 for officers and 22 years service from age 18 for other ranks. The annual rate of pension is calculated from a representative rate of pay, for each rank, applicable at the date of retirement. The level of award increases with the number of years served up to a maximum of 34 years for officers and 37 years for other ranks, providing for a full career pension equivalent to half the corresponding rate of pay to be achieved at age 55.

Both the National Health Service superannuation scheme and the armed forces' pension scheme provide for the payment of a lump sum of up to three years' pension on retirement, dependants' pensions to widows and children, and gratuities following death in service.

Mr. Dobson asked the Prime Minister what is the average salary of each grade of nurse, including those without qualifications, in the National Health Service and the armed forces, respectively.

The Prime Minister: The information is as follows:

1. National Health Service—87 per cent. of NHS nursing and midwifery staff (excluding agency staff) are paid on the following salary scales:

Basic Salary Scales as from 1 July 1986

Grades	Minimum	Maximum
Nursing Sister II	8,070	10,800
Staff Nurse/Senior Enrolled Nurse	6,475	7,750
Enrolled Nurse	5,700	7,020
Nursing Auxiliary/Assistant —aged 18 and over (Unqualified Nurse)	4,265	5,525
Student Nurse	[1]4,325	[2]4,875

[2] Third year.

Note: The above scales are exclusive of special duty payments, overtime and other allowances and for nurses employed in London, London weighting.

2. Armed Forces—The basic pay rates for military nurses as from 1 July 1986 are:

Rank[1] (QARNNS)	SEN		SRN
	Daily £	Annual[2] £	Daily £	Annual[2] £
OR1—Probationer Naval Nurse	13·82	5,044	13·82	5,044
OR2—Naval Nurse (unqualified)	15·03-18·57	5,486-6,778	17·38-20·92	6,344-7,636
OR2—Naval Nurse (qualified)	17·38-20·92	6,344-7,636	19·89-23·43	7,260-8,552
OR4—Senior Naval Nurse	24·44-26·02	8,921-9,497	26·95-28·53	9,837-10,413

OR9—Fleet Chief Naval Nurse	—	—	39·96	14,585

[1] The rates given apply to equivalent ranks in all Nursing Services.
[2] Annual figures are based on daily rates and rounded to nearest pound.

Mr. Dobson asked the Prime Minister what information is available to her as to (a) the current nurse-patient ratio and (b) the ratio between qualified and unqualified nurses in (i) the National Health Service and (ii) the armed forces.

The Prime Minister: Manpower statistics covering staff working in hospitals (and also, for the National Health Service, in the community services) do not differentiate between types of activities within the hospital. Overall ratios of staff to patients would not take into account factors such as age of patients and types or complexity of treatment given. The information presented in the tables therefore is in terms of staff employed and patients treated; ratios have not been calculated.

General Notes to Tables:

The following factors should be borne in mind if comparisons are to be drawn between the information supplied for the NHS and the Armed Forces:

1. Differences in normal working week of nursing staff: 37·5 hours per week in the NHS, but 40 hours per week in the armed forces.
2. Differences in types of patients treated: NHS hospitals treat patients from the acute, geriatric, mental illness, mental handicap and maternity sectors; whereas Service hospitals cover acute and maternity patients.
3. Differences in staffing policies; armed forces hospitals are necessarily staffed in order to meet their war role requirements.

Pay Increases

Mr. Dobson asked the Prime Minister if she will publish in the Official Report a table showing the average respective pay increases, deflated by the retail price index, for each year since 1979 for (a) nurses, (b) fire-fighters, (c) policemen/policewomen and (d) teachers; and if she will give the accumulative increase for each group over that period.

The Prime Minister: The information requested is set out in the table.

Increase in pay rates 1979-86

Pay round year (1 August to 31 July)	Nurses percentage increases		Firemen percentage increases		Police percentage increases		Teachers percentage increases
	cash	real	cash	real	cash	real	cash	real
1979-80	37·9	18·0	20·0	2·7	13·5	(2·9)	20·95	3·5
1980-81	6·0	(4·4)	18·8	7·1	21·3	9·4	19·7	7·9
1981-82	—	—	10·1	1·3	13·2	4·1	6·0	(2·5)
1982-83	[1]12·3	(0·9)	7·5	3·2	10·3	5·9	4·98	0·7
1983-84	7·5	2·9	7·8	3·2	8·4	3·7	5·1	0·6
1984-85	8·6	1·6	7·2	0·3	5·13	(1·7)	8·5	1·5
1985-86	7·8	5·3	7·2	4·7	7·5	5·0	5·73	3·3
Cumulative	106·6	23·0	109·0	24·5	110·6	25·4	94·2	15·7

Notes:

1. Figures reflect increases in pay rates, not changes in average earnings.
2. Percentage cash increase for each group reflects full year effect of increases agreed within the pay round year (1 August to 31 July).
3. Percentage real increase for each group reflects the percentage cash increase for the pay round year deflated by the increase in the retail price index throughout the pay round year i.e. in the 12 months to July.
4. Figures in brackets indicate real reductions.
5. The figures above exclude pay changes subsequent to 31 July 1986. Police pay rates were increased by 7·5 per cent. with effect from 1 September 1986; firefighters' pay by 7 per cent. from 7 November 1986. The Government has also announced changes in school teachers pay which would increase their pay by 8·2 per cent. from 1 January 1987 and a further 8·2 per cent. from 1 October 1987.

[1] Two-year award paid wholly in 1982-83 pay round year. (Comprising 7·5 per cent. from 1 April 1982 and 4·5 per cent. from 1 April 1983).

Accommodation (Public Servants)

Mr. Dobson asked the Prime Minister how many units of accommodation are provided for (a) firefighters, (b) policemen-policewomen and (c) nurses both in absolute terms and relative to the number of employees in each group; what types of accommodation are provided for each of the three groups; and what is the average annual monthly cost and rent per unit of accommodation provided to each group expressed both in absolute terms and relative to the average monthly salary for each group.

The Prime Minister: The total stock of police quarters in England and Wales at the end of 1986 was 16,573 and the total number of police officers at the end of November 1986 was 121,132, so police accommodation was available for nearly 14 per cent. of officers. Information is not held centrally about the types, or the average monthly cost, of the accommodation provided.

Information is not held centrally about the amount, types and average monthly cost of accommodation provided to firefighters by fire authorities.

Information about the number of nurses provided with accommodation is not collected centrally. However, a study in 1983 suggested that 64,000 or about 14 per cent. of all nurses in England then lived in health authority accommodation. Lodging charges which are set nationally each year reflect the full economic cost of accommodation and services provided. Student and pupil nurses occupying the simplest type of accommodation receive an automatic abatement of 40 per cent.

Draught-Proofing

Dr. David Clark asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on the division of responsibilities between the Department of Health and Social Security, the Department of the Environment and the Department of Energy on Government policy towards the replacement of single payments for draught-proofing.

The Prime Minister: The present system of single payments for draught-proofing is the responsibility of the Department of Health and Social Security. The Department of the Environment and the Department of Energy, as well as other Departments, have related interests in measures to improve energy efficiency in the home. Future arrangements for financial assistance with draught-proofing measures are under consideration within Government at present.

Children's Play

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Prime Minister whether she has established any joint initiatives between the Department of the Environment and (a) the Department of Education and Science or (b) the Department of Health and Social Security on children's play; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: Following consultation between the Departments of Environment, Health and Social Security, Education and Science, the Welsh Office, Scottish Office and Northern Ireland Office, the Government in 1983 supported the establishment of Play Board for the promotion and development of children's play. Since then Play Board has received £700,000 each year from the Department of the Environment, £50,000 each year since 1984 from the Welsh Office, and £33,000 each year since 1985 from Northern Ireland Office, to support its work.

Last year the Department of the Environment, in consultation with other interested Departments, reviewed Play Board's operation. As a result the Government have proposed that Play Board's role and functions should be merged with those of the Sports Council so as to use the mechanism of that major established body, and its expertise, i.e. raising private sector funds, for the more effective promotion and development of children's play. Negotiations between the two bodies concerned to effect the merger are under way.

ENVIRONMENT

Canary Wharf

Mr. Mikardo asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will call in the planning application for the section of the Canary Wharf scheme outside the Isle of Dogs enterprise zone.

Mr. Waldegrave: No. My right hon. Friend issued his decision not to call in the planning application on 26 January.

Town and Country Planning

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he proposes to publish his recommendations regarding the Town and Country Planning Use Classes Order.

Mr. Waldegrave: We are considering the responses to the consultation paper which we published in June last year setting out our proposals to modernise the order. We are not yet ready to make any announcement.

Photochemical Oxidants Review Group

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the findings of the photochemical oxidants review group.

Mr. Waldegrave: I expect to publish the first report of the photochemical oxidants review group shortly.

Atmospheric Effects Review Group

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the findings of the atmospheric effects review group.

Mr. Waldegrave: I expect to publish the first report of the atmospheric effects review group shortly.

Acid Rain and Tree Damage

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to ensure funding for the Institute for Terrestrial Ecology's early diagnosis project on acid rain and tree damage in the light of the Ecology Commission's decision to offer only 25 per cent. funding.

Mr. Waldegrave: My officials, along with those from the Natural Environment Research Council, are investigating the decision by the Commission of the European Communities on funding for the second phase of the early diagnosis of forest decline project under the fourth environment action research programme. When the implications of the decision have been fully analysed, the Secretary of State for Education and Science and I will consider what further action may be necessary.

Water Pollution

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received concerning pollution in the north west (a) in rivers, (b) in canals and (c) on beaches.

Mr. Waldegrave: I am aware of pollution problems in the north-west and have received a number of representations. Large reductions in the quality of rivers and canals were reported in the 1985 river quality survey and my Department will be discussing with the north-west water authority measures to bring about improvements. However, through the Mersey basin campaign, the biggest initiative of its kind in western Europe, work is already under way to improve some of the most polluted rivers in the north-west—at a cost of £2·5 billion over 25 years.

In regard to beaches, I announced on 3 February that 362 more waters are to be included within the scope of the bathing water directive. Thirty of these are within the north-west water authority's area. Our aim is for all these waters to meet the directive's standards although inevitably this will take a number of years.

Less Prosperous Regions

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he intends to take to seek to amend the planning process so as to encourage investment in development in the less prosperous regions of Britain.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Government has taken a range of measures to improve the efficiency of the planning system and to facilitate development in areas where it is needed. These are summarised in the White Paper "Building Businesses . . . not Barriers" (Cmnd 9794) published in May 1986. Action since then includes legislation to set up simplified planning zones, and the decision to set up four new urban development corporations, in Greater Manchester, in the black country, on Teeside and in Tyne and Wear. In the 1987-88 allocations of derelict land grant 92 per cent. is for expenditure in the northern and midland regions.

Animal Snares

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy towards a total ban on animal snares; what research has been carried into humane alternatives to snares as a method of pest control; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Government have no plans at present to prohibit the use of snares. When used correctly they can be an effective means of keeping the populations of certain species in check. Research to date has not revealed any practicable alternatives.

Anti-Apartheid Group

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Environment on what basis permission for a demonstration in Trafalgar square by the City of London Anti-Apartheid Group on 14 March 1987 has been refused by his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: Permission has been refused because it is not appropriate on public safety grounds for such demonstrations to take place while Nelson's column is being cleaned.

Park Vista, Greenwich

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from English Heritage concerning the development of the site at Park Vista, Greenwich; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: None. However, the Historic Buildings and Monuments Commission (English Heritage), who are the Secretary of State's advisers on listed building matters, are to be consulted about the listed building consent application that has been submitted by the London borough of Greenwich in connection with the listed walls around the site. The application is currently before my right hon. Friend for decision, and in these circumstances it would not be appropriate for me to make a statement.

Radiation

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what present discussions his Department is having as to possible sites to be used for the disposal of radioactive waste.

Mr. Waldegrave: Responsibility for indentifying possible sites for the disposal of radioactive waste rests in the first instance with NIREX. My Department has discussions with NIREX and other Government Departments as necessary on issues of common interest, in pursuit of the Government's published policy on radioactive waste disposal.

Deep Mining (Environmental Effects)

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will consider setting up a study to report into the effects of deep mining on the water table and the subsequent effect on trees;

(2) what representations he has so far received about the effects of deep mining on the water table and the subsequent effect on trees;

(3) if the Government have funded any research into the effects of deep mining on the water table and the subsequent effect on trees.

Mr. Waldegrave: No specific research into the effects of deep mining on the water table and the subsequent effect on trees has been sponsored by the Government. Only one representation has been received on this subject, from Kenilworth town council. So far the Department has received no evidence which would justify setting up a study or funding research on the subject.

Automobile Emissions

Mr. Thornton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if his Department has considered an application for an exhibition relating to automobile emissions control by Catalyst to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall.

Mr. Waldegrave: I understand that, under procedures agreed by the Services Committee, arrangemens have been made with the authorities of the House for the exhibition to be held in the Upper Waiting Hall during the week beginning 23 March.

Houses (Radon Levels)

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his statement on 27 January, Official Report, column 189, concerning radon levels in houses, what funds are available in the current year for remedial building work on any dwelling identified as having a radon level (a) well above the higher action level and (b) above the higher action level; what funds will be available for such work during 1987-88; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: As I indicated on 27 January, no decisions can be taken on the allocation of funds for remedial work until the work in hand on establishing the extent of the problem and the most effective remedial measures for dealing with it has been completed.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his statement on 27 January, Official Report, columns 189-90, concerning radon levels in houses, what number of houses in Somerset is to be included in the further survey announced; whether any parts of Somerset are areas where a measurement service will be provided at no cost to those concerned; what arrangements have been made for distribution in Somerset of his Department's leaflet; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: I shall answer this question shortly.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information is available to his Department concerning any dwellings in Cornwall where advice has been given that a dwelling is unsafe for a pregnant woman due to naturally occurring radioactivity, either from radon gas or from other sources; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave [pursuant to his reply, 6 February 1987]: My right hon. Friend is not aware of any such advice having been given. However, in 1971, officials of the Department recommended to the landlords of a property sited at an old uranium mine in Cornwall that they should seek further advice from the Department if the tenancy of the property were likely to fall to a young family. This was a precautionary step because background radiation and the radioactive content of drinking water and home-grown vegetables had been found to be above normal for the United Kingdom. The levels were far below the values accepted for the continuous exposure of persons working with radioactive materials so no immediate action was considered necessary.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, further to his statement on 27 January, Official Report, column 189-90, concerning radon levels in houses, if he has any plans to offer further guidance on the advisability of a pregnant women residing in a house where the annual dose from radon exceeds the 20 milliSievert action level; what is the level of risk to a foetus or unborn child associated with such a level of exposure; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave [pursuant to his reply, 6 February 1987]: There is no need for special advice on radon to pregnant women. The radiation dose from radon comes predominantly from the solid decay products of radon, which, if breathed in, can be deposited on the surface of the lungs and so increase the risk of lung cancer. Doses of radiation from radon and its decay products to all other tissues of the body, including the foetus, are very much smaller. The risk of childhood malignancy from exposure in utero at the action level of a 20 milliSievert per year effective dose equivalent to the mother has been estimated by the National Radiological Protection Board to be approximately seven in one million.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, further to his statement on 27 January, Official Report, column 189-90, concerning radon levels in houses, what are the terms under which the Government intend to offer financial assistance to owner-occupiers; what are the proposed limits of such financial assistance; when such assistance will first be available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave [pursuant to his reply, 6 February 1987]: No decisions can be taken on financial assistance until the Building Research Establishment has completed the work on remedial measures announced on 27 January.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, further to his statement on 27 January, Official Report, column 189-90, concerning radon levels in houses, what estimates are available to his Department of the likely total costs of remedial building relating to the 20 milliSievert action level for (a) owner-occupiers in Cornwall and (b) local authorities in Cornwall; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave [pursuant to his reply, 6 February 1987]: As I indicated in my statement to the House on 27 January 1987, further research work is now required to establish the extent of the problem and the most effective remedical measures for dealing with it. It is not therefore possible at this stage to estimate the total costs of remedial works.

National Parks

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had with the Countryside Commission on access to land owned by the Newton Towers estate in the North York Moors national park which was granted under the Bransdale Moor scheme as an offset against capital transfer tax.

Mr. Waldegrave: None. It is for the Inland Revenue, acting on the advice of the relevant statutory agency, to agree appropriate management conditions with owners of qualifying land before conditional exemption from capital transfer tax is granted.

Sports Council

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he is satisfied with the workings of the Sports Council; if the Government have plans to increase the finances; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: My right hon. Friend is satisfied that the work of the Sports Council represents good value for money. The level of grant in aid will be discussed with the council later this year in the light of its corporate plan.

Flooding

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if there are plans to assist local authorities following recent flooding of council dwellings; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: It is for local authorities to determine their priorities for expenditure from within the resources available to them. Council rents should be set at levels which provide adequate funds for repairs and maintenance, including works made necessary by severe weather.

Housing Costs

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what evidence he has about any relationship between the cost of housing and restrictions on the supply of housing.

Mr. John Patten: None.

Derelict Land Grant

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the outcome of the meeting with Saxon Developments on Friday 6 February to discuss the application for a derelict land grant in respect of the Queslett site, Birmingham.

Mr. John Patten: I understand that the purpose of the meeting held on Friday, 6 February was to try to resolve the many complex issues in this case. It was not expected to produce a decision on the outstanding derelict land grant application. I will let the hon. Gentleman know the result of that decision in due course and I will write to him when I have a report of last Friday's meeting.

Household Formation

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the factors affecting rates of household formation; and how these vary in respect of regional household projections.

Mr. John Patten: The factors that influence household formation include the number of adults and their ages; marriages, and divorces; preferences for living independently; incomes; and the supply and cost of housing. The adult population and their marital status are taken into account explicitly in regional household projections. Regional differences in other factors are taken into account implicitly by the use in the projections of past trends in headship rates.

Football Clubs

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the latest position with regard to the possible introduction of a membership card scheme for Football League clubs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Home Affairs and I will meet representatives of the Football League and the Football Association on 23 February to discuss this issue and other matters covered by the league's report on hooliganism submitted to me on 18 November 1986.

Local Authority Finance

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list in the Official Report the local authorities which have received flow-back in the current financial year; and if he will state how much in each case.

Mr. Chope: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 13 January his firm intentions for the first supplementary report 1986-87.

This report will distribute £618 million grant currently available for recycling and will honour the guarantee given by my right hon. Friend's predecessor that at least £500 million would be available at first supplementary report. It will be made as soon as the Local Government Finance Bill receives Royal Assent. Individual authority figures are as follows.

Note: Authorities in receipt of 100 per cent. grant or out of grant do not receive recycled grant.

Children's Play

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if his Department has assessed what examples from abroad of good practice in providing children's play facilities might usefully be introduced in England and Wales;

(2) what guidance his Department has given to local authorities on how best to design houses and gardens and to plan housing estates in order to enable children to play imaginatively and in safety;

(3) what recent discussions he has had with voluntary children's play organisations; what initiatives he has taken to support the work of voluntary children's play organisations (a) in urban programme areas and (b) in non-urban programme areas; and if he will make a statement;

(4) what initiatives his Department has taken to support local authorities' provision of children's play facilities (a) in urban programme areas and (b) in non-urban programme areas;

(5) if he will make a statement about his Department's responsibilities towards children's play; and what initiatives he has taken since April 1983 to seek to improve children's play facilities.

Mr. Tracey: The provision of children's play facilities and support for local voluntary organisations concerned with play are primarily matters for local authorities who are best placed to assess the appropriate level of provision and support against local needs and priorities. It would be for them to consider what useful lessons might be learned from abroad. Nevertheless, the Government are concerned to assist with the provision of better play facilities and support a number of national voluntary organisations concerned wholly or partly with the promotion and development of children's play. Since 1983, Play Board has received £700,000 each year from the Department. Other organisations, including the Pre-School Playgroups Association, the National Out of School Alliance and the National Playbus Association, receive support from the Departments of Health and Social Security, and Education and Science. The Sports Council supports schemes and projects of benefit to children and adults alike and will be given grant-in-aid totalling £37 million next year. In addition, the Department provided about £10 million worth of support in the last financial year through the urban programme for play-related schemes developed and run by local authorities and voluntary organisations. Local authorities outside the urban programme benefit from the work of the national voluntary organisations supported by the Government and from a general recreation element in their rate support grants.

Over recent months I have had discussions with the National Playing Fields Association, the National Play Advisory Committee, Play Board and the Sports Council about the future development of children's play and I have corresponded with a number of other interested organisations and individuals.

The Department has issued guidance on children's play facilities to local authorities in the past including a circular, a comprehensive design bulletin and a paper on children's playgrounds.

Lancaster House

Mr. George Robertson asked the Secretary of State for the Environment who authorised the use of Lancaster house by Mr. Le Pen, Member of the European Parliament and others; what it is to be used for; if it is available for booking by other Members of the European Parliament and hon. and right hon. Members of this House; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: Lancaster house is used mainly for purposes of Government hospitality and, less frequently, for conferences. The rule governing use of the building under successive Governments is that a Minister must be involved in meetings there. The European Parliament has arranged meetings from time to time, and a booking had been taken from it for later this month for an unspecified purpose. That booking has now been cancelled because it does not satisfy the rule.

Fuel Consumption

Mr. Rost asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage increase in fabric heat loss would be permitted by the disapplication to industrial and storage buildings of the provisions for the conservation of fuel and power in the Building Regulations (England and Wales), assuming the same levels of heating are maintained as are currently experienced, and assuming a single skin construction.

Mr. John Patten: A single skin sheet steel can have an insulation value (μ value) of 6·5 compared with the present requirement of 0·7 for industrial and storage buildings where the space heating system has output of over 25 watts per square metre. A single skin lightweight block wall might have a μ value of 0·5. In practice it would be for those commissioning such buildings to decide on the appropriate construction and level of insulation they required.

Rates

Mr. Peter Shore asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many ratepayers there are in each of the following boroughs: Brent, Camden, Hackney, Haringey, Islington, Lambeth, Lewisham, Southwark and Tower Hamlets; how many of these pay no rates at all; and how many are partially rate rebated.

Mr. Chope: I shall answer this question shortly.

Housing Costs

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has concerning the average price of a three bedroomed house in (a) the north-west region and (b) the south-east region in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available.

Mr. Tracey: I regret that the information is not available in the form requested. Annual average house prices in each region, based on a survey of building society mortgages, appear in table 10.11*(a)* of "Housing and Construction Statistics 1975-1985", a copy of which is available in the Library.

Home Ownership

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has concerning the level of home ownership in (a) the north-west region and (b) the south-east region in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available.

Mr. Tracey: The available information is as follows:

Estimated Stock of Owner-Occupied Dwellings

End of Year	North West		South East
	Thousand	Percentage of all dwellings	Thousand	Percentage of all dwellings
1976	1,391	58·0	3,462	55·5
1977	1,410	58·4	3,529	55·8
1978	1,429	58·8	3,609	56·3
1979	1,449	59·2	3,693	57·0
1980	1,476	60·0	3,795	58·0
1981	1,503	60·8	3,890	58·9
1982	1,545	62·2	4,013	60·2
1983	1,584	63·5	4,139	61·5
1984	1,611	64·2	4,262	62·6
1985	1,637	65·0	4,380	63·7

Note Although numbers are expressed to the nearest thousand they should not be regarded as accurate to the last digit.

Homelessness

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has concerning levels of homelessness in the north-west region and the south-east region in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Tracey: The number of households whom local authorities accepted responsibility to accommodate under the homelessness legislation is shown in the table:

Number of Acceptances

Year	North West (000)	South East (000)
1978	5·7	23·3
1980	6·6	28·3
1981	7·1	31·6
1982	7·8	33·6
1984	9·6	38·1
1985	10·9	41·8
1986[1]	9·6	34·6

[1] 9 months.

The legislation was introduced in December 1977; information prior to 1978 is not comparable.

Urban Development Corporations

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of total spending until 1990, by each financial year, on urban development corporations; and how much of that money is attributable to reductions in rate support grant settlement.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to his reply, 6 February 1987]: Total planned spending by urban development corporations for each financial year until 1990 is set out in the recently published public expenditure White Paper (Cmnd. 56-II, table 3.10.10). There is no relationship between spending by urban development corporations and changes in rate support grants to local authorities.

Docklands

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his latest estimate for the total yearly spending of public money in (a) London docklands and (b) Liverpool docklands.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to his reply, 6 February 1987]: The annual public expenditure outturn figures for the London Docklands Development Corporation and for the Merseyside Development Corporation are set out in the following table:

£ million

	LDDC	MDC
1981-82	31·5	6·7
1982-83	41·3	20·5
1983-84	62·4	32·0
1984-85	58·6	29·7
1985-86	56·7	28·9
1986-87[1]	62·7	27·7
1987-88[2]	82·8	28·7

SOCIAL SERVICES

Organ Transplants

Mr. Beaumont-Dark asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, for each of the last 10 years, how many organ transplants have been carried out; if he will indicate in each case the organ or organs involved; what information he has as to how many of the recipients of these transplated organs are still alive; and what is his estimate of the cost to the National Health Service of each type of organ transplant.

Mrs. Currie: According to information provided by the United Kingdom transplant service, the number of cadaveric kidneys, heart, heart/lung and liver transplant operations performed in the United Kingdom during 1986 were at record levels. Figures for the last 10 years 1977-86 were as follows:

	Cadaveric Kidney	Heart	Heart/Lung	Lung	Liver
1977	779	—	—	—	—
1978	941	—	—	—	—
1979	842	3	—	—	6
1980	988	25	—	—	5
1981	905	24	—	—	11
1982	1,070	36	—	—	21
1983	1,144	53	1	—	20
1984	1,443	116	10	—	51
1985	1,334	137	37	—	88
1986	[1]1,488	175	51	3	127

[1] As notified to date. Late notifications may necessitate minor revisions.

The total number of corneal grafts performed is not recorded centrally, although it has been estimated that presently about 1,200 operations are carried out each year.

Statistics on patient survival are as follows:

	Organ transplants performed	Number of recipients surviving on 31 December 1986
Hearts	569	375
Hearts/lungs	99	60
Lungs	3	3

Comparable figures are not available for kidney and liver transplantation. However, we are informed by the European Dialysis and Transplant Association that, from the 13,575 kidney transplants performed since the 1950s and up to 31 December 1985, 5,773 were still alive with a functioning graft on that date. Others were still alive but undergoing different treatment by the numbers are not known precisely.

It should be noted that there is no correlation between graft survival and patient survival with respect to kidney transplantation.

For information on the cost of kidney transplants I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to the hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras (Mr. Dobson) on 17 December at column 571.

Comprehensive figures are not available on the costs of heart transplants, but our best estimate puts the cost at about £15,000 in the year of operation, and around £3,000 per annum in subsequent years. Details of costs at two centres can be found in research report No. 12 published by the Department in 1985 under the title "Costs and Benefits of the Heart Transplant Programme at Harefield and Papworth Hospitals". A copy of this report is in the Library. No reliable costings are available for heart/lung, lung, and liver transplants.

Hepatitis

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the incidence of hepatitis in the population; if it varies by age; and what is the practice of the blood transfusion service regarding donations from possible sufferers.

Mrs. Currie: Laboratory reports of acute clinical hepatitis B indicate annual total cases of between 1,000 and 1,200 from 1975 to 1983, about 2,000 in 1984, and declining to approximately 1,300 in 1986. Almost three quarters of cases have been male and, among patients of both sexes, about three quarters have been young adults. The disease remains uncommon among children and the elderly.

Regional transfusion directors have clinical responsibility for the acceptance of blood donors. The national blood transfusion service does not collect blood from those believed to be at risk of infection and all potential donors are asked whether they have recently had jaundice. All donations are tested for hepatitis B antigen.

AIDS

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has as to which European Economic Community countries test blood for the HIV (human immuno-deficiency) virus.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what consideration he has given to disseminating his Department's information on AIDS in ethnic minority languages and through the ethnic minority media.

Mr. Newton: We are urgently considering how best to ensure that essential information about AIDS reaches people from the ethnic minorities, particularly those who have difficulty reading and understanding English, in ways that are sensitive to the needs of each community. On 5 February, I attended a meeting with representatives of the ethnic minority press. The Department will consider carefully all the views expressed in devising a strategy for carrying forward this important aspect of our public information campaign.

Benefits

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will express the current real value of (a) invalidity benefit and (b) attendance allowance compared with their values before the entry into force of section 1 of the Social Security Act 1980 which abolished the link with the rise in average earnings; how many people are currently in receipt of each benefit; and what have been the savings to his Department on each of these benefits in each year since the act came into force.

Mr. Major: Comparisons of the current rates of invalidity benefit and attendance allowance with the rates obtaining in November 1979 are as follows:

	November 1979 rates	November 1979 rates increased in line with prices to July 1986	July 1986 rates
Invalidity benefit	23·30	37·71	38·70
Attendance allowance:
Lower rate	12·40	20·06	20·65
Higher rate	18·60	30·09	30·95

The latest estimated figures for the number of people receiving these benefits are:

Invalidity benefit—849,000 at March 1985
Attendance allowance—585,000 at March 1986

It is not possible to isolate the effect of section 1 of the Social Security Act 1980 from a variety of other changes which have affected total expenditure on these benefits.

Disabled People

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will request Sir Roy Griffiths to seek evidence from organisations of and for people with disabilities in his overview of community care policy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: I understand that Sir Roy Griffiths will be reading, visiting and meeting widely in the course of his overview. I am sure that this will include paying careful attention to the views of organisations of and for disabled people.

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to the reply to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe on 16 January, Official Report, column 348, if a severe disability premium will be payable to a person who has someone living with him to care for him who is ineligible for invalid care allowance on account of (a) receipt of an overlapping benefit such as retirement pension or (b) earnings of more than £12 a week; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: I shall let the right hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if, pursuant to the reply to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe on 27 January, Official Report, column 226, he will list those authorities which made no arrangements for the provision to disabled people of (a) telephones, (b) aids to daily living or (c) adaptations in the last year for which information is available; if he is satisfied that not one disabled person in those authorities needed the particular service; and if he will make a further statement.

Mr. Major: I shall let the right hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he proposes to implement the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: I am unable to add to my reply to the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire (Mr. Kirkwood) and the hon. Member for Caernarfon (Mr. Wigley), on 26 November 1986 at column 289. I plan to meet the local authority associations on 24 February to discuss issues relating to the implementation of the Act.

Dialysis

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will take steps to extend attendance allowance to people undergoing dialysis in hospital but without any assistance from National Health Service staff; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: We are currently considering this matter and I will write to the right hon. Member as soon as a decision is reached.

Alternative Care

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the main findings of the research on the costs of alternative forms of National Health Service care conducted for his Department by the institute of health economics at York university; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: The centre for health economics at York university has published findings on "The Costs of Alternative Forms of NHS Care for Mentally Handicapped People" in discussion paper number 7, (1985, centre for health economics, York university), a copy of which is available in the Library. It would be inappropriate to list the recommendations in isolation from the context of the report and the reservations documented by the authors.

It is important that health and local authorities, in planning their services, take account of the costs of various options for residential care open to them. The centre for health economics has started further work on the costs of alternative forms of non-National Health Service care. We expect the results and the methods from both projects to be of help to authorities in doing their own costings.

NHS Staffing

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the total job losses by category of worker since 1979 in the National Health Service by region and district.

Mr. Newton: The table shows the staffing position for England, by main staff group, at 30 September 1979 and 30 September 1985, and the changes (in both whole-time equivalent and percentage terms) in staff in post between those two dates.

[1] Figures are independently rounded to the nearest one hundred whole-time equivalents and therefore the sum of individual components may not agree with the total. Percentage changes have been calculated on unrounded figures.

[3] Includes agency staff. Figures not adjusted for the effect of the reduction in nurses' working hours during 1980 (from 40 to 37·5 hours per week).

[4] On 1 April 1984, Operating Department Assistants (approximate 2,600 whole-time equivalents staff) transferred from the Ancillary to the Professional and Technical "B" Staffs Council. These figures will reflect this change.

NHS (Closures)

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list all closures of National Health Service property, district by district, since 1979.

Mrs. Currie: We keep a central record of hospitals approved for closure, and I refer the hon. Member to the reply given him by my hon. Friend the Minister for Health on 24 November 1986 at columns 143-46. We do not keep central records of hospital closures. Nor do we keep central records of closures of other National Health Services property and to obtain this information would incur disproportionate cost.

Hospital Beds

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list district by district the number of beds in 1979 and for the latest available year indicating the percentage increase or decrease.

Mrs. Currie: For the numbers of available beds I refer the hon. Member to my reply to him on 3 February at columns 587-596. The remaining information requested is given in the table. Between 1979 and 1985, in England, the number of in-patient cases treated increased by 17·7 per cent. from 5,400,120 to 6,353,812.

NHS (Property Sales)

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list whether planning permission was sought in each case of sale of surplus National Health Service property identified in his answer of 23 January, Official Report, column 801; and, where it was so sought, whether it was granted prior to each sale.

Mrs. Currie: Detailed information about individual transactions is not routinely collected or held centrally. The detailed information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Health authorities are instructed that, where the district valuer advises that the sale proceeds will be enhanced by the obtaining of planning permission, they should make such an application under the Town and Country Planning Act 1984.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services in the case of every sale of a hospital or land as listed in the answer in the Official Report, on 23 January, column 801, whether the sale was advertised; and what was the district valuer's estimate of the value of the hospital or land in each case.

Mrs. Currie: Detailed information about individual transactions is not routinely collected or held centrally. The detailed information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many nurses have been displaced from National Health Service accommodation as a result of the sale of such property in each district health authority.

Mr. Newton: Although information in the precise form requested is not collected centrally, we are not aware of any National Health Service employee being required, in connection with the rationalisation of property holdings to move from his or her existing accommodation without being offered a suitable alternative place to live.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if, pursuant to his answer of 23 January, Official Report, column 801, on land sales, he will give a breakdown of the location in each case by district health authorities.

Mrs. Currie: Information on land sales is not routinely collected on a district basis and the information now requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

NHS Statistics

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the number of people permanently sick in each of the Welsh health authority areas, the proportion of the population which they represent, and the corresponding figures for each year since 1979.

Mr. Lyell: I regret the information in the form requested is not available. The number of people in Wales in receipt of benefit for long-term incapacity could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mental Hospitals

Mr. Robin Cook asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish the number of long-stay patients currently in residence in each mental hospital.

Mrs. Currie: I regret this information is not at present collected centrally. Statistics on resident patients by length of stay will become available following the introduction of new information systems in the National Health Service later this year.

Soya Milk

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to his reply of 3 November 1986, Official Report, column 363, regarding soya milk, what is the source of the advice that cows' milk is nutritionally better than soya milk as a source of energy, protein, calcium and other minerals, and certain vitamins essential for the growth of a healthy child.

Mrs. Currie: The advice is given by the Committee on Medical Aspects of Food Policy in its report "Present-Day Practice in Infant Feeding 1980". I understand that a further report expected later this year repeats this advice.

Corporal Punishment

Mr. Key asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps he proposes to take to abolish corporal punishment in institutions which fall within the responsibility of his Department and local social service departments, in the light of the provisions relating to corporal punishment in the Education (No. 2) Act 1986.

Mrs. Currie: Regulations governing the conduct of local authority community homes, and of voluntary children's homes which are registered with the Secretary of State for Social Services, are currently being revised. The revised regulations will incorporate a provision prohibiting the use of corporal punishment in these establishments.

Severe Weather Payments

Mr. Blair asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many persons have received exceptionally severe weather payments in the northern region over the last month in each of the categories entitled to such payments; and what was the amount of money paid to each category.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested. However, statistics are being maintained on the total number of payments made, the amount of those payments and the number of refusals and will be published in due course.

Mr. Blair asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how much has been spent by his Department on advertising the availability of exceptionally severe weather payments in (a) the northern region and (b) the whole of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Major: Advertisements were placed in the national press for two weeks ending on Saturday 24 January 1987 and for five days on all 45 local commercial radio stations. The total cost was £400,000. £19,971 was spent on local radio advertising in the social security north-east and north-west regions. All local offices dealing with supplementary benefit were supplied with advertisements for placing in local newspapers.

Mr. Blair asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give an estimate of the numbers of persons in the northern region in each category of those entitled to exceptionally severe weather payments.

Mr. Major: The information requested is not available, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Heating Allowance

Mr. Robert Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will now ensure that local officers of the Department of Health and Social Security publicise a weekly notice in local newspapers about whether the previous week has been a qualifying week for claiming the special £5 heating allowance.

Mr. Major: Local offices have been directed to publish advertisements in their local newspapers whenever a qualifying average temperature of 0 deg C is triggered. They have done so for each week of exceptionally cold weather in their area during 1987.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many letters he has received from hon. Members and others about the problem of pensioners who have £500 in savings for their funeral expenses and therefore do not qualify for the £5 heating allowance.

Mr. Major: Numerous letters have been received on this issue.

NHS (Expenditure)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) whether he will place in the Library tables showing total revenue expenditure and capital expenditure in each health district from 1982-83 (a) in cash terms, (b) 1982-83 prices, using the gross domestic product deflator and (c) at 1982-83 prices, using the National Health Service pay and prices/National Health Service capital deflator;

(2) whether he will place in the Library tables showing total revenue expenditure and capital expenditure in each National Health Service region in each year from 1974-75 (a) in cash terms, (b) at 1974-75 prices using gross domestic product deflator and (c) at 1974-75 prices using National Health Service pay and prices/National Health Service capital deflator.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Patient Records

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps he is taking to encourage the computerisation of hospital accident and emergency department records, with a view to improving knowledge of the epidemiology of road accidents and priorities for remedial action, both locally and nationally.

Mrs. Currie: Central funding has been provided for the development of a comprehensive package for accident and emergency departments. It is for authorities to decide whether they wish to join the consortium of potential users which already exists. Some regional health authorities are building such packages on accident and emergency facilities into the patient administration systems. It is for authorities to decide which approach best meets their own strategic requirements.

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has received the report of his Department's regional auditor upon the computerisation of patient records in the north-west region; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: The auditor's report on the procurement and development of computer systems by the North Western regional health authority, one of which was the patient administration system for the region, was submitted to my right hon. Friend in February 1986.

The authority was asked by the Department's director of audit to consider the report and produce a plan of action for dealing with the shortcomings revealed. The authority responded with detailed proposals which, together with the corrective action it had already taken, met many of the auditor's criticisms. We have asked the authority to reconsider its response on some specific points, particularly in relation to tendering and contract procedures, and its response to these is awaited.

Birth Statistics

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the prevalence of cerebral palsy at age three years among children born with birth weights (a) under 1,500 g (b) 1,500 to 2,499 g and (c) 2,500 g and over to residents of England and Wales in each National Health Service region in the most recent year for which information is available.

Mrs. Currie: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member the information he seeks. It is not held centrally.

Draught-proofing

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many representations he has received and from whom, on the subject of the abolition of single payments for draught-proofing.

Mr. Major: A number of representations have been received from hon. Members and organisations involved in local draught-proofing schemes.

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he plans to meet with the charity Neighbourhood Energy Action to discuss the proposals they have submitted to him on a grant to replace single payments for draught-proofing.

Mr. Major: I have written to Neighbourhood Energy Action and six other organisations offering a meeting with officials in the first instance to discuss a range of issues connected with helping people keep warm in winter. I have made clear my willingness to meet the organisations after that preliminary discussion.

Mr. and Mrs. Donoghue

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when the hon. Member for Walthamstow can expect to receive a full reply to his letters of 4 April, 23 April, 18 June, 25 June, 1 July, 1 August, 22 August, 29 September and 20 November 1986 about the claim to attendance allowance of Mr. and Mrs. Donoghue of 17 Park court, Grosvenor park road, London E17.

Mr. Lyell: My predecessor the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State replied to the hon. Member's letters of 4 April 1986 and 23 April 1986 and on 8 May 1986.

The hon. Member's constituent has made separate claims for mobility allowance and attendance allowance, his claim for mobility allowance having been adjudicated upon on 13 January 1987. I will write to the hon. Member in detail very shortly.

Benefit Office (Dispute)

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps he is taking to resolve the current dispute in the benefit office in Caerphilly, Mid Glamorgan; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lyell: The dispute at Caerphilly has involved some 40 members of the Civil and Public Services Association who have been on strike since mid-December. The office has continued to pay benefits and has maintained some daily facilities for public callers.

Throughout the dispute local management have met frequently with representatives of the strikers in attempts to settle the issue. Talks have also been held with the union at regional level.

Management have recently made an offer which they consider to be a fair and reasonable basis for bringing the strike to an end. The union has discussed the offer with its Caerphilly members and have subsequently asked for further talks with regional management.

Handicapped Children

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report the information available to him on the numbers of children under the age of 16 years who are registered as handicapped in each local authority in England.

Mrs. Currie: Information on the numbers of persons registered as handicapped is collected centrally every three to four years and the latest complete data are found in the Department's publications, "Registered Blind and Partially Sighted Persons at 31 March 1982" (A/F82/7), "Registers of the Deaf and Hard of Hearing at 31 March 1983" (A/F83/20) and "Registers of Physically Disabled Persons at 31 March 1984" (A/F84/19), copies of which have been placed in the Library.

Information about the sensorily impaired groups as at 31 March 1986 is currently being collected. This information is not yet complete, but the available data about persons under 16 are given in the table.

Registration may not be a reliable guide to the numbers of persons handicapped as registration is voluntary, registers may not always be amended to reflect migration or deaths and people with multiple handicaps may be on more than one register.

Data are not collected centrally on the numbers of persons registered as mentally handicapped.

Maternity Payments

Mr. Redmond asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Don Valley claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Don Valley are expected to qualify each year for a maternity payment from the social fund after April.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Don valley constituency is covered by the Department's offices at Doncaster East, Doncaster West and Mexborough, although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The number of claims received for maternity grant in each of the three offices during the calendar year 1986 were as follows:

	Number
Doncaster East	1,585
Doncaster West	2,072
Mexborough	482

It is not possible to predict how many women in the constituency will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Houghton and Washington claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Houghton and Washington are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

It is not possible to predict how many women in Wrexham will qualify for statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance from April 1987. However, it is estimated that in total some 230,000 women will qualify for statutory maternity pay and 84,000 for maternity allowance in 1987-88.

Mr. Allen McKay asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Barnsley, West and Penistone constituency received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available; and what is his estimate of the number of women in Barnsley, West and Penistone constituency who are expected to receive statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 724 claims to maternity allowance were made at Barnsley West, the Department's office which covers the constituency although the boundaries are not conterminous.

It is not possible to predict how many women in Barnsley, West and Penistone will qualify for statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance from April 1987. However, it is estimated that in total some 230,000 women will qualify for statutory maternity pay and 84,000 for maternity allowance in 1987-88.

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Glasgow, Maryhill claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Glasgow, Maryhill constituency is covered by the Department's offices at Glasgow City, Springburn and Maryhill although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The numbers of claims received for maternity grant in each of the three offices during the calendar year of 1986 were as follows:

	Number
Glasgow City	485
Springburn	927
Maryhill	1,103

It is not possible to predict how many women in the constituency will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (i) how many women in Glasgow, Maryhill received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available and (ii) how many women in Glasgow, Maryhill are expected to receive statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 744 claims to maternity allowance were made at Springburn, 261 at City and 892 at Maryhill the Department's offices which cover the constituency although the boundaries are not conterminous.

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people are in receipt of supplementary benefit; how this compares with 1976; and how benefit rates compare with 1976 in real and money terms.

Mr. Lyell: I refer my hon. Friend to table 34.30 of "Social Security Statistics" 1986 for information about the number of supplementary benefit recipients; and to tables 5.6 and 5.7 of the "Abstract of Statistics for Index of Retail Prices, Average Earnings, Social Security Benefits and Contributions" August 1986 for information on the real and cash value of supplementary benefit rates. Copies of both publications are in the Library.

Casepaper Location

Mr. Lilley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what progress has been made in implementing the casepaper location project.

Mr. Lyell: The casepaper location system is being introduced to most local supplementary benefit offices on a rolling programme of installation. As at 30 January 1987, 382 offices out of a possible 440 had received the equipment.

Abortions

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, if he will give a breakdown of the different grounds for which abortions were performed in England and Wales in each of the last five years for which figures are available on: (a) resident and (b) non-resident women, stating how many of those abortions on such women were performed at nought to 19 weeks' gestation, 20 weeks, 21 weeks, 22 weeks, 23 weeks, 24 weeks, 25 weeks, 26 weeks, 27 weeks and 28 weeks or more, stating in each case: (i) the age of the mother, (ii) the marital status of the mother, (iii) the category or premises, (iv) the number of children previously liveborn to the mother, (v) the abortion technique used and (vi) whether the abortion was a National Health Service abortion carried out in a non-National Health Service centre under agency arrangements.

Mr. Newton: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Mortgage Interest Payments

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if the new rules for mortgage payments for the unemployed will apply to job training scheme trainees who do not find employment following the end of their training; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: The main change contained in the Supplementary Benefit (Housing Requirements and Resources) Amendment Regulations 1987 (SI 1987 No. 17)—to limit to 50 per cent. the amount included for mortgage interest in the supplementary benefit assessment of people under 60—only applies for the first 16 weeks on benefit. Subject to any other changes in circumstances, trainees on the job training scheme will receive the same income by way of training allowance and supplementary benefit while on the course as they received previously in benefit alone. Those who do not find work after training and whose circumstances are unchanged will normally get the same rate of benefit that they received before starting the course.

Leukaemia

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services why the report by the Office of Population, Censuses and Surveys on the alleged link between leukaemia and nuclear power stations has still not been published and when he now expects to publish it.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to the reply, 3 February 1987, c. 586]: The report is a statistical study to provide better data about cancer incidence and mortality in the vicinity of nuclear installations in England and Wales 1959-80. It is expected to be published in March-April 1987 by the Office of Population, Censuses and Surveys in its series of studies of medical and population subjects. The data assembled in the study will be published in the report as an extensive series of tables or will be available on microfiche. My right hon. Friend will be asking the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment to examine the implications of the data in this report; its advice to him will be published in due course.

Single Payments (Birmingham)

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how long appeals against decisions relating to claims for single payments in Birmingham are taking to be dealt with compared to the period before the change in the regulations;

(2) how many appeals are being received each month in Birmingham against decisions relating to single payments for those on supplementary benefit; and how this compares to the period before the change in the regulations.

Mr. Lyell: I have been asked to reply.

I regret the information is not available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Written Answers to Questions

Tuesday 10 February 1987

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

State Security

Mr. McNamara asked the Attorney-General when his attention was first drawn to the article on Skynet in the 15 February 1985 edition of "Interspace".

The Solicitor-General: The Government became aware of this article on its publication.

TRANSPORT

A36 (Consultants Report)

Mr. Colvin asked the Secretary of State for Transport when the report of the consultant engineers on the A36 trunk road through West Wellow will be completed; and whether its contents will be made public.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We are considering the consultants' report, which we received recently. In accordance with our normal practice, it is not proposed to publish the report. I shall make an announcement as soon as I can.

Traffic Clubs

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the traffic club currently in operation in the Greater London area and its future funding.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The traffic club operating in Greater London is a part of the research and intelligence unit, which is run by the London Residuary Body as an agency service on behalf of the London boroughs. I understand that the future of the unit is currently the subject of discussion by the boroughs.

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the contribution which the extension of national traffic clubs could make in regard to safety of young children.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Limited experience of traffic clubs in this country makes it impossible to assess what effect a national traffic club might have on child safety on the roads. There are some indications that in Scandinavia, where traffic clubs have been operating for longer, they have contributed with other factors to reductions in child pedestrian casualties.

Motorways (Lane Closures)

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the day miles of motorway lane closures in each of the last 15 years; and if he will express the lane closures as percentages of the total motorway mileage for each year.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: This information is not available. The length of lane closure varies from day to day and hour to hour. It is impracticable to keep a comprehensive record of the changing pattern.

We expect work on about 5 per cent. of the network each year. Before the past six years, work was done on about 3 per cent. Within the next four years, we expect to eliminate the backlog.

Roads (Assessment Committee)

Mr. Ground asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will make a statement about the future of the Standing Advisory Committee on Trunk Roads Assessment.

Mr. Moore: The Standing Advisory Committee on Trunk Roads Assessment was set up in 1978 following the report of the Leitch committee. It produced a valuable report last year on the appraisal of urban road improvements. An independent committee, smaller in size, can continue to play an important role in the development of assessment methods. I have reconstituted the committee with Mr. Derek Wood, QC, as chairman. The other members will be Dr. P. Goodwin, Mr. A. E. Naylor, Mr. R. H. Stewart and Mr. H. J. Wootton. These appointments are for two years.

ENVIRONMENT

Small Businesses (Tenure)

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to seek to amend the provisions of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 regarding the security of tenure afforded to small businesses whose leases are in the names of the proprietors of the company trading from the premises; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: My Department reviewed all the provisions in part II of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 as recently as 1985, with particular reference to small businesses. It was concluded that generally the Act works well and that there are insufficient grounds for an immediate revision, but we continue to monitor its operation as to the need for any future amendments.

Local Authority Housing

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list in the Official Report those local authorities in England which have over 15 per cent. of their total local authority housing indicated in form HIP 1 as being difficult to let; and if he will give the percentage in each case.

Mr. Tracey: The numbers of difficult to let dwellings reported by authorities and the percentages of their stock were listed in the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister for Housing, Urban Affairs and Construction to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Perry Barr (Mr. Rooker) on 18 November 1986, at column 102.

That list shows that 21 English authorities reported in their 1986 returns that over 15 per cent. of their stock was difficult to let. Figures for difficult to let dwellings were not reported in 1986 by Manchester, which reported about 25 per cent. in its 1984 return and by Southwark, which reported about 23 per cent. in its 1985 return.

Conservation Areas

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a map of England identifying County Heritage sites and areas of special importance for nature conservation which will be protected from industrial development and road planning.

Mr. Waldegrave: I shall answer this question shortly.

Spectrum Arena

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply of 17 November 1986, Official Report, column 46, whether the sale of Spectrum Arena to CPW Leisure Ltd. has now been completed; what use he expects the arena will be put to after its sale; and how and where the money made from its sale will be spent.

Mr. John Patten: I understand that the proposed sale of Spectrum Arena to CPW Leisure Ltd. is not proceeding. The Warrington and Runcorn development corporation is actively seeking alternative offers. Its general expectation is that the arena will remain in leisure use. The corporation has indicated its intention to seek the Department's approval to spend a part of the proceeds of a sale on appropriate new facilities in Birchwood.

Rate Support Grant

Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the rate support grant, in cash terms, to Leeds city council for each year since 1979.

Mr. Chope: The figures requested are as follows.

The figures for 1979-80 and 1980-81 are not comparable with those for 1981-82 to 1986-87 because they comprise the needs, resources and domestic elements, whereas from 1981-82 onwards the figures comprise block grant and domestic rate relief grant. The figures for 1981-82 to 1985-86 are not comparable with those for 1986-87 because of the abolition of the West Yorkshire metropolitan county on 31 March 1986.

All figures are in cash terms. Those for 1979-80 to 1982-83 are final entitlements. Domestic rate relief grant figures for 1983-84 and 1984-85 are final entitlement; those for 1985-86 and 1986-87 are first estimates. Block grant figures for 1983-84 and 1984-85 are entitlements after holdback based upon provisional outturn; those for 1985-86 are entitlements after holdback based on budgets; those for 1986-87 are entitlements based on initial budget returns.

Housing Investment Programme

Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the housing investment programme allocation in 1979 prices to Leeds city council for each year since 1979.

Mr. Tracey: The table gives the housing investment programme (HIP) allocations made to Leeds since 1979, together with the total capital expenditure the council has been able to incur on housing:

1979-80	32·349	31·974

[1] Estimate

Private Flats

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he intends to introduce legislation to enfranchise the leaseholders of private flats; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: Before this can be considered it will be necessary to resolve the technical difficulties over the enforcement against successive owners of freehold flats of positive covenants dealing with the repair and maintenance of common parts of the provision of common services. My noble and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor has set up a working group headed by a law commissioner to put forward a scheme to regulate relations between the owners of properties which are interdependent, such as blocks of flats, and has asked the group to report by the middle of the year.

Housing (Enveloping Schemes)

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many envelope schemes have been approved nationally since the introduction of the envelope scheme in 1982; and how many dwellings they include.

Mr. Tracey: Since 1982 a total of 106 enveloping schemes have been approved in England covering over 10,500 dwellings.

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the average time in weeks taken between receipt of an application for an envelope scheme by a regional office of his Department and the issuing of a decision on it.

Mr. Tracey: Since current procedures were adopted in 1984 the average time has been 18 weeks. The time taken for the last six schemes has been 11 weeks.

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many envelope schemes have been completed; how many dwellings are included in them; and what expenditure has been incurred.

Mr. Tracey: A total of 63 approved enveloping schemes have been completed since 1982. Information is not currently available on the number of dwellings and expenditure incurred specifically in completed schemes, but total expenditure on enveloping since 1982 has been £45 million up to 30 September 1986.

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the distribution of completed envelope schemes; and what are the numbers of completed schemes between authorities.

Mr. Tracey: The following table shows the distribution of approved enveloping schemes in England completed as at 1 February 1987:

Local authority	Number completed
Allerdale D.C.	2
Birmingham C.C.	18
Lambeth L.B.	1
Leeds C.C.	1
Leicester C.C.	13
Middlesbrough B.C.	1
Oldham M.B.C.	2
Peterborough C.C.	2
Rochdale M.B.C.	7
Sandwell M.B.C.	1
Sheffield C.C.	1
Stockport M.B.C.	7
Trafford M.B.C.	6
Wolverhampton M.B.C.	1
Total	63

Local Government Finance

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table in the Official Report showing the amount of local authority rating revenue per head of population and rate support grant per head of population in each local authority area in 1986-87 or for the latest year for which figures are available.

Dr. Boyson: 1986-87 information, for English local authorities, has today been placed in the House of Commons Library.

PRIME MINISTER

EC Budget

Q37. Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Prime Minister what proposals have been placed on the agenda of the next meeting of the European Council regarding the budget problem of the EEC; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The agenda for the next European Council has not yet been fixed. However, as I told my hon. Friend on 13 January, at column 144, the Community's financial problems are certain to be considered by the European Council this year.

USSR

Q44. Mr. David Atkinson asked the Prime Minister when she expects to visit the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

The Prime Minister: I expect to visit the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics at the end of March. Dates will be announced in due course.

Company Directors

Q177. Sir David Price asked the Prime Minister if she will take steps to consolidate the 250 different statutory provisions relating to the legal duties and responsibilities of directors of public companies in a single measure.

The Prime Minister: Much of the law relating to the duties and responsibilities of company directors has recently been consolidated into the Companies Act 1985, the Insolvency Act 1986 and the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986. The remaining provisions cover a wide area of activity and further consolidation would be inappropriate.

Pay Beds

Mr. Neil Hamilton asked the Prime Minister if she will list for each hospital within each health authority in England and Wales, hospital board in Scotland and hospital and social service board in Northern Ireland, the maximum number of authorised pay beds, distinguishing between non-emergency and emergency beds.

The Prime Minister: Tables giving the information requested will be placed in the Library shortly.

Engagements

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 10 February.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 10 February.

Mr. Greenway asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 10 February.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 10 February.

Mr. Pike asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 10 February.

Mr. Andrew Bowden asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 10 February.

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others, and attended the memorial service for the first Earl of Stockton. In addition to my duties in this House I shall be having further meetings later today. This evening I hope to have an audience of Her Majesty The Queen.

Strategic Defence Initiative

Mr. McNamara asked the Prime Minister what assessment she has made of the implications for the 22 December 1984 Camp David agreement with President Reagan of the United States Defence Secretary Caspar Weinberger's support for incremental deployment of strategic defence initiative weapons, as announced on 9 January; and if she has any plans to seek to review that agreement.

The Prime Minister: I have no plans to review the Camp David four points.

Mr. McNamara asked the Prime Minister what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards sharing with the Government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics the results of United Kingdom strategic defence initiative research; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The Government do not envisage sharing the results of SDI research with the Soviet Union.

Mr. McNamara asked the Prime Minister whether the doctrine of competitive strategy announced by US Defence Secretary Weinberger on 9 January represents NATO policy; what consultations there have been within the Alliance on the implementation of such a policy; and what is her assessment of the impact of this policy on relations between NATO and Warsaw Pact countries.

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Armed Forces to the hon. Member for Denton and Reddish (Mr. Bennett) on Friday 6 February.

Previous Administrations (Information)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister if she will specify the types of question which she is prepared to answer which relate to the periods of previous Administrations; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: As a general rule I do not answer questions relating to the policies and decisions of previous Administrations, for which I have no ministerial responsibility.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL FOR SCOTLAND

Highlands and Islands Development Board

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland what action is being taken following police inquiries into allegations of irregularities in the awarding of grants by the Highlands and Islands Development Board; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: A police report on one such case has been made to the procurator fiscal, Inverness, and the papers have been passed to the fraud unit at Crown Office, which is currently investigating this and another similar case. It would not be appropriate to give further details at this stage.

EMPLOYMENT

Jobcentres (Staffing)

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General whether he has any plans to increase jobcentre staff to cover the recently announced increase in restart interviews.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Our announcement of 28 January will result in an addition of about 700 to the number of staff engaged in the restart programme. The increase of staff on this work will be in part offset by the steady introduction of new technology, including the Supervacs system, to other aspects of the work of the jobcentres.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Paymaster General what is the total number of (a) unskilled and (b) partly skilled persons in the work force of Britain; and what information he has on comparable figures in other Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development countries, showing in each case the actual figure and percentage of the total work force.

Mr. Lee: Estimates from the labour force survey conducted in the spring of 1985 show that at that time there were almost 1·3 million unskilled and just over 4 million semi-skilled manual workers in paid employment in Great Britain, representing respectively some 5·4 per cent. and 16·9 per cent. of all workers in paid employment. There are no figures for other OECD countries using comparable skill definitions.

Mr. Fatchett asked the Paymaster General how many people are registered as unemployed in each of the four city council wards within the Leeds, Central parliamentary constituency; and what is the percentage increase or decrease of the 1979 figures for each ward.

Mr. Lee: The following information is in the Library. Figures are given showing the numbers of unemployed claimants in the wards of the Leeds, Central parliamentary constituency on 11 December 1986. Statistics of unemployment from the ward-based system are available only from June 1983.

	Number
Beeston	1,213
City and Holbeck	2,203
Richmond Hill	1,944
University	2,113

Construction Industry

Mr. Rooker asked the Paymaster General if he has any plans to seek to improve the current safety record in the demolition section of the construction industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: Yes. The Health and Safety Executive recognises that demolition is a high risk sector of the construction industry and as such is treating it as a priority area for inspection.

Mr. Rooker asked the Paymaster General when he expects the proposed new guidance note on managing health and safety in construction to be issued.

Mr. Trippier: The guidance note on managing health and safety in construction, which has been prepared by the Health and Safety Commission's construction industry advisory committee, has not yet been approved for publication by the commission itself. Until this has been done, it would be premature to give an estimate of the publication date.

Community Projects (Member's Correspondence)

Dr. Godman asked the Paymaster General, pursuant to the answer of 5 February, Official Report, column 758, what are the reasons for the delay in writing to the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow about the Manpower Services Commission's inquiry into the funding of certain community projects; if he will now take steps to expedite his Department's response; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: I am arranging to meet the hon. Member to discuss this matter.

Training

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Paymaster General if the eligibility rules for the job training scheme will allow women who are unemployed, but not in receipt of benefit, to participate in the scheme and receive a training allowance.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [pursuant to his reply, 5 February 1987 c. 761]: The job training scheme is being targeted on those most in need and able to benefit from training for a vocational qualification to obtain employment. Provided men or women have been signing as unemployed at an unemployment benefit office for six months or more, they will be eligible for the scheme. If they did not receive benefit immediately before starting training, but claimed credits for national insurance contributions, they will receive a training allowance whenever a change in their circumstances would have entitled them to benefit had they remained unemployed.

Youth Training Schemes

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Paymaster General how many people have completed youth training schemes in Leicester and the east midlands to date; how many left before completing their full entitlement to training; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 5 February 1987, c. 763-64]: By the end of March 1986, around 2,500 young people in the local authority district of Leicester had completed YTS schemes since the scheme was introduced in 1983. The comparable figure for the Manpower Services Commissions east midlands and eastern region is 44,000. Over the same period around 3,600 young people in Leicester and 59,000 in the east midlands and eastern region, left the scheme before completing their full entitlement.

Independent research has shown that most of these early leavers left to take up jobs. For example, of those young people who left YTS early, in Leicester between April 1985 and March 1986, 55 per cent. were in work some three months after leaving. All in all, the figures demonstrate that large numbers of young people are both taking up, and benefiting from, the opportunities which YTS has to offer in Leicester and the east midlands.

Greenock and Port Glasgow

Dr. Godman asked the Paymaster General if he will estimate employment trends in the Greenock and Port Glasgow constituency over the next two years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: I have been asked to reply.

No official employment projections are available. In the light of recent developments the outlook is obviously uncertain. The Government are considering what steps might be taken to alleviate the problems caused by the planned redundancies at Scott-Lithgow.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Skynet

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when his attention was first drawn to the article on Skynet in the 15 February 1985 edition of "Interspace".

Mr. Renton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given earlier today by my right hon. and learned Friend the Solicitor-General.

EC (British Presidency)

Sir Russell Johnston asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make available in the Library the booklet, "Guidance on the Exercise of the Presidency", issued to British officials chairing European Community committees during the British presidency.

Mrs. Chalker: I have arranged for a copy to be placed in the Library.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Trade Statistics

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will show the crude balance of imports and exports of (a) cereals and cereal preparations, (b) motor vehicles and (c) electrical goods in 1979 and 1986; and if he will compare the net overall position in 1979 with 1986;

(2) if he will show (a) total imports and (b) total exports of (i) cereals and cereal preparations, (ii) all agricultural products, (iii) all other imports and exports, (iv) motor vehicles, (v) electrical goods, (vi) steel and (vii) coal for 1979 and 1986; and if he will show, in each case, the difference between (a) and (b) in actual and percentage terms.

Mr. Alan Clark: The information is as follows:

Value: £ million

	1979				1986[1]
	(a) imports (cif)	(b) exports (fob)	Crude balance £ million	as percentage of (a)	(a) imports (cif)	(b) exports (fob)	Crude balance £ million	as percentage of (a)

Notes:

(i) Crude balance is United Kingdom exports (fob) less United Kingdom imports (cif)

(ii) 0 signified a value of less than 0·5

(iii) [1] 1986 figures are provisional.

South Africa

Mr. Litherland asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the extent to which civil trade with South Africa should be determined by commercial considerations, rather than the character of the Government of those countries.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Government's policy is that the level of civil trade with South Africa should, within the limits of our international obligations and undertakings, be determined by the commercial judgment of those engaged in it.

Mr. Patchett asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether Her Majesty's Government propose to strengthen the ban on the export of computer equipment liable to be used by South African security forces.

Mr. Alan Clark: No.

Designated Agencies (Power Transfer)

Mr. Nelson asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made towards the transfer of powers under the Financial Services Act 1986 to a designated agency.

Mr. Howard: My right hon. Friend has today received a letter from the chairman of The Securities and Investments Board Limited, together with a statement of the regulatory arrangements the board would propose to operate if powers are transferred to it. This statement includes a copy of the rules and regulations the board proposes to make and the guidance it proposes to issue. The board will be publishing this statement later this week. In accordance with the procedures laid down in the Financial Services Act 1986, my right hon. Friend has asked the Director General of Fair Trading to report to him whether the board's proposed rules, regulations and guidance are likely to have a significantly anti-competitive effect. My right hon. Friend will naturally take into account any representations that he received by 28 February from interested parties on that or any other aspect of the board's proposals. Following this, he will be considering whether the requirements for designation set out in the Act are satisfied in the case of the board. If they are, he hopes to lay a delegation order before the House in draft in the spring.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Alternative Land Use

Mr. Bruce asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he intends to introduce measures to promote the development of woodland on farms; what representations have been made from United Kingdom farming interests and the European Economic Community on this matter; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: We are very much in favour of more farmers planting trees on part of their land and farming interests have made a number of representations to us on this matter which we are still considering. Possible action on forestry is also under consideration by the European Commission.

Cider

Mr. Greg Knight asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the additives currently permitted to be used in cider brewed or sold within the United Kingdom; and if he proposes any changes.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Cider may contain any additive permitted for general food use plus those specifically permitted for use in cider by the Preservatives in Food Regulations 1979.

We have no plans at present to change existing controls, but food additives regulations are kept under continuous review and are amended when necessary, taking into account the advice of the Food Advisory Committee, and after consultation with all interests.

Beer

Mr. Greg Knight asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the additives currently permitted to be used in beer brewed or sold within the United Kingdom; and if he proposes any changes.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Beer may contain any additive permitted for general food use plus those specifically permitted for use in beer by the Preservatives in Food Regulations 1979. We have no plans at present to change existing controls, but food additives regulations are kept under continuous review and are amended when necessary, taking into account the advice of the Food Advisory Committee and after consultation with all interests.

Salmon Advisory Committee

Mr. Soames asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if, pursuant to his reply of 9 December 1986, Official Report, column 110, he is yet in a position to announce the membership of the Salmon Advisory Committee; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Following consideration by Fisheries Ministers of nominations from interested organisations, in consultation with Professor Dunnet, the committee's chairman, I am pleased to be able to announce that the following persons have accepted invitations to serve on the Salmon Advisory Committee:

Mr. G. H. Bielby
Mr. C. G. Carnie
Mr. R. M. Clerk
The Hon. Edward Davies
Mr. S. J. Day
Mr. E. P. Ecroyd
Lt. Col. James H. Ferguson
Sir William Gordon-Cumming
Mr. N. W. Graesser

Dr. M. M. Halliday
Mr. D. Heselton
Mr. A. V. Holden
Dr. W. R. Howells
Dr. P. S. Maitland
Mr. I. Mitchell
Mr. M. J. Morgan
Mr. D. R. Patton
Dr. J. D. Pirie
Dr. D. J. Solomon
Mr. W. A. C. Thomson

In considering membership of the committee we have been aware of the need to strike an appropriate balance both between the interests and experience of the members and between the different parts of Great Britain.

The committee will meet for the first time in London on 26 February 1986.

ENERGY

Foreign Electricity Industries (Costs)

Mr. Evennett asked the Secretary of State for Energy what comparative information is available to him on the impact of nuclear power on the operating costs of foreign electricity industries.

Mr. Goodlad: The methods of generating electricity in other countries are a matter for the industries concerned and comparative information is not always readily available. However, as examples, the latest available accounts for Electricité de France show that in 1985 the revenue costs per unit of nuclear output were less than half those per unit of output from conventional thermal stations. The 1984-85 accounts for the German utility RWE comment that as a result of the relatively favourable fuel costs, lignite-fired and nuclear power stations are used to meet base-load electricity requirements.

Severn Barrage

Mr. Roy Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Energy if there have been any developments regarding the proposed Severn barrage since his announcement of July 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: Details of the Severn barrage work programme, related studies and procedures for consultation are being discussed by the Central Electricity Generating Board, the Severn Tidal Power Group and my Department. It is intended that full details of the studies and consultation procedures will be widely circulated for comment and that there should be an ongoing consultation process with all interested parties. A first consultative document will be available soon.

Sizewell B Power Station

Mr. Powley asked the Secretary of State for Energy whether he will consider representations in reaching his decision on Sizewell B; and when he will reach his decision.

Mr. Goodlad: My right hon. Friend will consider any relevant material which he receives, as he has always done in making his decisions on applications for the construction of power stations. He has said that he wishes to hear the views of the House before reaching his decision on Sizewell B. The debate will take place in the week beginning 23 February. He will reach his decision as soon as possible thereafter.

Electricity Prices

Mr. Speller asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list electricity prices (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) in France for (i) domestic and (ii) industrial consumers.

Mr. Goodlad [pursuant to his reply, 26 January 1987, c. 58]: A wide range of tariffs is available in both the United Kingdom and France. It is not, therefore, practicable to specify all the prices that a consumer may pay. Moreover, any direct comparison is strongly influenced by the prevailing exchange rate. The Electricity Council's latest estimates for a typical domestic consumer on a standard tariff and for an average industrial consumer are shown in the table below. French prices for domestic consumers include the effects of VAT and local taxes, which are not payable in the United Kingdom. I understand that where customers in France are prepared to suffer substantial amounts of load reduction during 18 designated hours on each of 22 days significant discounts are available.

Average price per unit	Domestic (3,300 units per annum including standing charge)	Industrial (2½ MW maximum demand at 50 per cent. load factor)
England and Wales (pence/kwh)	6·28	3·75
France (francs/kwh)	0·733-0·792	0·365

THE ARTS

London and the Regions

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Minister for the Arts what research he is undertaking on the provision of art in London and the regions.

Mr. Luce: I contribute to the costs of "Facts about the Arts", a research publication compiled by the Policy Studies Institute which provides regional breakdowns. In addition funding bodies like the Arts Council keep me fully informed as to the relative proportions which go to London and to the regions.

Association of Metropolitan Authorities

Ms. Clare Short asked the Minister for the Arts when he last met the Association of Metropolitan Authorities to discuss arts policy.

Mr. Luce: On 17 November 1986.

Sherman Theatre, Cardiff

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Minister for the Arts what representations he has received about the future funding of the Sherman theatre, Cardiff.

Mr. Luce: Two letters.

Public Library Service

Mr. Haynes asked the Minister for the Arts what steps he intends to take to improve funding of the public library service.

Mr. Luce: Planned central Government provision through the rate support grant for libraries in 1987-88 is over 15 per cent. higher than that for 1986-87. The actual level of spending on public libraries is a matter for individual local authorities.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

North East London Polytechnic

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the capital allocation for 1987-88 for the North East London polytechnic in respect of equipment and buildings on minor works together with those for the financial years 1986-87 and 1985-86.

Mr. Walden: Capital allocations to Barking local education authority included the following sums for advanced further education equipment and minor building works at North East London polytechnic:

	Equipment £	Minor works £
1985-86	606,600	115,780
1986-87	523,000	65,000
1987-88	338,000	—

No resources were available nationally for allocation for further and higher education minor works in 1987-88. Authorities are free to start such projects if they can do so within the total capital spending power available to them.

Wheathampstead School

Mr. Murphy asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has received any representations from pupils or parents regarding the future of Wheathampstead school; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: My right hon. Friend has received no such representations.

Student Counsellors

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many institutions of further and higher education have student counsellors; and what information he has on the way in which counsellors are dealing with stress amongst students.

Mr. Walden: The Department does not have this information. Her Majesty's inspectors have observed variations between institutions in the extent of their provision which has been the subject of a recent postal survey by the Association for Student Counselling. Counsellors are increasingly involved in training programmes for staff which will enhance the role of the latter in helping to counsel students.

Mathematics and Physics

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the progress of his measures to recruit service personnel for teaching mathematics and physics.

Mrs. Rumbold: Recruitment to initial teacher training in 1986 was 6 per cent. higher in mathematics and 34 per cent. higher in physics by comparison with 1985. Applications so far for 1987 suggest a further improvement. Data are not held centrally on the previous history of candidates but a number of recruits have employment experience. The armed forces have welcomed information about teaching as a potential second career for suitably qualified personnel.

School Closures

Sir Dudley Smith asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) if he will now give his decision on the representations he has received against the proposed further reduction of pupils into the Myton school, Warwick, from September 1987;

(2) if he will now give his decision over the proposed closure of Wolverton junior and infant school;

(3) if he will now give his decision over the proposed closure of Baddesley Clinton RC junior and infant school.

Mr. Dunn: These proposals published by Warwickshire LEA are currently before my right hon. Friend, and a decision will be announced shortly.

School Accommodation

Mr. Lawler asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science, further to his reply of 21 January, Official Report, column 557, what proportion of school buildings in the 10 local education authorities listed date from before (a) 1900 and (b) 1918.

Mr. Dunn: This information is not held centrally.

Research

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list any research projects on the implementation of the Education Act 1981 known to his Department other than those commissioned by his Department; and if, in each case, he will give (a) a brief description of the project, (b) the publication date of the final report and (c) any subsequent action taken by the Department.

Mr. Dunn: My right hon. Friend is aware of only two such projects:

'Effectiveness of Locational Integration for Children with Special Educational Needs': a 15-month project funded by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales. It cost £22,128 and was based at University College, Cardiff under the direction of Dr. G. Upton. It focused on children with moderate learning difficulties in four LEAs in South Wales and its aim was to measure the extent to which local integration led to social and functional integration. The project ended June 1986 and the draft Report is currently under consideration. A decision on publication has yet to be taken.

'Screening and Special Educational Provisions in Schools': a three-year project funded by the Economic and Social Research Council. It cost £100,230 and was based at the University of London Institute of Education under the direction of Professor H. Goldstein. It involved the major application of standardised testing in primary schools to identify children who may be in need of special attention or teaching and investigated both screening and provision for special educational needs within the classroom. The final report is currently under consideration by ESRC and is expected to be published in due course.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the research projects on the implementation of the Education Act 1981 sponsored by his Department; and if, in each case, he will give (a) a brief description of the project, (b) the publication date of the final report and (c) any subsequent action taken by his Department.

Mr. Dunn: My right hon. Friend has sponsored four research projects concerned with implementation of the Education Act 1981:

Meeting Special Educational Needs — Support for the Ordinary School: National Foundation for Educational Research.

Project Impact — In-service Education and Special Educational Needs: Manchester University/Huddersfield Polytechnic.

Education Act 1981: Policy and Provision for Special Educational Needs: University of London Institute of Education.

Education Act 1981: Development of Training Materials for Use on a Multi-Professional Basis in the Management of Change in the Special Needs Field: University of London Institute of Education. (This project is jointly funded with DHSS).

The NFER project examined ways in which ordinary schools, by re-structuring and by drawing on external resources, can enhance their capacity to educate children with special educational needs. Project impact evaluated a transbinary regional modular diploma leading to an advanced specialist qualification in special educational needs. Policy and provision for special education needs was concerned with procedures adopted by LEAs to implement the provisions of the Act and the impact of these on district health authorities, social services departments, voluntary organisations, parents and the children concerned. The findings of these three projects were the subject of a major dissemination seminar in November 1986 and were presented to the Department on 31 December 1986.

The fourth project began in October 1986 and will run for two years.

The Department is studying the findings of the first three projects. Any further action must await the outcome of the inquiry by the Select Committee for Education, Science and the Arts into special education.

Student Grants

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will outline how he is seeking the views of students on those measures under review relating to students' grants and loans, mentioned in the letter of 2 February to all hon. Members.

Mr. Walden: Written evidence has been invited and received from the National Union of Students and my review group is today meeting the NUS to discuss it. Written evidence has also been received from the Bath Area Students' Organisation, Bristol University Graduate Association, Cambridge University Graduate Union, Cambridge University Students' Union, Cranfield Students' Union, Edinburgh University Students' Association, Heriot-Watt University Students' Association, Herts. Area National Union of Students, National Union of Students (UK) and Union of Students in Ireland, Northern Ireland Regional Committee, Open University Student Association, Oxford University Student Union, Sheffield City Polytechnic Union of Students, Sheffield University Students' Union, and Southampton University Students' Union.

As stated in the letter I have met students at their institutions here and in America to hear their views. I have in particular visited university and polytechnic student accommodation in London.

University Grants Committee

Mr. Knowles asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has yet received the report of Lord Croham's review of the University Grants Committee; and if it will be published.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The report of the committee, chaired by Lord Croham, which has been reviewing the role and functions of the University Grants Committee is being published today. Copies are available in the Vote Office.

It is a valuable report with important recommendations for the future of a body which is central to the relationship between Government and our universities. My right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Northern Ireland and Scotland and I are grateful to Lord Croham and the members of his committee for their work and the clarity of their report.

I am inviting interested bodies to let me have detailed comments on the report's recommendations by 30 June 1987. In order to inform this consultative process the Government intends to announce fairly quickly its own broad conclusions on the principal recommendations. I am therefore asking for any comments on the general approach proposed in the report to be submitted within the next month.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Nicaragua

Mr. Ground asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much aid has been given by Her Majesty's Government bilaterally to Nicaragua in each of the last five years; and how much aid has been given by the European Community to Nicaragua in each of the last five years.

Mrs. Chalker: British bilateral aid to Nicaragua over the five years 1981 to 1985 was:

1981	91
1982	49
1983	64
1985	116

This aid was used for two purposes: disaster relief, channelled through the Nicaraguan Red Cross, Oxfam and the Catholic Fund for Overseas Development; and the training of a few Nicaraguans in Britain. In addition, we helped British voluntary agencies to fund some projects in Nicaragua.

European Community aid to Nicaragua between 1981 and 1985 was:

1981	501
1982	415
1983	452
1984	1,099
1985	976

Figures for 1986 are not yet available.

Honduras

Mr. Ground asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much aid has been given by Her Majesty's Government bilaterally to Honduras in each of the last five years; and how much aid has been given by the European Community to Honduras in each of the last five years.

Mrs. Chalker: British bilateral aid to Honduras over the five years 1981 to 1985 was:

	Bilateral aid £'000	of which[1] £'000
1981	5,002	4,702
1982	2,272	1,200
1983	6,670	4,984
1984	3,446	2,599
1985	3,653	2,967

[1] Commonwealth Development Corporation loans.

European Community aid to Honduras between 1981 and 1985 was:

1981	3,560
1982	5,130
1983	4,240
1984	8,130
1985	225

Figures for 1986 are not yet available.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Wandsworth Prison

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans his Department has to provide extra car parking space at Wandsworth prison; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: There are no plans to provide additional car parking space at Wandsworth beyond the 82 places currently available for staff.

Chemical Weapons

Mr. Gerald Bowden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what studies have been made by his Department of the downwind lethal range of the effects of munitions containing nerve gas;

(2) if his Department's scientific research branch is working on protective measures against chemical weapons.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Banff and Buchan (Mr. McQuarrie) on 5 February 1987 at column 775.

Gas Leaks

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library his Department's advice to local fire authorities in England and Wales on the provision of gas detection equipment on fire appliances for use by fire brigades in the prompt detection of gas leaks at incidents.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have placed in the Library copies of Home Office guidance on problems associated with gas detection.

Fire Brigades (Establishment)

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the loss of firefighters' posts, fire appliances and fire stations that will result from the implementation of the 1987-88 establishment schemes for the London and metropolitan county fire brigades, separately distinguishing each brigade.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary is at present considering the proposed establishment, support service and management schemes for 1987-88 submitted by the metropolitan fire and civil defence authorities. The London Fire and Civil Defence Authority has been granted an extension of time, and has not yet submitted its proposals.

When made or approved, copies of the schemes will be laid before Parliament.

Bus Lanes

Mr. Leighton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will ask the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis how many prosecutions there were in the last 12 months for parking in the bus lane in Whitechapel road in east London.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis has informed me that the information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Prison Officers' Houses

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of the 39 prison officers' houses at Culcheth have now been sold; how long they were unoccupied before their sale; how much they were sold for; which estate agents sold them; and how the money from the sale will be used.

Mr. Mellor: None of the 39 houses has been sold because offers so far received have not met the conditions of sale referred to in my reply to the hon. Member of 28 April 1986 at column 307. Marketing has now been suspended pending agreement on adoption specifications by the local authority.

Most of the houses have now been unoccupied for five to six years. Receipts from the sale will be credited as appropriations in aid to the Prisons (England and Wales) Vote, Class XI, 2.

Animal Procedures Committee

Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will now announce the membership of the Animal Procedures Committee under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Animal Procedures Committee will be appointed shortly and the membership of the Committee will be made public.

Police (Traffic Duties)

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers in England and Wales were deployed on specialist traffic duties on 30 November in each year between 1980 and 1986.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I gave the available information for 1986 in my reply to the hon. Member for Orkney and Shetland (Mr. Wallace) on 5 February at column 783. Information for previous years is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights

Mr. Coombs asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has received the 12th annual report of the Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tom King: The report has been published today, and copies have been laid before Parliament. It covers the period 1 November 1985 to 31 October 1986.

The report deals with a wide range of matters which the Commission has considered during the year under review. These include emergency legislation, the European Convention on Human Rights, treatment of prisoners, police complaints procedure, electoral and divorce law, special education and children care.

Copies of my response to the Commission's report have been placed in the Library.

Severe Weather Payments

Mr. Hume asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what figures are available to indicate the total number and total value of exceptionally severe weather payments made in each social security office in Northern Ireland in 1986.

Mr. Needham: The available information is as follows:

Exceptionally severe weather payments 1986

Note: The figures relate to payments during the period 12 March 1986 to 16 December 1986. Information for the remainder of the year is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Hume asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what weeks in 1986 were declared as periods of exceptionally severe weather; and which of those weeks had average temperatures of or lower than (a) 0 deg C or (b) minus 1·5 deg C in any area of Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: The declaration in effect covered four weeks from 3 February 1986 to 2 March 1986. During that period the average weekly temperature did not fall below 0 deg C at any of the weather stations (at Aldergrove, Lisburn, Carmoney and Carrigans) now designated for exceptionally cold weather payments purposes. At two of the stations only (Lisburn and Carmoney) the average reached 0 deg C (during week commencing 24 February 1986).

Mr. Hume asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what figures are available to indicate for the weeks 5 January to 11 January and 12 January to 18 January 1987 the daily mean temperature, the minimum night temperature and the weekly mean temperature for each weather station in Northern Ireland, designated for measuring temperatures for exceptionally severe weather payments.

Mr. Needham: The information is as follows:

Handicapped Children

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish in the Official Report the information available to him on the numbers of children with special educational needs in each education authority in Northern Ireland; and what is his estimate, in each case, of the percentage of these children who are persons to whom the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons (Northern Ireland) Act 1978 applies.

Dr. Mawhinney [pursuant to his reply, 9 February 1987]: The latest available figures relate to pupils determined as hnadicapped at January 1986 and are as shown in the table.

Insufficient information is available to estimate accurately the percentage of the pupils included who would come within the scope of the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons (NI) Act 1978.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Income Levels

Mr. Raynsford asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the answer to the question from the right hon. Member for Bethnal Green and Stepney (Mr. Shore) on 1 December 1986, Official Report, colum 470, if he will estimate the average weekly earnings after tax, national insurance contributions and child benefit at (a) current prices and (b) constant April 1986 prices of (i) a single man, (ii) a married man, (iii) a married man with two children under 11 years, and (iv) a single woman, all with earnings in the highest 5 per cent. of income levels.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Estimates of the levels of earnings for the top 5 per cent. of earners are not published. The information in the table is based on estimates of these levels derived from distributions of earnings published in the relevant new earnings surveys. Earning levels are for men or women as appropriate paid at adult rates with pay unaffected by absence. Taxpayers are asumed to have no reliefs or allowances other than the appropriate personal allowances.

Earnings after Tax, National Insurance Contributions[1] and Child Benefit (£ per week)

	April 1979[4]	April 1986

[3] Assuming no wife's earnings.
[4] Under the April 79 tax/benefit regime.

Taxation

Mr. Greenway asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the effect on total tax revenue of reductions in the marginal rates of tax since 1979.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I assume that the hon. Member is referring to income tax rates. If the 1986-87 income tax allowances, thresholds, and rates were replaced by the 1978-79 income tax allowances, thresholds and rates, indexed to 1986-87 levels by reference to the statutory formula, the direct revenue cost on the 1986-87 income tax base would be about £8·1 billion in a full year. But this estimate makes no allowance for any behavioural changes.

The direct revenue cost can be attributed to the following changes in allowances, thresholds, and rates:

Changes from 1978-79 tax regime indexed to 1986-87 to obtain 1986-87 tax regime

	Yield (+) Cost (−) £ million
1. Increases in personal allowances	−3,270
2. Abolition of reduced rate band at 25p	+1,400
3. Decrease in basic rate of 4p	−3,920
4. Increase in basic rate limit of £1,100	−185
5. Changes in higher rate thresholds up to 60 per cent.	−500
6. Abolition of higher rates above 60 per cent.	−800
7. Abolition of investment income surcharge	−825
Total	−8,100

In the table, the effect of each change has been calculated on the assumption that each of the previous changes has already been made.

Cigarettes (Taxation)

Mr. Lester asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has as to the average tax in pence on a packet of 20 of the most popular brand of cigarette in each of the 12 member states of the European Economic Community.

Mr. Brooke: According to the latest information available, the figures for excise duty and VAT on 20 cigarettes in the most popular price category in the EC member states are as set out in the table:

Excise duty and VAT on 20 cigarettes in the most popular price category: 29 January 1987[1]

Mortgage Interest Relief

Sir William Clark asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the cost to the Exchequer if mortgage interest relief was increased to £31,000, £32,000 and £35,000 respectively.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Assuming no consequential changes to the distribution of mortgages outstanding, the direct revenue cost, in a full year at 1986-87 levels, of an increase in the ceiling for mortgage interest relief is estimated to be:

Ceiling £	Cost £ million
32,000	45
35,000	100

The cost of an increase in the ceiling at 1987-88 levels would probably be significantly higher than the estimates above, both because the number of new home loans over £30,000 has been increasing recently and because an increase in the ceiling might stimulate additional borrowing. The cost for 1987-88 will also depend on the level of interest rates in that year as well as on the 1987-88 income tax rates and bands.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will state the total of (a) persons and (b) full-time equivalents employed in the (i) Civil Service, (ii) armed services, (iii) National Health Service, (iv) local authorities and (v) nationalised industries throughout the United Kingdom in 1985-86; and what were the comparable figures with 1979-80.

Mr. MacGregor: Numbers in thousands were as follows:

	mid-year 1979		mid-year 1985
	Headcount	Full-time Equivalent	Headcount	Full-time Equivalent
Civil Service[1]	731	716	600	588
HM Forces[2]	314	314	326	326

Incomes

Mr. Clay asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the increase in the average real net incomes of the working population since May 1979.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 15 January 1987, c. 295]: Real increases in take-home pay from 1978-79 to 1986-87 for those on average adult male earnings are as follows:

	Percentage
Single	18·5
Married man:
no children	18·1
two children	17·7

The estimates are based on the following assumptions:
(a) No allowances or reliefs other than the appropriate personal allowances;
(b) no wife's earnings;
(c) National Insurance Contributions at the contracted-in rate;
(d) earnings at average adult males (all occupations) rate; and use the retail prices index to measure changes in real terms.

Legislation

Mr. Sean Hughes asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what occasions since June 1979 his Department had to introduce amending legislation to (a) legislation introduced since June 1979 because of doubts about legality or because such legislation had been successfully challenged in the courts and (b) amend or withdraw orders introduced since June 1979, because of doubts about legality or because such orders had been successfully challenged in the courts.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 26 January 1987, c. 86]: From time to time it has been necessary to propose tax legislation in Finance Bills or to make statutory instruments amending past legislation in the light of court decisions or legal advice. It is not, however, possible always to distinguish whether amending legislation is necessary because:

a. the courts or legal advice demonstrated that the original legislation did not meet its original intention, or
b. there were new developments in the external environment which the original legislation did not deal with appropriately, or
c. subsequent experience showed that the original intention behind the legislation needed to be amended.

It is not therefore practicable without disproportionate cost to provide the information sought.

Income Tax

Dr. McDonald asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the cost in the 1987-88 financial year of introducing a reduced rate band of 25p of income tax on (i) the first £750 of taxable income, (ii) the first £1,000 of taxable income and (iii) the first £1,500 of taxable income; and in each case, what would be the impact on the net income of a married man on half average earnings, three quarters average earnings, average earnings, twice average earnings, five times average earnings and 10 times average earnings.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 29 January 1987, c. 384-85]: The direct revenue costs are estimated to be about £700 million, £900 million and £1,300 million respectively, in a full year at 1987-88 levels of income, compared with the tax regime resulting from 3·7 per cent. statutory indexation of 1986-87 allowances and thresholds. At each of the levels of gross income specified the gain in net income from introduction of the reduced rate bands would be (i) 58p (ii) 77p and (iii) £1·15 per week respectively. The estimates of revenue cost assume that a separate lower rate band would also be available to a married couple against the wife's earned income; and that the thresholds for higher rates of tax would be unaffected by the introduction of the lower rate band.

Dr. McDonald asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will report the number of taxpayers and total income tax due from each range of £1,000 between £2,000 and £13,000 and for the following ranges: £12,000 to £16,000, £16,000 to £20,000, £20,000 to £30,000 and £30,000 plus for the latest year available.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 29 January 1987, c. 385]: Estimates for 1986-87 are given in the table. The analysis is of single people and married couples liable to income tax. The figures are based on a projection from the 1984-85 "Survey of Personal Incomes" and are therefore provisional.

Number of tax units liable to income tax and tax liability by range of total income, 1986-87

Total income (lower limit) (£ per annum)	Number of units[1] paying tax (thousands)	Income tax liability (£ million)
3,000	1,350	360
4,000	1,650	800
5,000	1,850	1,320
6,000	1,700	1,620
7,000	1,650	1,980
8,000	1,500	2,120
9,000	1,500	2,560
10,000	1,150	2,170
11,000	1,050	2,260
12,000	3,100	8,120

[1] ie counting married couples as one and combining their incomes.

Dr. McDonald asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if, in the manner of his reply of 17 February 1986, Official Report, column 54, he will publish and update the tax relief figures for 1986-87.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 29 January 1987, c. 386]: The direct revenue cost of income tax relief at rates in excess of the basic rate in 1986-87 is estimated to be about £270 million for mortgage interest relief and about £260 million for relief on employees' and self-employed pension contributions. The direct revenue cost of these reliefs taken in combination is estimated at about £550 million. The corresponding estimates for 1985-86 have been revised and are: mortgage interest relief £250 million, pension contributions £220 million, both reliefs in combination £500 million.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total cost of the report on the incentive of tax cuts commissioned by his Department from Professor C. V. Brown.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 6 February 1987.] This study was initiated in 1978 and consisted of a survey of households followed by analysis of the data and econometric modelling by the University of Stirling.

The survey work was carried out by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys and cost some £400,000. The data—with full documentation—have been placed in the E.S.R.C. data archive and are available to other researchers.

The analytical work at Stirling cost some £200,000 and was funded by the Treasury. Twenty two technical working papers have been published. The report is in the Library of the House.

Dr. McDonald asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report the number of children under 18 years who are beneficiaries of covenants made by their grandparents and the cost of the tax relief in terms of revenue figures to the Exchequer in 1985-86, and the estimate for 1986-87.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 9 February 1987]: The total number of deeds of covenant to minor children operative in 1985-86 and 1986-87 is estimated to be 170,000 and 210,000 respectively. Deeds made by grandparents in favour of their grandchildren are estimated to account for about 70 per cent. of the total (ie 120,000 and 150,000 respectively) and the costs of tax relief on such deeds are £60 million in 1985-86 and £80 million in 1986-87.

Dr. McDonald asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report the number of young people aged over 18 years who had covenants made by their parents and the cost of such tax relief in terms of revenue forgone in 1985-86 and the estimated figures and costs for 1986-87.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 9 February 1987]: The number of people aged over 18 years benefiting from covenants made by their parents is estimated to be 250,000 in both 1985-86 and 1986-87. The cost of tax relief on these covenants is estimated at approximately £100 million annually.

Company Cars

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the percentage of total mileage of company cars spent on private motoring.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 5 February 1987, c. 756]: A company car may be a taxable benefit for an employee if it is available for his or her private use. The taxable amount of the benefit depends to some extent on the amount of business use, but it is not dependent on the amount of private use and there is no requirement for that to be reported to the Inland Revenue. Estimates of the percentage of total mileage attributable to private use cannot therefore be produced from Inland Revenue data.

DEFENCE

50-tonne Cranes

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Defence how long it took Scott-Greenham Limited to dispatch a 50-tonne crane to the scene of the convoy accident after it occurred in Wiltshire on 10 January.

Mr. Stanley: The 50-tonne crane provided by Scott-Greenham Limited arrived on site within two hours of the company being asked to dispatch it, having been put on readiness to do so somewhat earlier.

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many 50-tonne cranes his Department owns or has at its disposal;

(2) if he will give the location of the 50-tonne cranes owned by, or at the disposal of, his Department on 10 January.

Mr. Stanley: I assume that the hon. Member is interested in 50-tonne road mobile cranes, rather than those which cannot be readily moved from their location—for example, at dockyards, workshops or units. The Department owns three such cranes and they are located in the Falklands where they were on 10 January. There are no central records of the number and location of 50-tonne road mobile cranes which the Department has on hire.

Armoured Divisions (Tanks)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the average number of tanks in a NATO armoured division; and what information he has about the average number in a Warsaw pact armoured division.

Mr. Stanley: As far as NATO armoured divisions are concerned, I refer the hon. Member to the reply he received from my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for the Armed Forces on 12 January at column 95. Our assessment of the number of tanks in Warsaw pact tank divisions and motor rifle divisions is classified.

Nuclear Defence

Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many protests he has received from local education authorities and teachers' organisations concerning the recently-published Government film for use in schools about nuclear defence.

Mr. Stanley: No written representations have been received in the Department as of yesterday. The film to which the hon. Member refers is about conventional and nuclear defence, and arms control.

Skynet

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence when his attention was first drawn to the article on Skynet in the 15 February 1985 edition of "Interspace".

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given earlier today by my right hon. and learned Friend the Attorney-General.

Land Rovers

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many of his Department's Land Rovers have been returned to the manufacturers in the last three years because of engine defects.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: None, but about 300 engine defects from a fleet of 20,000 have been rectified by dealers under warranty during the last three years.

Synetta Tanker

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether any Royal Navy vessel was in the vicinity of the tanker Synetta when it was lost on 25 December 1986 off the coast of Iceland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stanley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I have given to the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South (Mr. Hancock) today.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence if disciplinary action is currently being considered against any Royal Navy personnel or Ministry of Defence employees over the unauthorised release of information regarding recent naval operations involving damage sustained by one of Her Majesty's ships in Icelandic territorial waters; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stanley [pursuant to his answer, 6 February 1987]: Any breach of security will be dealt with in accordance with our standard procedures.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence if any Royal Naval vessel was close to the Synetta when it sank near Iceland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stanley [pursuant to his answer, 6 February 1987]: It is not our general practice to give details of the operational movements of Royal Navy surface ships and submarines.

SCOTLAND

Jurors' Citations

Mr. Kennedy asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he is satisfied that existing procedures concerning notification of sheriff court jurors' citations adequately maintain personal privacy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: I am consulting the sheriffs principal, who have a general responsibility for the preparation of jury lists, on a recent incident which has been drawn to my attention and I shall write to the hon. Member on completion of my inquiries.

Roads (Expenditure)

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will show 1985-86 outturn expenditure, 1986-87 estimated expenditure and 1987-88 planned expenditure on (i) trunk roads (a) new construction and improvement, (b) structural maintenance and (c) routine maintenance, (ii) local authority roads (a) new construction and improvement and (b) maintenance, (iii) public transport administration, (iv) local authority car parks (a) capital, (b) current (net) and (v) road safety in Scotland.

Mr. Ancram: The information requested is set out in the table:

	1985-86 outturn[1]	1986-87 estimate	1987-88 planned
1. Motorways and trunk roads
(a) New construction and improvement	87·8	79·1	[2]83·6
(b) Structural maintenance	13·2	18·0	21·8
(c) Routine and winter maintenance	17·8	17·0	19·1
2. Local authority roads
(a) New construction and improvement	129·7	126·0	134·0
(b) Maintenance	148·4	158·7	166·3
3. Public transport administration[3]	23·8	25·6	26·8
4. Local authority car parks
(a) Capital	1·7	1·9	2·0
(b) Current (net)	—	—	—
5. Road safety in Scotland[4]	1·4	1·5	1·6

[1] Local authority outturn figures are provisional only.
[2] After a transfer of £2·5 million to local authority roads and transport capital to assist with the Edinburgh city bypass.
[3] Local authority expenditure on administration of roads and transport services.
[4] Excludes expenditure by the Department of Transport on national road safety publicity. Expenditure on new construction and improvements and on maintenance also contributes to road safety.

Prisons

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the number of prison places which will be created by 1990 through the prison building programme.

Mr. Lang: When completed this year, phase II of Shotts prison will increase the existing design capacity of the prison system in Scotland by 468 places. No other project is expected to be completed before 1990.

Police Duties

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what research his Department has recently commissioned or undertaken into the proportion of police time devoted to duties other than the prevention or detection of crimes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: A number of police-related research projects have been commissioned or undertaken by the Scottish Home and Health Department in recent years, but none of these comes into the category described by the hon. Member.

Higher Education

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how the extra £6,100,000, which he announced in November is to be spent on higher education in Scotland, is to be allocated.

Mr. John MacKay: An additional £3·3 million will be provided in 1987-88 to the central institutions and colleges of education to meet additional operating costs, but the precise allocation to individual institutions has not yet been determined. The balance is being allocated to the central institutions for capital projects.

Infertility

Mrs. McCurley asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will consider making funds available to each area health board to ensure the development of at least one fully equipped and specially recognised centre of excellence in infertility treatment within each area.

Mr. John MacKay: It is for individual health boards to determine, in the light of the resources available to them, the extent to which they should make infertility services available in their areas and how such services should be organised.

Mrs. McCurley asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress his Department is making on research into the causes of, and treatment for, male infertility.

Mr. John MacKay: The Scottish Home and Health Department is at present funding a research project at Edinburgh university relevant to male infertility.

Job Losses

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the net loss in manufacturing jobs in the Strathclyde region since June 1979.

Mr. Lang: The estimated net fall in employment in Strathclyde region in manufacturing plants employing more than 10 people between 1979 and 1985 was 124,000. This estimate is taken from the regional data system. No reliable information is available from this source for plants with fewer than 10 employees.

Council Houses

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many council houses were completed in Scotland in each year from 1978 to 1986 inclusive.

Mr. Ancram: Information on council house completions for 1978 to 1985 is published in the table on page 9 of "Scottish Housing Statistics 1985", a copy of which is available in the Library. Figures for 1986 are not yet complete.

Apprentices

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total number of apprentices in (a) the Strathclyde region and (b) the Greenock and Port Glasgow constituency in 1978 and each subsequent year.

Mr. Lang: The information requested is not available. The latest comprehensive estimate is from the 1981 census of population, and this shows that there were 43,248 apprentices and trainees in Strathclyde region and 1,892 in the Greenock and Port Glasgow constituency.

Job Clubs

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give for the latest date available for the Greenock and Port Glasgow job clubs (a) the total number of participants to date, (b) the numbers currently in employment and (c) the numbers employed through the community programme.

Mr. Lang: The information is not available in the precise form requested. However, at 9 January 1987, the latest date for which information is available, a total of 182 people had joined the Greenock and Port Glasgow job clubs since their opening in June 1986. Of this number, 108 people have left the job clubs, of whom 61 (56·5 per cent.) were placed directly into jobs and a further 18 (16·7 per cent.) entered some form of Government employment or training scheme, including the community programme.

Public Sector Colleges

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the projected deficits for each of the public sector colleges in Scotland in the current financial year.

Mr. John MacKay: Colleges are expected to operate within the cash limits which have been set in their recurrent grant allocations. However, present indications are that three colleges of education are likely to incur deficits at the end of the current financial year as follows:

Jordanhill College of Education	300
Moray House College of Education	70
Dunfermline College of Physical Education	70

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what is the recurrent grant projected for each college in the public sector in the next financial year;

(2) what representations he has received from public sector colleges about the sufficiency of recurrent grants in the next financial year to cover their expenditure requirements.

Mr. John MacKay: Recurrent grants in respect of the next financial year have not yet been determined for the public sector colleges.

Rate Relief

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many dwellings qualify for relief from rates because of their classification as croft houses.

Mr. Ancram: About 13,000.

Dunblane Bypass

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he will publish the amended order for the Dunblane bypass; and what are the reasons for the delay to date.

Mr. Ancram: Following the decision to upgrade the junctions proposed for this scheme, it has been necessary to redesign the layouts and to prepare an amended draft side roads order. It is expected that the revised order will be published in late spring of this year. This should not delay the expected start of construction, subject to the satisfactory completion of the statutory procedures.

Health Service (Consultants)

Mr. Robert Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has about the cost to the Grampian health board of employing outside agencies to provide financial, technical or consultancy services, for each of the last three financial years and to the latest date in the current financial year.

Mr. John MacKay: Grampian health board has employed since 1 April 1985 the following management consultants:

Name	Cost £
Coopers and Lybrand	60,000
Arthur Young	6,000
P R Consultants	1,100
P A Consultants	9,200

The remainder of the information is not available centrally.

British Telecom

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with British Telecom regarding the retention of a Scottish dimension in its management structure and control.

Mr. Lang: In addition to discussions held between officials and British Telecom's territorial director for Scotland and Northern Ireland, my right hon. and learned Friend discussed BT's regional structure at a recent meeting with the company's chief executive.

While decisions relating to internal organisation and management are commercial judgments for the company itself, my right hon. and learned Friend fully recognises the importance for Scotland of a modern and efficient telecommunications service and, accordingly, will be following future developments with the closest interest. In this context, he also welcomes BT's decisions to create a Scottish advisory forum and to staff the new territorial organisation with advisers located in both Edinburgh and Leeds.

Rate Support Grant

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table in the Official Report showing the amount of the support grant per head of population in each local authority area in Scotland in 1979-80 and 1986-87, together with a column showing the 1986-87 figures as a percentage of the 1979-80 figures at 1979-80 prices.

Mr. Ancram: The figures show for each local authority the rate support grant per head of population paid in 1979-80, the rate support grant per head paid in 1986-87 and the percentage difference between the 1979-80 and 1986-87 figures at 1979-80 prices. The GDP deflator is used to convert the figures for 1986-87 from cash to 1979-80 prices. The grant figures used for 1986-87 are based on the Rate Support Grant (Scotland) (No. 4) Order 1985. No adjustment has been made for grant penalties since they will be restored if authorities bring their expenditure down to guideline on outturn.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Rate Rebates

15. Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people currently receive a rebate of over 80 per cent. of their total rate demand.

Mr. Lyell: We estimate that in the current financial year about 3·7 million householders are receiving a rate rebate of more than 80 per cent of their total rate demand.

Benefit Claims

16. Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what plans he has to speed up the decision-making process on claims for mobility allowance, attendance allowance and severe disablement allowance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lyell: Since 1983, the average time taken to decide claims for attendance allowance and mobility allowance has reduced from 12½ weeks and 14½ weeks respectively to a current time of eight weeks. There are no comparable figures for severe disablement allowance. We are continuing to make improvements in both the system and staffing to further reduce these times.

Preventive Medicine

17. Mr. Hirst asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to enhance the provisions of preventive medicine.

Mrs. Currie: My right hon. Friend has taken steps to ensure that prevention and health promotion are given increased weight in the planning of National Health Service priorities and resource allocations. We shall be monitoring health authorities' plans through the regional review process with this aspect in mind.

AIDS

18. Mr. Andrew MacKay asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a further statement on the Government's plans to combat the spread of AIDS.

Mr. Newton: We have taken urgent action on a number of fronts, including a large-scale public information campaign, extra resources for treatment, research, training and counselling, safeguarding blood and blood products, support for the voluntary sector and the issue of advice to professions.

We are considering other initiatives, particularly in regard to caring for AIDS patients, taking account of what we have learned from how other countries are tackling the problem.

29. Mrs. Shields asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what recent representations he has received on the AIDS advertising campaign; and if he will make a statement.

43. Mr. Yeo asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received regarding the leaflet on AIDS distributed by his Department.

Mr. Newton: Our surveys show that the great majority of people consider the Government's public education campaign on AIDS to be necessary. The general response to the household leaflet has been favourable, although we have received complaints from people who objected to some of the information it contained or felt it should not have been sent to them. We shall continue to monitor the effectiveness of the campaign and to develop it in the light of the findings.

54. Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services to what extent he envisages community care as part of the treatment provided for AIDS victims.

Mr. Newton: The family practitioner, community nursing and personal social services have an important role to play in the care and treatment of AIDS sufferers, as do voluntary bodies. We intend shortly to convene a conference on this subject.

58. Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his latest estimate of the proportion of HIV carriers who will ultimately die as a result of the virus.

Mr. Newton: Our current estimate is that 10 per cent. to 30 per cent. of those infected with HIV will develop AIDS within five years. We do not yet have the experience on which to estimate the proportion who will develop AIDS over a longer time period.

Disabled People

19. Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on progress on the implementation of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986.

Mr. Major: We hope to be able to implement sections 4, 8, 9 and 10 of the Act by next April and section 11 during the course of 1987. We are discussing with the local authority associations how to implement those provisions of the Act, including sections 5 and 6, which have significant resource implications. At present I am unable to give any indication when these can be implemented.

27. Mr. Crowther asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will increase the number of registered disabled persons employed in his Department in order to meet the quota provided for in the Disabled Persons (Employment) Act 1944, as amended by the 1958 Act.

Mr. Major: Although the Act is not binding on the Crown, successive Governments have undertaken to accept the same responsibilities as other employers. There are 1,235 registered disabled staff in the Department. In addition there is an unknown number of disabled staff who have not registered. We would welcome more applications from disabled persons for employment in the Department and we shall continue to facilitate recruitment of registered disabled people. Those who apply for clerical posts without the prescribed education qualifications can take a written test instead. Special arrangements are made for disabled people to attend tests and interviews.

Deprived Urban Areas

20. Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what plans he has to improve National Health Service provision in deprived urban areas.

Mr. Newton: It is for district and regional health authorities to plan service provision within the resources available to meet local needs and circumstances, taking account of factors such as social deprivation where these have an impact on need for health care. The £30 million special fund recently announced by my right hon. Friend will particularly benefit many inner city areas.

Pensioners

21. Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services by how many the total number of pensioners eligible for state pension has changed since 1979; and what this change represents as a percentage of the total cost of the state pension.

Mr. Major: There are about 1 million more retirement pensioners now than in November 1978. This increase accounts for nearly 11 per cent. of total spending on state retirement pension in the current financial year.

Elderly People

22. Mrs. Roe asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what increase in the proportion of the population over the age of 65 years his Department estimates there will be by the year 2000.

Mrs. Currie: According to the Government Actuary's mid-1985-based principal projection, the proportion of the population of Great Britain aged 65 or over is projected to rise from 15·2 per cent. in 1985 to 15·7 per cent. in the year 2000.

Hypothermia

23. Mr. Livsey asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many fatalities resulting from hypothermia have been reported since 10 January; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: The provisional number of deaths registered with any mention of hypothermia on the death certificate, irrespective of whether it did or did not appear as the underlying cause of death, from 10 January 1987 to 30 January 1987 in England and Wales is 87.

26. Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the latest estimate of the number of cases of hypothermia among elderly people during the recent cold weather.

Mrs. Currie: Provisional figures from the Registrar General for England and Wales show that between 10 January and 30 January 1987 hypothermia was mentioned on 80 death certificates for persons aged 65 years or more.

Information on the incidence of morbidity due to hypothermia is not available centrally.

Severe Weather Payments

24. Mr. Geraint Howells asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he is satisfied with the present form of the exceptionally severe weather payments system; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: Yes. The new arrangements are a significant improvement on previous schemes for exceptionally severe weather payments, in terms of simplicity, comprehensibility and certainty of payment. From 26 January we have changed the qualifying temperature from minus 1·5 deg C to 0 deg C over a fixed seven-day period. Under the revised arrangement help for vulnerable groups during exceptionally cold weather can be expected to be given more often than under any previous system. The review now provides the most generous system ever for helping vulnerable groups during exceptionally cold weather.

32. Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the average time before payment of the severe weather allowance, once payment has been triggered for a given area.

Mr. Major: Information on clearance times for exceptionally cold weather claims is not available. However, local offices have been instructed to give priority to cold weather payments and to deal with claims immediately on receipt.

33. Mr. Rogers asked the Secretary of State for Social Services in how many of the chosen weather stations the severe weather payments trigger temperature of minus 1·5 deg C was achieved in the weeks 5 to 11 January and 12 January to 18 January.

Mr. Major: In the week 5 to 11 January, one weather station achieved the trigger temperature of minus 1·5 deg C. In the week 12 to 18 January, 48 weather stations achieved that temperature.

Cities (Hospital Provision)

25. Mr. Wainwright asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on his plans for the provision of hospital services in major cities over the next decade.

Mr. Newton: Regional and district health authorities have prepared comprehensive plans for developing and improving hospital and other health services—including those in major cities—over the period to 1993-94.

Housing Benefit

28. Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether those in receipt of housing benefit in areas of high rent levels will have rent covered under his proposals to change the housing benefit scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lyell: In the reformed housing benefit scheme from April 1988 calculation by local authorities of entitlement to housing benefit will be based on the claimant's full rent in all cases except where the amount of rent eligible for benefit is restricted because the authority decides that the rent is unreasonably high. The provision which exists in the present scheme for authorities to operate high rent schemes for certain claimants who pay unavoidably high rents will therefore not be necessary and will be withdrawn when the new housing benefit scheme is introduced.

45. Mr. Leigh asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the number of households receiving housing benefit.

Mr. Lyell: Estimates of the number of households receiving housing benefit, based on inquiry information which relates to the autumn of 1985, are as follows:

	Number
Standard housing benefit	3,840,000
Certificated housing benefit	3,310,000
All housing benefit	7,150,000

Mentally Ill and Handicapped People

30. Mr. O'Brien asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what additional resources are made available to local authority social services departments when the care for the mentally handicapped is transferred from hospitals to local authority and voluntary organisations.

Mrs. Currie: Health authorities can make payments, for as long as necessary, to local authority and voluntary organisations to meet the cost of providing community care for people moving out of long-stay hospitals. The detailed mechanisms by which health authorities arrange such transfers, and the amounts of money involved, vary from authority to authority.

Joint finance can be used to fund community care projects and, in particular, as a source of bridging funds to enable community services to be developed before patients are transferred. Joint finance allocations have increased from £34·5 million in 1978-79 to £110·8 million in 1986-87—a real terms increase of over 60 per cent. The main regional allocation for 1987-88 will increase over the previous year by 3·75 per cent. About one third of joint finance is spent on services for mentally handicapped people.

Additionally, £18 million over four years has been centrally reserved from the joint finance allocations to explore and evaluate cost effective ways of providing community care for long-term hospial patients.

49. Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many mentally ill and handicapped people have been discharged from mental hospitals in the last year for which figures are available; and if he is satisfied with the care in the community that they have received.

Mrs. Currie: In 1985, the last year for which figures are available, there were 188,653 discharges from mental illness hospitals and units in England, and 38,762 discharges from mental handicap hospitals and units. These figures include transfers to a different hospital. Full statistics on admissions and discharges are available in the series of DHSS booklets "Mental Health Statistics for England 1985", copies of which are in the Library. These statistics show that 89 per cent. of the in-patients discharged from mental illness hospitals and units during that year had been in-patients for less than three months, and 92 per cent. of those discharged from mental handicap hospitals and units had been in-patients for less than three months.

My predecessor's reply to the hon. Member for Caerphilly (Mr. Davies) on 25 February 1986 at column 534 gave particulars of the numbers of people who had been in-patients for five years and over who were discharged in recent years.

There are many examples of good practice on the part of health and local authorities spread across the country and we have several sources for monitoring and obtaining feedback. Authorities are also responsible for monitoring their own services. However we do recognise that in some instances community care is not managed exactly as we would like. That is why my right hon. Friend has asked Sir Roy Griffiths to study the situation generally and report back within 12 months.

Abortions

31. Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for Social Services in how many cases provision for an abortion has been refused under the Infant Life Preservation Act in the past year.

Mr. Newton: As there is no requirement for refusal of an abortion to be notified to the Department, this information is not available centrally.

Board and Lodging Regulations

34. Ms. Clare Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will now abolish the time limits imposed on under 26-year-olds in the board and lodging regulations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: These limits were introduced to contain escalating expenditure and curb abuse. We have published a consultative document proposing a simpler, more coherent system for payments to boarders while tackling effectively the problems of incentives and maintaining proper financial controls. These proposals could not be introduced before the new income support scheme in April 1988.

37. Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services in how many cases the time limits imposed by the board and lodging regulations were waived because of the severe weather.

Mr. Major: A wide range of factors is taken into account in exercising the discretionary power to exempt individuals from the time limits. Severe weather was put forward as a reason for exemption in only one case which was subsequently successful.

Supplementary Benefit

35. Mr. George Howarth asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the average length of time now being taken to deal with claims for supplementary benefit.

Mr. Lyell: During the year ending on 16 December 1986 the average time taken to deal with new and repeat claims for supplementary benefit was six days.

This represents the time from receipt of a completed claim form to the time when a decision is made on the claim.

64. Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how much was paid in supplementary benefit to single people under the age of 18 years in each of the last three years for which figures are available.

Mr. Lyell: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Single Payments

36. Mr. Leadbitter asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the average length of time now being taken to deal with claims for single payments.

Mr. Lyell: Local offices do not routinely keep records of clearance times for single payment claims. However, claims are determined as soon as possible after all the information required has been collected; urgent cases are given priority.

NHS—Private Sector (Co-operation)

38. Mr. Galley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps he is taking to encourage co-operation between the National Health Service and the private health sector.

Mrs. Currie: We take every available opportunity to promote collaboration between the National Health Service and the independent health care sector as a means of maximising the benefits to patients from available resources. Health authorities should make use of private sector facilities for the treatment of NHS patients wherever this is a cost-effective way of improving or extending the service they can provide. It is for individual health authorities and private sector providers to get together on specific proposals. Private sector providers should ensure that authorities in their locality are aware of what they have to offer.

Speech Therapists

39. Mr. Mikardo asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received on the establishment of improved salaries for speech therapists.

46. Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received on the salaries of speech therapists.

65. Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received about establishing an improved pay structure for speech therapists.

66. Dr. Roger Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what recent representations he has received about the salaries of speech therapists.

Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received on the subject of new salary scales for speech therapists; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stan Thorne asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received on the subject of new salary scales for speech therapists; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Members to my reply earlier today to the hon. Member for Stockton, North (Mr. Cook).

Chemical Weapons (Casualties)

40. Dr. Twinn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what preparations his Department has made for treating casualties resulting from the intentional or accidental use of chemical weapons in the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Currie: In the absence of a ban on chemical weapons, the Government are considering the questions of detection and warning of chemical attacks and protective measures against them.

Health authorities are being advised that the threat from chemical weapons will be the subject of guidance when current studies by the Government are complete.

The National Health Service has the capability to treat casualties from a variety of chemical hazards in peacetime. Specialised advice on effects and treatment can be sought from the National Poisons Information Service.

Battery-powered Wheelchairs

41. Mr. Flannery asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has yet decided on a date to make public his decisions regarding the recommendations of the McColl committee on dual purpose battery-powered wheelchairs.

Mr. Major: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the right hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, South (Mr. Ashley) on 29 January 1987.

Computer Bed Bank Scheme

42. Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on progress by the West Midlands regional health authority on the computer bed bank pilot scheme.

Mr. Newton: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to him on 19 December 1986 at c. 787.

Health Authorities (Real Estate)

44. Mr. Colvin asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what guidelines he has issued to health authorities regarding the disposal of real estate for which they have no further need.

Mrs. Currie: The National Health Service handbook on land transactions, a copy of which is in the Library, provides detailed guidance to health authorities on all aspects of land transactions including the disposal of surplus property.

Nurses

47. Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what new initiatives he has for increasing nursing recruitment and for reducing the annual wastage of qualified nurses from the National Health Service.

Mr. Newton: The position in London is currently the subject of a review commissioned by the National Health Service Management Board. The Department is also currently undertaking a special inquiry into nurse recruitment and retention problems across the country with the aim of identifying management action which may be required to overcome recruitment difficulties. The management and staff sides of the Nursing and Midwifery Staff Negotiating Council are reviewing nursing clinical grading structure and are aiming to develop a structure which is appropriate to current and future needs. A joint DHSS-NHS group is examining equal opportunities, with specific reference to management of the career break. Additionally health authorities have been asked to consider increasing male recruitment, making greater efforts to recruit mature entrants, organise "Back to Nursing" campaigns, establish nurse banks and give more opportunities for flexible working arrangements, part-time working and job sharing.

Finally, as an immediate response to the "Project 2000" proposals on future nurse education and training published by the United Kingdom Central council for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting, the Department is setting up a major feasibility study into the extended use of the youth training scheme in the National Health Service. A feature of this study is to look at the way such training might facilitate entry to professional nurse training and thus help to alleviate recruitment difficulties.

48. Mr. Fallon asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many nurses are employed in the northern National Health Service region; and how many were employed in 1979.

Mr. Newton: The information requested is shown in the table.

Cottage Hospitals

50. Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make it his policy to promote and enhance the role of the cottage hospital within the National Health Service.

Mrs. Currie: Small community hospitals make an important contribution to the National Health Service. It is, however, for each health authority to determine the appropriate pattern of district services. In doing so they will balance the benefits of cottage hospitals alongside those of larger district hospitals in the light of changing circumstances and so as to secure from available resources the best possible value and level of service provision for all the local communities they serve.

Arthritics

51. Mr. Robert Atkins asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has had about care for arthritics in Lancashire.

Mrs. Currie: We have had a number of representations from my hon. Friend the Member for South Ribble and other hon. Members in Lancashire about the proposed new service at Preston for juvenile arthritics who are at present cared for at Wrightington hospital.

Copies of my recent correspondence with Sir John Page have been placed in the Library.

Radiotherapy Unit (Southend General Hospital)

52. Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many letters he has now received from the general public about the proposed closure of the radiotherapy unit at Southend general hospital; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: We have received 14 letters which have been referred by hon. Members, together with about 480 letters direct from members of the general public.

Hospital Waiting Lists

53. Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what response he has had from health authorities to his latest plans for reducing hospital waiting lists.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend to my hon. Friends the Members for Broxbourne (Mrs. Roe) and for Brentwood and Ongar (Mr. McCrindle) and to the hon. Member for Newport, East (Mr. Hughes) on 13 January 1987 at c. 136-38.

Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people in the Leeds, East and Leeds, West district health authority are currently waiting for hospital treatment; how many have been waiting for one year; and how many of these cases are classified as urgent.

Mr. Newton: The latest information available centrally is included in a bound volume of the hospital waiting lists for health authorities in England at 31 March 1986, copies of which have been placed in the Library. For more recent information, the hon. Member may wish to write to the chairmen of the Leeds Eastern and Leeds Western district health authorities.

Funeral Directors (Advertising)

55. Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what approval he or the Trent regional health authority gave to Lincolnshire health authority's proposal to raise money for the hospital service by allowing funeral directors to advertise their services in hospital corridors in return for a fee.

Mr. Newton: I understand that this proposal was one of many concerned with income generation discussed by the North Lincolnshire district health authority last year. The authority does not intend to proceed with it and no approach about it has been made, either to the Trent regional health authority or to Ministers.

Basingstoke Hospital

56. Mr. Hunter asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received from Basingstoke and North Hampshire health authority about reducing waiting lists at Basingstoke hospital; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: My hon. Friend has written to my right hon. Friend, on behalf of the Basingstoke and North Hampshire district health authority. Wessex regional health authority has reported to my right hon. Friend on the action proposed by that district to reduce hospital waiting lists and times, including bids against first year's allocation of the £50 million waiting list fund.

Family Income Supplement

57. Mr. Kennedy asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will state the average length of time taken to process family income supplement claims; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lyell: Taking all claims for family income supplement, the length of time between the date of claim and when the decision is made averages 17 working days. Where benefit is awarded, the average interval between the date of claim and issue of an order book is 23 days.

Trent Regional Health Authority

59. Mr. Haynes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he last met the chairman of the Trent regional health authority; and what matters they discussed.

Mr. Newton: My right hon. Friend normally meets all regional chairmen every two months to discuss a wide range of issues. The last such meeting was on 19 November 1986.

Heating Allowance

60. Mr. Bill Walker asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give details of the number of pensioners in Scotland who are in receipt of heating allowance.

Mr. Major: In 1984, the latest year for which information is available, a total of 141,000[1] supplementary pensioners in Scotland received a heating addition.

Inner London (National Health Service)

61. Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will increase resources for the National Health Service in inner London.

Mr. Newton: Resource allocations to inner London district health authorities are a matter for the four Thames regions. For 1987-88, the Thames regions have the benefit of special allocations totalling £10·6 million from the fund of £30 million over two years which the Government have established to help transitional problems in regions receiving less than national average growth. Each Thames region will receive a total increase, from its main RAWP allocation and the special fund, of 5·1 per cent. It is for regions to decide how their allocations from the special fund should be spent, within the guidelines that the Government have issued, but we expect that inner London districts will benefit substantially.

The London postgraduate special health authorities will receive over £2 million from the special fund. This, together with their baseline allocations, will ensure that no special health authority receives a cash increase of less than 5·1 per cent.

Sheltered Accommodation

62. Mr. Andrew Bowden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what regulations he proposes to make to render assistance to supplementary benefit recipients who are long-leaseholders of sheltered accommodation under the Social Security Act 1986.

Mr. Major: The proposed provisions for long-leaseholders under the Social Security Act 1986 will broadly mirror those in the present supplementary benefit and housing benefit schemes. We plan to lay the income support and housing benefit regulations in April this year for implementation in April 1988.

Homeless Persons

63. Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the long-term policy of his Department on the provision of overnight sheltered accommodation for homeless people in London; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lyell: Accommodation for homeless people is primarily a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment and for local housing authorities under part III of the Housing Act 1985.

However, this Department has certain responsibilities for people without a settled way of life. The Department provides temporary accommodation through its resettlement units of which there are seven in London. We plan to replace these units with smaller, more homely dwellings in the voluntary and local authority sector for which we will provide funding. Funds are already provided for voluntary organisations which currently offer a similar service.

In addition, funds were made available recently to cover the additional costs of voluntary organisations providing support and extra places of shelter for people sleeping rough during the spell of extremely severe weather.

Financial help with securing accommodation is available through the supplementary benefit scheme.

Condoms

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will take steps to enable general practitioners to supply condoms free on prescription; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: We have no plans to do so.

Social Security Budget

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what have been the reductions in the social security budget since 1979 caused by the changes in the bases of calculation of various benefits.

Mr. Major: There have been a substantial number of changes to the benefit structure since 1979, some increasing and some decreasing expenditure. Because there was never a rigid set of rules for the uprating of benefits, it is not possible to say what expenditure would now have been, had these changes not been made, nor is it possible to assess the effect of individual changes in isolation.

Hospital Beds

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what are the numbers of available beds in National Health Service hospitals in England for each year since 1979 expressed as totals and by specialist.

Mrs. Currie: The information is given in the table. Between 1979 and 1985 the number of in-patient cases treated increased by 17·7 per cent., from 5,400,120 to 6,353,812 in England.

Maternity Payments

Mr. James Lamond asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Oldham, Central and Royton received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Oldham, Central and Royton are expected to receive each year statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 1,475 claims to maternity allowance were made at Oldham (Central), the Department's office which covers the constituency although the boundaries are not conterminous.

It is not possible to predict how many women in Oldham, Central and Royton will qualify for statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance from April 1987. However, it is estimated that in total some 230,000 women will qualify for statutory maternity pay and 84,000 for maternity allowance in 1987-88.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in the Linlithgow constituency claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in the Linlithgow constituency are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Linlithgow constituency is covered by the Department's offices at Edinburgh, West and Bathgate and their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The number of claims received for maternity grant in each of the two offices during the calendar year 1986 were as follows:

	Number
Edinburgh, West	1,821
Bathgate	2,091

It is not possible to predict how many women in the constituency will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in the Edinburgh, Pentlands constituency claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in the Edinburgh, Pentland constituency are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Edinburgh, Pentlands constituency is covered by the Department's offices at Edinburgh City and Edinburgh South and their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. Information on the number of women in Coventry, South-East who received a maternity grant in 1986 is not available.

The number of claims for maternity grant received in the two Coventry local offices of the Department during the calendar year 1986 was as follows—

	Number
Coventry (East)	2,388
Coventry (West)	2,150

It is not possible to predict how many women in Coventry, South-East will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Leicester, West claimed maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund in each year after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Leicester, West constituency is covered by the Department's offices at Lower Hill street and Yeoman street, although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The number of claims received for maternity grant in each of the offices during the calendar year 1986 were as follows:

	Number
Lower Hill Street	2,099
Yeoman Street	3,022

It is not possible to predict how many women in the Leicester, West constituency will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in St. Helens, South claimed maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The St. Helens, South constituency is covered by the Department's office at St. Helens, although the local office boundary is not conterminous with the constituency. The number of claims received for maternity grant at the St. Helens office during the calendar year of 1986 was 2,051.

It is not possible to predict how many women in St. Helens, South will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in St. Helens, South received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available; and how many are expected to receive statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 1,425 claims to maternity allowance were made at St. Helens, the Department's office which covers the constituency although the boundaries are not conterminous.

Family Planning Clinics

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary State for Social Services what was the change in the number of minor girls attending family planning clinics between 1984 and 1985.

Mr. Newton: The information requested is given in the table.

Number of girls attending family planning clinics England

Age	1984	1985
Under 16	17,400	11,600
16 and 17	93,100	88,900

Infertility

Mrs. McCurley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what progress his Department is making on research into the causes of, and treatment for, male infertility.

Mrs. Currie: Such research would be a matter for the Medical Research Council, which receives an annual grant in aid from the budget of the Department of Education and Science. Exploratory discussions have taken place involving officials from the Department and the council, which may in time lead to the commissioning of research in this field.

Mrs. McCurley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will consider making funds available to each regional health authority to ensure the development of at least one fully equipped and specially recognised centre of excellence in infertility treatment within each region.

Mrs. Currie: It is for health authorities to decide how best to organise National Health Service infertility services in the light of local needs and priorities.

Bath Additions

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he proposes to amend paragraph 4531 of the "S manual" to restrict bath additions for people in need of more than one bath a week; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he has any plans to restrict bath additions to people in need of more than one bath a week; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: Supplementary benefit legislation provides that additional supplementary benefit for baths is payable in respect of any person who on medical grounds needs more than one bath a week. There are no plans to amend that provision prior to the introduction of the new income support scheme. Guidance to the independent adjudication officers on the interpretation of the legislation is the responsibility of the chief adjudication officer. I understand that he is reviewing the guidance contained in paragraph 4531 of the "S manual", in the light of recent advice that incontinence may not be medical grounds justifying additional benefit for baths within the terms of the legislation. He is awaiting decisions on two appeals to the Social Security Commissioners before considering whether to amend the "S manual", but he has issued guidance based on the new advice in answer to individual enquiries from adjudication officers who are responsible for deciding entitlement on the facts of each case.

Elective Surgery

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to his answer of 21 January, Official Report, column 2, what general information is collected centrally on the occasions on which elective surgery is suspended.

Mrs. Currie: Information is not collected centrally, but we keep in regular contact with regional health authorities and thus may learn of temporary difficulties as, for example, we did during the recent spell of bad weather.

Benefits

Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people in the Leeds metropolitan district council area have been in receipt of (a) supplementary benefit, (b) invalidity benefit and (c) housing benefit for each of the last five years.

Mr. Major: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many people in the Leeds metropolitan district council area have been in receipt of unemployment benefit for (a) less than six months, (b) six months to one year, (c) one year to two years and (d) more than two years at the latest date for which figures are available;

(2) how many (a) men and (b) women in the Leeds metropolitan district council area have been in receipt of unemployment benefit who are aged (a) under 25 years, (b) 25 to 35 years, (c) 35 to 50 years and (d) over 50 years, for each of the last five years.

Mr. Lyell: I regret that the information requested is not available.

Family Practitioner Committees

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what were, for the latest available year, the numbers of complaints received by family practitioner committees, the number of formal hearings heard by those committees, the number of practitioners found in breach of their terms of service, and the number of cases in which such doctors were fined.

Mr. Newton: I regret that information on the number of formal hearings held in service committee investigations could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The other details requested for 1986 are:—

	All practitioners	Doctors
the number of complaints resulting in formal investigations	1,875	1,138
the number of practitioners found in breach of their terms of service	694	309
the number of cases in which withholdings from practitioners' remuneration were directed by the Secretary of State	305	64

The term "practitioner" is used collectively to describe doctors, dentists, pharmacists and opticians.

Occupational Therapists

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what new funds are being allocated for occupational therapists' training to overcome the current shortage in qualified people to fill all the funded posts;

(2) how many funded positions for occupational therapists in the National Health Service and local authorities are at present vacant due to shortage of applicants.

Mr. Newton: The results of the most recent sample surveys by health authorities of shortfall are not yet available for technical reasons. I shall let the hon. Member have a further reply as soon as they are ready. Meanwhile, planned allocation for occupational therapy training in 1987-88 will be 12 per cent. greater than in the present year as compared with an increase of 6 per cent. in current spending on the hospital and community health services.

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the current waiting list of people awaiting assessment by occupational therapists in the United Kingdom as a percentage of the total number of assessments carried out by occupational therapists in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Newton: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member the information he seeks, since it is not collected centrally.

Population Statistics

Mr. Proctor asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will estimate the increase in numbers of the ethnic minority population of the United Kingdom for the latest convenient year; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: Estimates are not made for individual years, but it is estimated that, during the period 1981-86, the average annual increase in the size of the ethnic minority (non-white) population was about 90,000 a year. An equivalent estimate for the United Kingdom is not available.

An article, giving further information about the estimation of the size and rate of increase of the ethnic minority population was published in December 1986 in "Population Trends" No. 46.

Mr. Proctor asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will estimate for the latest convenient year the number of live births to mothers of New Commonwealth and Pakistan descent but who themselves were born in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: Estimates are not made for individual years, but it is estimated that, during the period 1983-85, an average of some 5,000 children were born in Great Britain each year to ethnic minority (non-white) mothers who were themselves born in the United Kingdom. An equivalent estimate for mothers of New Commonwealth and Pakistan descent, excluding those belonging to other ethnic minority groups, is not readily available.

Climatic Variability

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what plans he has to implement the recommendations relating to his responsibilities in the report "Social and Economic Responses to Climatic Variability" in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 27 January 1987, c. 235]: The report recommends that elderly people in danger from the cold should be made aware of the risks and sensible precautions publicised. The Health Education Council, funded by the Government, makes available each year, in conjunction with Age Concern, an information leaflet for elderly people containing simple, practical advice on keeping warm. The council has also recently launched a comprehensive pack of training and information materials on this subject for those in contact with elderly people. We believe that health and social services staff and voluntary organizations will find this initiative helpful. The report also recommends better targeting of the money available for heating additions. We believe that this will be achieved through the new income support scheme, which will provide help more directly through the premiums to those groups in greatest need. The new supplementary benefit exceptionally cold weather scheme also concentrates help on those most at risk from the cold, and on those parts of the country which are actually coldest.

ENERGY

Coal Board Houses

Mr. Ashton asked the Secretary of State for Energy what instructions he has given the Coal Board about the sale of Coal Board houses; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: None. Housing disposals are a management matter for British Coal.

Desulphurisation Plant

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Energy how many staff from his Department have made visits to foreign flue-gas desulphurisation plant or training centres to prepare for the operation of British desulphurisation plants.

Mr. Goodlad: Three members of my Department's staff have visited foreign flue gas desulphurisation plants in the normal course of their duties. The operation of flue gas desulphurisation plants at the Central Electricity Generating Board stations will not be a matter for my officials.

Pressurised Water Reactors

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will send an official to the Sandia laboratories at Albuquerque to discuss the experiment carried out there to investigate what would be likely to happen to a pressurised water reactor vessel flawed with a crack and to investigate its relevance to British reactors.

Mr. Goodlad: I am advised by Her Majesty's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate of the Health and Safety Executive that representatives of the Inspectorate have visited the Sandia test site.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Spain

Mr. Nicholls asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what has been the effect of the United Kingdom's presidency of the Council on trade relations with Spain and its territories.

Mr. Alan Clark: While the United Kingdom presidency did not in itself affect our excellent bilateral trade relations with Spain, I am pleased to say that these were fully maintained in 1986. United Kingdom exports to Spain increased to record levels last year, totalling £1,905 million.

Commodities (Imports and Exports)

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the value of (a) imports and (b) exports of the following commodities in 1980, 1984 and 1986 at current prices for (i) cereals,(ii) all agricultural products, (iii) motor vehicles, (iv) coal, (v) steel and (vi) electrical goods; and if he will show the net increase or decrease since 1980 in money and percentage terms.

Mr. Alan Clark: The information is as follows:

Value £ million

	(a) United Kingdom Imports (cif)			Change 1980-86		(b) United Kingdom Exports (fob)			Change 1980-86

Financial Aid

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what financial assistance has been provided by his Department directly to industry in Wales since 1979; and if he will outline the categories of support provided.

Mr. Butcher [pursuant to his reply, 6 February 1987, c. 839]: From 1 April 1979 to 31 March 1984 regional development grants (RDG) payments to companies in Wales totalled £470 million. Responsibility for administration of the RDG scheme in Wales was transferred to the Welsh Office from my Department in November 1984.

Complete information on other expenditure by my Department on a regional basis could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, we can say that under the selective investment scheme payments to industry in Wales since 1979 had totalled some £18 million at 31 March 1986. Also, under support for innovation under the Science and Technology Act 1965 more than £7·5 million has been paid to industry in Wales since 1 April 1982 (figures for the earlier years are not available).

HOME DEPARTMENT

Racial Incidents

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps are taken to monitor the implementation of (a) the minimum requirements and (b) the options set out in appendix B of the territorial operations instruction 1/86, best practice guidelines for recording and monitoring racial incidents; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Commissioner keeps these matters under continuous review.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of reported cases of racial incidents within the London borough of Newham for each month of 1986; how many of these cases led to arrests being made; and what was the total number of persons arrested.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information is set out in the table.

I am informed by the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that of the 244 incidents, 29 led to arrests, but figures are not available on the number of persons arrested.

Fire Stations

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what advice his Department gives to local authorities regarding fire station rebuilding and refurbishment.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: None.

Licensing

Mr. Colvin asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what records are kept by licensing magistrates of applications for and permissions granted for licences in the Occasional Permissions Act 1983.

Mr. Waddington: It is for individual courts to determine the form of records maintained on occasional permissions, but licensing justices need to be able to ensure that not more than four permissions in a 12-month period are granted to the same organisation.

Mr. Murphy asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the recent meeting on the Pompidou group on drug abuse and illicit trafficking.

Mr. Mellor: The eighth ministerial conference of the Council of Europe co-operation group to combat drug abuse and illicit trafficking in drugs (the Pompidou group) was held in London on 20 and 21 January under my chairmanship. The group is a multidisciplinary body which acts as the main forum for co-operation on all drug misuse and drug trafficking matters within Europe. The conference reviewed work since the seventh conference in 1984 and set a new programme of work for the group to pursue over the coming two to three years, comprising:

1 Practical measures for effective implemention of legislation to confiscate the proceeds of drug trafficking;
2 Mechanisms to improve co-ordination of controls in major ports and maritime surveillance;
3 Role of the media in shaping attitudes to drug misuse;
4 Role of primary health care personnel and short term crisis intervention;
5 Problems related to the operating and funding of treatment facilities;
6 Encouragement of co-operation and action by municipalities and local action groups;
7 Review of drugs legislation in member states in order to compare solutions adopted to deal with similar problems;
8 Preparation of a handbook setting out the division of responsibilities for drug questions at national level;
9 Detection and prevention of drug misuse in the armed forces;
10 Exchange of information on the role and effects of methadone in treatment.

The conference also decided that the group should continue to pursue the following topics on which work is already in hand:

1 Liaison between those responsible for airport control services within member states;
2 The role of the criminal justice system in responding to the needs of drugs misusers;
3 Ways of reaching young people particularly at risk of becoming involved in drug misuse;
4 Examination of the special problems experienced by female drug misusers;
5 The epidemiology of drug misuse in member states.

By consensus, it was agreed that the United Kingdom should continue to chair the group until the next ministerial conference.

A copy of the declaration of the conference has been placed in the Library.

Television Licences

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the estimated loss of revenue to the British Broadcasting Corporation resulting from Crown exemption from paying television licences.

Mr. Mellor: It is not practicable to estimate how much additional licence revenue would be received if the Wireless Telegraphy Act 1949 were binding on the Crown.

Wapping (Dispute)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many plain-clothes police officers were on duty at the News International dispute at Wapping on 24 January.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from the Commissioner that there were four plain clothes officers on duty in the vicinity of the demonstration.

Mr. Peter Shore asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the current Association of Chief Police Officers guidelines are binding on the officers responsible for policing the Wapping disturbances on 24 January.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No. The responsibility for maintaining the Queen's peace and enforcing the law rests with the chief officer of police concerned, in this case the Commissioner.

Mr. Peter Shore asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the terms of reference of the inquiry to be conducted by Chief Superintendent Wyrko of Northamptonshire into complaints against the alleged excessive use of force by the police during the Wapping demonstration on Saturday 24 January; how many complaints have been received so far; what publicity has been given to this inquiry; and to whom aggrieved members of the public should address their complaints.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that Chief Superintendent Wyrko has been appointed "to investigate all allegations and complaints against police officers and about police officers' actions arising from the disturbance at the Wapping demonstration on Saturday 24 January 1987".

Those terms of reference have been agreed with the Police Complaints Authority, which will be supervising the investigation. Twelve complaints have been received so far. I understand that both the Metropolitan police and the Police Complaints Authority have issued press notices about the inquiry. Members of the public who wish to make a complaint may do so at any police station or direct to the Police Complaints Authority.

Mr. Peter Shore asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether there is to be an internal inquiry conducted by the Metropolitan police into the tactics used to control the crowds at the recent Wapping demonstration.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No.

Police (Photographs)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of photographs taken by the Metropolitan police of detained, arrested and suspected persons for each year since 1979; and if he will indicate in how many cases in each year those photographs were destroyed when charges were not subsequently brought or the individual concerned was acquitted.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I am informed by the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that this information is not collected centrally.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will give the number of photographs taken of persons arrested, charged or otherwise detained as a result of the News International dispute; and what is the procedure adopted by the Metropolitan police with regard to the destruction of photographic material relating to those persons subsequently not charged or acquitted by the courts;

(2) in what percentage of cases the Metropolitan police have photographed and fingerprinted pickets and demonstrators arrested, charged or otherwise detained as a result of incidents arising from the News International dispute at Wapping.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from the Commissioner that photographs and fingerprints have been taken in all cases where those arrested or detained have been charged with recordable offences. Of 1,471 persons arrested up to 10 February, 857 (58 per cent.) have been so charged. The photographs and fingerprints of any person subsequently acquitted or bound over to keep the peace by the courts are destroyed in accordance with the code of practice for the identification of persons by police officers.

Police (Armed Patrols)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has as to how many police forces in England and Wales maintain armed patrols on either a 24-hour or a part-day basis.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Three forces in England and Wales operate a system of armed response patrol cars.

Police (Helicopters)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to how many times during the past 12 months a Metropolitan police helicopter has been used in Newham; what incidents were involved; and what arrests resulted from information received from the helicopter crew.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I will reply as soon as possible.

Police (Wrongful Acts)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the amounts paid in out-of-court settlements of claims arising from the wrongful acts of Metropolitan police officers in 1986; what were the amounts paid under awards made by courts in similar cases in 1986; and what was the number of cases concluded in 1986.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I will reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for 1986 the cases involving police officers in England and Wales where civil damages have been awarded and where, following the conclusion of the case, details of the court's findings have been forwarded to the Director of Public Prosecutions for further action.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for 1986 the cases involving Metropolitan police officers where civil damages have been awarded and where, following the conclusion of the case, details of the court's findings have been forwarded to the Director of Public Prosecutions for further action.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I will reply as soon as possible.

Passports

Mr. Harris asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to computerise passport issuing in the United Kingdom and to issue the new machine readable common European Community format passport.

Mr. Hurd: Our earlier target of 1987 has had to be revised. Nevertheless, the project to computerise passport issuing is on a firm footing and the contract for the supply of the computer system has been let to Software Sciences Limited. We now plan for the first of our offices to be computerised from July 1988 and for the system to be introduced in all offices by the end of 1989. It follows that the machine readable common format passport will now be produced in mid-1988. We understand that the Netherlands and West Germany have also revised their timetables and plan to introduce their machine readable passports in 1988, too.

School Inspections

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish a list showing, for each quarter of each year in which Her Majesty's inspectors' reports of inspections of schools have been published (a) the number of reports of full inspections published in the quarter and (b) the average time in months between dates of such inspections and dates of publication in that quarter; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: The detailed disaggregated information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Between 1 January 1983 and 31 December 1986 a total of 936 reports of all kinds by Her Majesty's inspectors were published. The quarterly split was as follows:

1983
January to March	29
April to June	66
July to September	63
October to December	79
1984
January to March	87
April to June	60
July to September	46
October to December	61
1985
January to March	40
April to June	48
July to September	64
October to December	52
1986
January to March	84
April to June	60
July to September	31
October to December	66

The average time between inspection and publication is close to one year. It remains the aim of Her Majesty's inspectors that reports should be issued to individual institutions within six months of an inspection. They are reviewing their procedures. However, no institution or governing body has to wait that long to know the findings of an inspection. Her Majesty's inspectors discuss these and other matters with the head or principal during and at the end of each inspection, and with the governing body shortly after.

Schools (Finance)

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how much was spent per pupil in secondary schools in each local authority in England for the most recent years for which figures are available; what is the average figure for England as a whole; and what are the 1979-80 comparable figures at constant prices.

Mr. Dunn: The information requested is given in the table.

School Population

Mr. Lawler asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science, further to his reply of 21 January, Official Report, c. 557, if he will give the total school population of the 10 local education authorities listed for 1985-86 and 1986-87, and projected figures for the next three years.

Mr. Dunn: The total number of pupils in maintained schools in 1985-86 in the local education authorities listed was as follows. The numbers relate to a one-day count of pupils in January 1986. Pupil numbers for 1986-87 are not yet available. Projections of pupil numbers for local education authorities are not available centrally.

Total number of pupils in maintained schools[1]—1985-86[2]

LEA	Number
Inner London	289,768
Essex	234,776
Hampshire	221,497
Humberside	146,137
Derbyshire	148,370
Manchester	72,979
Staffordshire	168,194
Kent	229,222
Gloucestershire	76,913
Suffolk	93,286

[1] Includes part-time pupils in nursery and primary schools and pupils in special schools.

Projections of pupil numbers for succeeding years are made only for England as a whole.

Literacy and Numeracy

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what are his aims and policy on adult education in basic skills of literacy and numeracy; what are the standards of achievement considered appropriate for a child aged 16 years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend's policy in adult education is to encourage LEAs and voluntary bodies to make available an appropriate range of learning opportunities for adults who lack basic skills of literacy and numeracy, within the constraints of available resources. To this end, he gives high priority to the funding of the Adult Literacy and Basic Skills Unit in order to stimulate further development of adult basic skills provision. Grant has risen from over £470,000 in 1980-81 to more than £2,050,000 in 1986-87, a fourfold increase in cash terms.

It is also my right hon. Friend's aim that 80 per cent. to 90 per cent. of 16-year-olds should attain at least the foundation level of GCSE grade F in a minimum of five subjects, including English and mathematics. We are developing policies for the improvement of the school curriculum to achieve that aim.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish a table showing for each recent year, with a breakdown by budget heading or project name, his Department's expenditure on adult education in basic skills of literacy and numeracy, expressed in figures adjusted to constant prices; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: The expenditure from the Department's adult education budget on the adult literacy and basic skills unit since 1980-81 is as follows:

Grant paid in 1986-87 real terms measured by the GDP deflator at market prices

Financial Year	£
1980-81	659,245
1981-82	1,239,548
1982-83	1,553,311
1983-84	1,638,658
1984-85	1,487,004
1985-86	[1]1,687,140
1986-87	[1]2,052,000

Some literacy and numeracy provision is also funded as part of more general DES grant-aided activities undertaken by the Workers Educational Association, the national associations primarily concerned with adult education, residential colleges for adults and the REPLAN programme. In these cases, resources for literacy and numeracy are not separately earmarked.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what statistical information is available to his Department on adults with reading, writing and arithmetical skills less than those considered appropriate for a child age 16 years; what relevant surveys have been undertaken in recent years by his Department or other bodies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: The National Child Development Study survey of 1981 found that 10 per cent. of the 23-year-olds asked said that they had had reading problems since leaving school and 3 per cent. said that these problems had made things difficult for them in everyday life. In the same survey, 5 per cent. of those asked said that they had had numeracy problems since leaving school and 1·5 per cent. said these problems had made things difficult for them. A survey was also conducted in 1981 by Social Surveys (Gallup Polls) Limited which tested the numeracy skills of a sample of the adult population. It found that 10 per cent. could not handle simple addition, and higher percentages had difficulty with more complex numeracy tasks.

A recent survey by Mori of the basic literacy and numeracy skills of a sample of the population of Rochdale found that 10 per cent. of the teenagers asked said that they had some problems with reading, 16 per cent. had some problems with spelling and 18 per cent. had some problems with basic maths. Of the adults asked, 7 per cent. had some problems with reading, 13 per cent. had some problems with spelling and 13 per cent. had some problems with maths.

There are difficulties in comparing these results with the reading, writing and arithmetical skills considered appropriate for a child aged 16.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he has taken to co-ordinate action on adult education in basic skills of literacy and numeracy with the work of other departments in contact with large numbers of members of the public; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: Membership of the management committee of the Government-funded Adult Literacy and Basic Skills Unit facilitates co-ordination of the work of the Department of Education and Science, the Welsh Office, the Home Office and the Manpower Services Commission. There is also frequent day to day contact at a working level between the unit, the Department of Education and Science, other relevant Government Departments and the MSC.

Boarding

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) what is the number of boarding school places currently taken up by local education authorities (a) in schools maintained by other authorities and (b) in the independent sector; and what were the equivalent figures for September for each of the years 1980 to 1986 inclusive;

(2) whether he will give details under all appropriate headings of the range of statistical information available to his Department relating to the discharge by local education authorities of their duty to meet essential boarding school needs under section 52(1)(a) of the Education Act 1944.

Mr. Dunn: This information is not collected centrally.

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the current number of boarding school places provided in maintained schools in England by local education authorities; and what were the equivalent figures as of September for each of the years 1980 to 1986, inclusive.

Mr. Dunn: The information is available neither in the form nor over the whole period requested. The number of boarders in maintained schools in England in January for each year shown was as follows:

	Number
1983	8,341
1984	7,884
1985	7,583
1986	7,118

GCSE

Mr. David Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the rate of supply of teaching aids for the General Certificate of Secondary Education in the southern region; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: The southern examining group's GCSE syllabuses contain full specimen question papers and marking schemes, together with a wide range of information about the assessment of course work. In addition, the group is producing further in-service training aids in the form of open-learning packages containing written materials, which are currently being sent to schools.

Meningococcal Infections

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how much of his Department's money has been spent on research into meningococcal infections in (i) the last year and (ii) the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Walden: The Medical Research Council, which receives its grant in aid from the Department's science budget, has spent the following sums on research into meningococcal infections:

1982-83	11
1983-84	13
1985-86	27

Research work on meningococcal infections may also be carried out in universities and medical schools using funds allocated for teaching and research on the advice of the University Grants Committee. Details of any such work are not collected centrally.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Supplementary Benefits

Mr. Hume asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the number and total value of single payments under supplementary benefit made in each social security office in Northern Ireland in 1986 in respect of claims made before the amendments to the regulations came into effect and the amounts and values of payments in respect of claims made under the amended regulations.

Mr. Needham: Information is not readily available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Single Payments Cases

Mr. Hume asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the backlog of single payments cases which built up in 1986 and the delays in processing claims, indicating the case load and the rate at which they have been processed.

Mr. Needham: In 1986 there was a marked increase in single payment claims due mainly to the declaration of a period of exceptionally severe weather in February resulting in some 70,000 claims and a build-up of other single payment claims in some social security offices in the weeks prior to the changes in single payment regulations effective from 11 August 1986.

During the period 18 December 1985 to 16 December 1986, a total of 375,606 single payment claims were received. These were processed as quickly as possible with priority being given to the more urgent cases. Backlogs of claims varied from office to office and from month to month. Similar variations also applied to clearance time per case, which ranged from 10-12 days at the beginning of the year to more than 28 days in the peak month of August. However, overall the average daily clearance rate was 1,473 with the average clearance time per case being 12·4 days. Additional resources were made available to assist those offices with abnormal backlogs and by the end of the year the position had returned to normal.

Prisoners (Maltreatment)

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, the number of allegations of police maltreatment of prisoners held in their custody under the emergency provisions in Northern Ireland during the years 1975 through 1985 on a year-by-year basis; how many investigations were held and how many of the allegations were upheld during the same years, again on a year by year basis.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 21 January 1987, c.586]: The information is not available in the form or for the period requested. However, the total number of complaints as recorded by the Police Complaints Board for Northern Ireland alleging irregularities of procedures by persons arrested and held in custody under the emergency legislation is as follows:

	Number
1979	220
1980	133
1981	81
1982	162
1983	189
1984	220
1985	232

These figures represent around 10 per cent. of the total number of all complaints recorded by the Police Complaints Board for Northern Ireland during the period.

Detailed statistics from the Police Complaints Board on the outcome of the cases are available only from 1984. They are as follows:

	1984	1985
Investigations completed	62	75
Withdrawn by complainant	29	16
Investigations incomplete because of non co-operation of complainant	129	141
Total	220	232

In all cases complaints are investigated by the RUC. In addition, the papers are forwarded to the Police Complaints Board for consideration of disciplinary action. Disciplinary action was not considered appropriate in any of these cases.

WALES

Gross Domestic Product

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the Welsh gross domestic product for each of the last seven years.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Estimates of the Welsh gross domestic product for each of the last seven years are given in the following table:

Gross domestic product at factor cost: £ million at current prices

	£ million
1979	7,343
1980	8,203
1981	8,727
1982	9,674

Labour Statistics

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales at the latest date for which figures are available, how many people in (a) Wales, (b) Mid-Glamorgan and (c) Clwyd have been unemployed for five years or more in numerical terms and as a percentage of the total unemployment figure; and if he will give the same sum for comparative months from 1980 to 1986 inclusive.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales what was the number of Welsh people employed in (a) service sector and (b) manufacturing sector jobs in Wales in each year from 1979 to 1986 inclusive.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The estimated numbers of employees in employment in Wales in the service and manufacturing sectors (excluding the self-employed) are given in the following table:

Employees in employment: Wales Thousands at September

	Services	Manufacturing
1979	572	317
1980	565	278
1981	561	239
1982	549	223

Chest Consultants

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many chest consultants there are currently in Welsh hospitals, in whole-time equivalent terms and per head of population; and what was the figure for February in each of the last seven years.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The required information is given in the table:

	Consultants in Thoracic Medicine [1] Whole-time equivalents	Rate per million population
1979	18·1	6·5
1981	12·1	4·3

Capital and Improvement Grants

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales what changes have been made to the rules regarding the payment of capital grants and improvement grants since 1979; and why changes were instituted.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: I will write to the hon. Gentleman and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

ADAS

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the future of the Agricultural Development Advisory Service in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The Agricultural Development and Advisory Service (ADAS) is a part of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and operates in Wales as the agent of the Secretary of State for Wales. These arrangements will continue in future.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Hong Kong

Mr. Yeo asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the Sino-British agreement for the return of Hong Kong to Chinese rule in 1997 in the light of recent political events in China.

Mr. Renton: We have noted statements by Chinese officials that China's policies towards Hong Kong are unaffected by recent internal developments. We remain confident in the commitment of the Chinese Government to the full implementation of the Sino-British joint declaration on the future of Hong Kong.

Afghanistan

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations Her Majesty's Government have made to the Soviet Union on Afghanistan; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: We have taken every opportunity to see clarification of Soviet intentions and to emphasise the need for a genuine settlement to bring peace and freedom to Afghanistan and enable its people to determine their own future. I did so when I received a Supreme Soviet delegation on 3 February; so did Her Majesty's ambassador in Moscow on 29 January; so also did my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, the hon. Member for Mid-Sussex (Mr. Renton) with the Soviet ambassador on 20 January.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had recently with the Government of Pakistan with particular reference to the situation on the Afghanistan border and the provision of aid for refugees from Afghanistan; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Afghan refugees continue to flee to Pakistan. We remain in touch with the Pakistan Government on the subject of aid. My hon. Friend the Minister for Overseas Development, the hon. Member for Bath (Mr. Patten), announced a further allocation of £3·5 million during his visit to Pakistan in November, as he told the House on 2 February.

Middle East

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he proposes to initiate any discussions within the European Economic Community about the role within an overall settlement in the middle east of the promotion of human and civil rights on the west bank and in the Gaza strip.

Mr. Renton: Developments in Arab territories occupied by Israel are kept under close review by Ministers of the Twelve.

We have made clear on many occasions to the Israeli Government that improvements in conditions in the occupied territories would improve the climate for peace negotiations.

Terrorism

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the latest progress on arrangements for the pooling of information about terrorism by European Governments.

Mr. Eggar: As I told my hon. Friend the Member for Leicester, East (Mr. Bruinvels) on 12 January, we gave high priority to measures to combat terrorism during the United Kingdom presidency. Ministers met in the TREVI group on 25 September 1986 and 9 December 1986 and there was an informal meeting of Interior and Justice Ministers on 20 October 1986. The subject was also discussed by Foreign Ministers meeting in political co-operation and by Heads of State/Government at the European Council on 5 to 6 December.

These meetings resulted in enhanced practical co-operation between member states on counter-terrorism measures, including the setting up of a secure communications link between police forces of the member states; intensification of liaison between counter-terrorism experts and mutual exchanges of information about people excluded from the territory of any one member state. We will continue to do everything possible to promote effective counter-terrorist co-operation among the Twelve.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many checks Falkland Islands fishery protection ships have made on vessels fishing inside the Falkland Islands conservation zone since 1 February.

Mr. Eggar: In the first week of the implementation of the Falkland Islands interim conservation and management zone, which came into effect on 1 February, Falkland Islands Government fisheries protection officers boarded six fishing vessels.

El Salvador

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government are taking to monitor instances of human rights violations by Salvadorean military and security forces both before and after they receive training by United Kingdom personnel.

Mrs. Chalker: We have made it clear that candidates for training should be both professionally and personally suitable. Our current monitoring of the human rights situation in El Salvador will be continued after the cadet has returned.

Shell Tanker (Attack)

Mr. Frank Cook asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations Her Majesty's Government have made and to whom about the attack on the Shell tanker Isomeria in the straits of Hormuz at 20.00 hours on 23 January; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: I summoned the Iranian chargé d'affaires, Mr. Akhundzadeh-Basti, on 26 January to deliver a protest at this premeditated, totally unprovoked and unjustifiable attack. The acting head of the British interests section in Tehran delivered a similar protest to the Iranian Ministry of Foreign Affairs. We await a satisfactory Iranian response.

Soviet Jews

Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has as to the numbers of Jews who were allowed to emigrate from the Soviet Union during the month of January 1987.

Mr. Renton: According to our information, 92. We continue to press for a significant increase in the numbers permitted to leave.

Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information the Minister of State, the hon. Member for Mid Sussex (Mr. Renton), received during his recent discussions in Moscow about the effect of the new Soviet law narrowing the family reunification invitations to Soviet Jews who wish to emigrate, especially on those who have already applied outside the new criteria; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave him on 26 January at column 41.

Nuclear Test Ban Treaty

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy of 29 January, Official Report, columns 334-35, on information made available on technical verification of a nuclear test ban treaty to bodies in the United States of America, if he will list those United States technical authorities with which regular contact on these matters is maintained.

Mr. Renton: We are in regular contact with the Departments of both Defence and Energy, in particular the Defence Advanced Research Projects Agency which is the umbrella organisation for research into technical issues relevant to a comprehensive nuclear test ban.

Five Continents Peace Initiative

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy of 29 January, Official Report, column 335, on the five continents peace initiative, if he will place a copy of the replies mentioned in the Library.

Mr. Renton: No.

BBC Scotland

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if his Department was consulted about the issue of warrants for the search of British Broadcasting Corporation premises in Glasgow.

Mr. Renton: No.

Meeting with Philip Habib

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs why, on 22 January, he had to cancel a meeting with Philip Habib; and when this meeting was arranged.

Mrs. Chalker: The meeting of my right hon. and learned Friend with Mr. Philip Habib was arranged some days before it was due to take place. It was cancelled because the Foreign Secretary had to attend other urgent business. Mr. Habib was received by a senior FCO official instead.

Middle East Association

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs why he asked his hon. Friend the Member for Mid-Sussex (Mr. Renton) to deliver his speech to the Middle East Association on 22 January in the Shell centre; and when the invitation from the Middle East Association was accepted.

Mr. Renton: The invitation to address the Middle East Association on the occasion of its 25th Anniversary was accepted by my right hon. and learned Friend on 21 July 1986. Due to urgent Government business he was, with much regret, unable to fulfil the engagement. I was therefore asked to deliver his speech at the Shell centre.

BBC External Services

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects to announce agreement with the British Broadcasting Corporation on a revised financial memorandum governing the financial relationship between external services and his Department.

Mr. Eggar: We expect to reach agreement soon with the BBC on a revised financial memorandum on the external services' finance and principles governing expenditure. We believe that it should include provision for the National Audit Office to carry out economy, efficiency and effectiveness examinations.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give details of the changes proposed and effected in the British Broadcasting Corporation's external services output following publication of the Perry review.

Mr. Eggar: Since publication of the Perry report, the BBC external services are broadcasting a post-1950 record of 732¾ hours per week. The net increase of 5¼ hours broadcasting per week over the pre-Perry output breaks down as follows:

	Time change
Increases per week
English by Radio service	2 hours
Portuguese for Africa service	1 hour, 45 minutes
Indonesian service	1 hour, 45 minutes
Persian service	1 hour, 45 minutes
Decreases per week
German service	1 hour, 45 minutes
Hungarian service	45 minutes
Czech/Slovak service	45 minutes

Diplomats

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the answer of 6 February to the hon. Member for Leicester, East, if he will make it his policy to require the removal from the United Kingdom of any diplomat for any alleged drunken driving offence; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Our policy is fully set out in the White Paper on "Diplomatic Immunities and Privileges" (Cmnd. 9497), particularly paragraphs 65 and 69. There are no current plans for a change.

Fernando Perez (Abduction)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to the Spanish authorities to secure the return of Fernando Perez, a ward of court who was abducted from his school in Eastbourne on 10 October 1986 and taken by his father to the Canary Islands.

Mr. Eggar: Fernando Perez has both British and Spanish nationality. In accordance with international practice, dual nationals cannot be protected by Her Majesty's Government in the country of their other nationality.

Wardship orders taken out in this country can be enforced abroad by the local court under the terms of the European convention on the recognition and enforcement of decisions concerning the custody of children. We understand that solicitors acting for Mrs. Perez, the child's mother, have been advised of the correct channel for making application.

Our consular officers in Spain have no authority to expedite proceedings: this is a matter for the local court, in which we cannot intervene.

Our consul in Las Palmas has, however, informally drawn the court's attention to the wardship order, and has also agreed to effect service of the wardship papers against the child's father on behalf of Mrs. Perez's solicitors.

Immigration

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received in respect of de-oxyribosenucleic acid testing in connection with immigration cases.

Mr. Eggar: We have received representations from hon. and right hon. Members on behalf of constituents requesting the DNA test, together with similar representations from immigrant organisations and law centres. I hope that it may be possible to include a few of these cases in the pilot scheme to which I referred in my written answer to the hon. Member on 28 January at column 283.

South Africa

Mr. Patrick McNair-Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish details of all the measures currently being taken by the Government against South Africa.

Mrs. Chalker: The restrictive measures currently being applied by us are as follows:

An embargo on arms exports to South Africa (United Nations Security Council resolution 418);
An embargo on arms imports from South Africa (United Nations Security Council resolution 558);
No military co-operation with South Africa;
The recall (since 1985) of British military attachés from South Africa;
The discouraging of sporting links with South Africa (1977 Gleneagles agreement);
The discouraging of cultural and scientific events and agreements with South Africa except where these contribute towards the ending of apartheid or have no possible role in supporting it;
No exports of oil to South Africa;
No collaboration with South Africa in nuclear development;
A ban on all new Government loans to the Government of South Africa and their agencies;
A ban on the import of gold coins from South Africa;
No Government funding for trade missions to South Africa or for participation in exhibitions and trade fairs in South Africa;
A voluntary ban on new investment in South Africa;
A voluntary ban on the promotion of tourism to South Africa;
A ban on iron and steel imports from South Africa;
A ban on the export of sensitive equipment to the South African police and armed forces.

THE ARTS

English Regional Arts Association

Mr. Favell asked the Minister for the Arts what proportion of the English Regional Arts Associations' expenditure was accounted for by administration in the latest available year.

Mr. Luce: The proportion varies considerably between one association and another. I am pleased to learn that the Arts Council is to conduct a review of its own administrative costs and those of the regional arts associations, and I have asked the chairman to report to me on the findings.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Government Purchasing Procedures

Mr. Hannam asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has any plans to change the procedures used for Government purchasing.

Mr. Brooke: Government Departments are continually updating their practices in pursuit of a more commercial approach. In their search for greater value for money, Departments are helped and advised by the Central Unit on Purchasing, set up in August 1985 following a report by the Cabinet Office (MPO), "Government Purchasing". Information about the unit's work so far was given in the answer by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the hon. Member for Langbaurgh (Mr. Holt) on 19 November at column 229.

Government Expenditure

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will explain why, in table 2.4 of the Government's expenditure plans 1978-1989-90, there are no projections to 1990 for the National Health Service, the Northern Ireland Government services, local authorities or the nationalised industries and local authorities (trading).

Mr. MacGregor: My hon. Friend's question appears to be directed at the public sector manpower table published in table 2.14 of Cmnd. 56. A note to table 2.14 states:

"Manpower projections for future years are not included for local authorities, the National Health Service, public corporations and other central government. The Government does not directly control manpower numbers in these areas. Its influence is exercised essentially through expenditure and financial controls".

However, the figures provided for the Northern Ireland Government service include the Northern Ireland Departments and the Northern Ireland Office, whose manpower is under the control of the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland—see table 3.18.37 of Cmnd. 56.

Film Industry

Mr. Janner asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he is prepared to consider similar Inland Revenue write-off proposals for the British film industry as exist in other major western film producing countries; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Premium Bond Draws

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his reply of 6 February, if he will give sub-totals for the unclaimed prize money from premium bond draws by year; and what is his policy in respect of unclaimed prize money.

Mr. Ian Stewart: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Inland Revenue (Cash Limit)

Mr. Colvin asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether any changes are proposed in the cash limit for the Inland Revenue.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class XIX, vote 7 will be increased by £4,500,000 from £958,817,000 to £963,317,000 to cover extra spending on professional assistance, current computer costs, accommodation and training which is partly offset by a reduction in capital spending on computers. The increase will be charged to the reserve. At the same time, the Department's running cost target will be increased by £6,500,000 from £914,950,000 to £921,450,000.

PRIME MINISTER

Young Conservatives Conference

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Prime Minister if any public expenditure was incurred in her travel arrangements to the Young Conservatives' conference on 7 February.

The Prime Minister: The cost of my travel to the conference does not fall on public funds.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

State Security

Mr. Dalyell asked the Attorney-General what steps he takes, when considering prosecutions or the issue of warrants in relation to offences under the Official Secrets Act, to ascertain the damage to public interest caused by the particular disclosure.

The Solicitor-General: My right hon. and learned Friend takes such steps as are practicable to ensure that he is fully advised of all factors which affect the public interest. These will depend on the scope and nature of the breach of the Official Secrets Acts that is alleged in a particular case.

Fernando Perez (Abduction)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Attorney-General what efforts are being made to secure the return of Fernando Perez, a ward of court who was abducted from his school in Eastbourne on 10 October 1986 and taken by his father to the Canary Islands.

The Solicitor-General: I understand that Mrs. Perez's solicitors are applying for an order granting her care and control of the child and a declaration that his removal was unlawful. If Mrs. Perez obtains the order and declaration, an application for the return of the child may be made to the Spanish authorities on her behalf by the Lord Chancellor's Department under the Child Abduction and Custody Act 1985.

ENVIRONMENT

Conifers (Air Pollution)

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what evidence he has about the effect of air pollution on the vitality of British conifers.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Forestry Commission has been conducting annual surveys of forest tree health and has recently published the findings of its 1986 survey. This suggests a worsening of tree condition, but I understand that there is no firm evidence that points to a cause such as air pollution as distinct from other factors such as climate, or the depredations of insects or fungi. The Forestry Commission and my Department are continuing their research to further the understanding of the roles played by climate, soil factors and pollutants and their interaction in tree health. In consultation with the NCC and other interested bodies, further extension in terms of species and areas covered are being planned for 1987.

Local Authority Housing

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list in the Official Report those local authorities in England whose total of housing classified as unfit together with those classified as fit but lacking basic amenities is over 5 per cent. of their total housing stock as recorded on form HIP 1; and if he will give the percentage in each case;

(2) if he will list in the Official Report those local authorities which have over 20 per cent. of their total housing stock indicated in form HIP 1 as being non sub-standard dwellings in need of renovation; and if he will give the percentage in each case.

Mr. Tracey: The inforation requested is as follows. Numbers reported are not necessarily comparable as authorities' criterion may differ and national totals are not consistent with estimates from the English house condition survey of 1981.

[1]Return of non-substandard dwellings in need of renovation incomplete in respect of housing associations or other public sector or both.

Derelict Land Grant

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many derelict land grants have been paid in respect of schemes in Birmingham in each of the past three years; how much grant was paid; and what was the value of the schemes;

(2) if he will list current applications for derelict land grants in Birmingham and the west midlands;

(3) if he will list all projects funded by derelict land grants in the west midlands during the past three years.

Mr. John Patten: I shall answer these questions shortly.

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if his Department carries out any checks on the form of contracts used in respect of projects funded by derelict land grant.

Mr. John Patten: The Department specifies that tenders for local authority reclamation schemes shall contain the general conditions of contract issued by the Institute of Civil Engineers in collaboration with the Federation of Civil Engineering Contractors, the general conditions of engagement issued by the Landscape Institute or the standard form of building contract produced by the joint contracts tribunal, as appropriate. Copies of the tender documents must be submitted to the Department with the preferred tender. Similar conditions will apply to private sector reclamation schemes from 1 April 1987.

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if contractors carrying out work funded by use of derelict land grant are required to state if they are using labour-only sub-contractors with or without the use of a tax exemption certificate.

Mr. John Patten: The Department imposes no such requirement.

Planning Appeals

Mr. Steen asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply of 3 February, Official Report, column 620, why Mr. P. R. D. Young, his Department's inspector, was appointed to hear an appeal in relation to a block of flats adjacent to Kittery court on the heritage coastline at Kingswear, Devon, when an identical previous application had been refused by him on the advice of the High Court; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: When an inspector's decision is quashed by the High Court, the appellant rightly expects his appeal to be redetermined as quickly as possible. This can best be achieved by redetermination by the original inspector. The same inspector will therefore generally be reappointed unless, in the particular circumstances of a case, there are good reasons to appoint another in his place.

GLC (Abolition)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list what studies he has initiated since the abolition of the Greater London Council to monitor and assess any effects which might have occurred as a result of the transfer of responsibilities from the Greater London Council to other bodies.

Mr. Chope: Information is collected from local authorities under section 56 of the Local Government Act 1985 and analysed regularly in order to assess the overall costs and savings from abolition.

London Boroughs (Expenditure)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what factors governed the timing of the substantive reply on 6 February to a question from the hon. Member for Newham, North-West about expenditure by London boroughs to which a holding reply had been given on 5 February, Official Report, column 774.

Mr. Chope: In trying to answer the hon. Member's previous question I authorised my officials to investigate all possible sources of the information sought. This was not completed to my satisfaction in time for a substantive reply to be given on 5 February and I therefore gave a holding reply. Shortly afterwards it became apparent that I would be unable to provide the required figures and so I issued my substantive reply at the earliest opportunity.

Local Authorities (Capital Receipts)

Mr. Coombs asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the information he has collected on the accumulated capital receipts held by local authorities at the end of 1985-86.

Mr. Ridley: My Department has now received accumulated capital receipts returns for 1985-86 from 97 per cent. of English local authorities. On the basis of these, it is estimated that at the end of 1985-86 local authorities in England held accumulated receipts giving rise to spending permission in later years of £7·4 billion. Some of these receipts were notional, such as leasing disposals. The cash from much of the remainder had been used for such purposes as repaying debt and financing capitalised housing repairs. After allowing for such factors only £4·3 billion out of the £7·4 billion spending permission could be converted into cash. But very little even of this £4·3 billion was actually held on deposit at a bank. Most of it had been temporarily lent within the authority and spent for other purposes. In such instances it could only be turned into cash if the authority undertook further borrowing.

I have today placed in the Library a table showing for each local authority which has provided a return (a) the accumulated receipts giving rise to spending permission and (b) the amount which could be converted into cash.

Coal Board Houses

Mr. Ashton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will make a statement on the recent discussions he has had with the Coal Board on the sale of Coal Board houses.

Mr. Tracey: I have written to the hon. Member and my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State at the Department of Energy and I have also written to several other Members with an interest in this issue.

Minespoil

Mr. Iain Mills asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has now received the Ove Arup report on the diposal of minespoil; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: The contractors have submitted their main research report and I have today placed copies in the Library. As part of their research the contractors also produced an evaluative framework to assist in the assessment of alternative options for the disposal of colliery spoil which we intend to publish shortly together with a planning circular encouraging its use in appropriate circumstances. Copies of the consultation draft and the evaluation framework were placed in the House Library in August last year.

Disabled People

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Mid-Kent (Mr. Rowe) on 28 January, Official Report, column 241, he will list the housing authorities which did not either make adaptations to the homes of people with disabilities in 1985-86 or support adaptations through improvement grants; and if he will make a further statement.

Mr. Tracey: It is for each housing authority to determine its own priorities for housing investment and to decide whether there is a need for purpose-built dwellings or for adaptations to existing dwellings to make them suitable for occupation by disabled people.

Programmes of adaptation and new build are best considered over a period of more than one year. Of the 12 authorities not covered by my reply of 28 January, 11 have reported action in the years 1984 to 1986, either through new build, or by adaptations, or through improvement grants. One, Hillingdon borough council, has made no returns of housebuilding, renovation of its housing stock or improvement grants for several years.

Caravan Sites

Mr. Lawler asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what criteria he uses in deciding whether to grant an application from a local authority for designation under the Caravan Sites Act 1968; if he will now designate Bradford as an authority under that Act; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: My right hon. Friend normally requires to be satisfied that adequate accommodation exists for the needs of those gypsies who reside in or resort to the area to be designated. He has power to designate on the grounds that it is not necessary or expedient to make adequate provision but, as he stated in reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Hornsey and Wood Green (Sir H. Rossi) on 6 February, he would require convincing reasons for designation in those circumstances. My right hon. Friend has no powers to designate any area except on the application of the local authorities for the area concerned.

Mr. Lawler asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those local authorities that have been designated under the Caravans Act 1968 with the number of pitches they provide for gypsy encampments and the total population of those authorities.

Mr. Tracey: Following is the list of designated authorities. A list of the sites and number of pitches provided by local authorities is available in the House Library. Information on the populations of local authority areas is available in "Vital Statistics 1985" published by OPCS and also available in the Library.

[1] Order due to come into force on 20 February 1987

Local Authority Housing

Mr. Wheeler asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many empty council-owned flats and houses there are in the London boroughs of Brent, Camden and Tower Hamlets.

Mr. Tracey: The latest available figures on vacant council dwellings were provided by local authorities in their housing investment programme returns and the totals for these three boroughs appear in column A99 on page 8.6 of the "HIP1 (1986) All items print" which is in the Library.

Land Register

Mr. Steen asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the land on which notices have been served as a result of their being on the register for vacant and derelict public land, and the time interval between service of notice under the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980 and the completion of the sale for each parcel of land on which notices were served.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to his reply, 28 January 1987, c. 244]: Notices under section 99 of the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980 have been issued in respect of the sites listed as follows. Directions under section 98 of the Act have subsequently been issued in appropriate cases and these are denoted by an asterisk. Decisions have not yet been taken on whether a direction is appropriate on those sites denoted by a dagger. The period between the issue of a section 98 direction and compliance with it, or where directed sales have not yet taken place the period since the issue of a section 98 direction, is shown against each of the sites concerned.

Mr. Steen asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many acres of land have been placed on the register of vacant and derelict public land since its inception in 1981; if he will show in tabular form the ownership and size of parcel of land removed from the register since 1981; what new sites have been added each year; and under whose ownership;

(2) if he will list the parcels of land which have moved (a) on and (b) off the register of vacant and derelict public land in each of the last five years, identifying how much has been removed by disposal in each year; and what percentage of such land belongs to: (i) Government (ii) local government (iii) nationalised industries (iv) statutory undertakers or (iv) any other category;

(3) if he will set out in tabular form the ownership and size of the parcels of public land which have been removed from the register of vacant and derelict public land since the first register was published in 1981, showing how much was realised in each sale and the owner.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to his reply, 28 January 1987, c. 244-45]: By 31 December 1986, 149,000 acres of land had been entered on the register of unused and underused land owned by public bodies; less than 100,000 acres now remain. The following tables show the remainder of the information that is available at reasonable cost.

Opinion Polls

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what use his Department has made of commissioned opinion polls in the past five years.

Mr. Ridley [pursuant to his reply, 5 February 1987, c. 770]: In 1986 the Department of the Environment commissioned NOP Market Research Ltd to conduct a survey amongst the general public in England and Wales to investigate atttitudes to a number of environmental protection problems. A report on the results will be published shortly.

TRANSPORT

Road Markings

Sir Anthony Grant asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will initiate a study of the French road marking system designed to enable drivers to maintain a proper distance between vehicles in order to minimise accidents;

(2) if he will initiate a study of the French chevron system on roads in order to minimise accidents in fog conditions.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Department is aware of these experimental chevron markings. No evidence that they are effective is yet available for study in the United Kingdom.

Motorways (Compensation)

Mr. Iain Mills asked the Secretary of State for Transport what criteria are used by his Department and the district valuer to assess the degree of compensation resulting from increased use of motorways.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Compensation payable following the opening of a road is based on an assessment of the depreciation in the current value of the property attributable to noise and other relevant effects of its use. Account is taken of any future increase in the use of the road which may then reasonably be expected.

Mr. Iain Mills asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to review the operation of the Land Compensation Act 1973 in the compensation of those affected by increased traffic resulting from extensions of motorways; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The operation of part I of the Act as it applies to properties affected by highways is kept under review. If my hon. Friend has a particular point in mind, perhaps he will write to me.

M42 (Noise)

Mr. Iain Mills asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has received representations about the increase in noise resulting from the recent extension of the M42.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Department has received a number of representations.

The relevant statutory provisions are the Noise Insulation Regulations and part I of the Land Compensation Act 1973. Correspondents are being advised on both procedures and conditions governing eligibility.

Orange Badge Scheme

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will extend the orange badge scheme to central London; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: That is primarily for the local authorities concerned to decide.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list all the organisations which have responded to his Department's discussion paper on the orange badge scheme.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The following 178 organisations have responded to the Department's discussion paper on the orange badge scheme:

In addition, there were 77 responses from individual local authorities and 409 from individuals.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will take steps to abolish the two-hour limit which currently applies to the orange badge scheme outside scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: This is one of a very wide range of suggestions and contributions we have received in response to our discussion paper. They are being examined.

Accident Investigation and Prevention Teams

Mr. Carter-Lewis asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will consider providing financial assistance to those local authorities which have not yet established specialist accident investigation and prevention teams; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Accident investigation and prevention work (AIP) is an extremely effective way of reducing casualties. We continue to encourage all highway authorities to give priority to the use of resources for this purpose. We want to see all highway authorities saving life through these proven means.

We are considering what further might be done to encourage the development and expansion of AIP work — whether or not highway authorities already have teams in existence.

Cherished Numbers

Mr. Favell asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library details of the steps necessary for an applicant for a particular cherished vehicle registration number to obtain that number.

Mr. Michael Spicer: A specific registration number may be obtained only by transfer from a vehicle already displaying that number. The procedures are explained on the application form V317, a copy of which I have placed in the Library.

Local Government Finance Bill

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from the Greater Manchester transportation consultative committee about the Local Government Finance Bill; what reply he is sending; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: The Greater Manchester transportation consultative committee wrote to my right hon. Friend on 21 January to express views on the finances of the Greater Manchester passenger transport authority. I will be taking these views into account in my continuing discussions with the PTA, and will ensure that the right hon. Member receives a copy of the reply to the TCC in due course.

A1-M1 Link

Mr. Fry asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to make an announcement on the inspector's report on the public inquiry on the A1-M1 link road.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I refer my hon. friend to the reply I gave on Monday 9 February at column 43, to my hon. Friend the Member for Cambridgeshire, South-West (Sir A. Grant)

EMPLOYMENT

Adult Training

Mr. Thurnham asked the Paymaster General what is the estimated expenditure for 1986-87, and the projected expenditure for 1987-88, for adult training by the Manpower Services Commission's vocational education and training group in each of the north-west region's individual areas.

Mr. Lee: The estimated expenditure on adult training for 1986-87 in each of the Manpower Services Commission's vocational education and training group's north-west region's areas is as follows:

	£ million
Cheshire	2·7
Cumbria	1·4
Lancashire	6·0
Manchester (Central)	7·4
Manchester (East)	2·0
Manchester (North)	3·7
Merseyside (Inner)	4·0
Merseyside (Outer)	2·6
Total North West	29·9

I regret that projected figures for 1987-88 are not yet available.

Mr. Thurnham asked the Paymaster General what is the estimated expenditure for 1986-87, and projected expenditure for 1987-88, out of the Manpower Services Commission's vocational education and training group budget for adult training at skill centres by each area in the north-west.

Mr. Lee: The estimated expenditure on adult training at skillcentres for 1986-87 in each of the Manpower Services Commission's vocational and education group north-west region areas is as follows:

	£ million
Cheshire	0·8
Cumbria	0·6
Lancashire	2·3
Manchester (Central)	2·1
Manchester (North)	2·2
Merseyside (Inner)	1·1
Merseyside (Outer)	1·4
Total North West	10·5

I regret that the figures for 1987-88 are not yet available.

Construction Industry Training Board

Mr. Sean Hughes asked the Paymaster General if he has any plans to alter the basis of the construction industry training board levy from £15,000 per annum; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: I have no such plans. Firms whose payroll and payments to labour-only subcontractors amount to less than £15,000 are not required to pay the levy. This exclusion level is one which the construction industry training board has decided is appropriate in the light of the circumstances in the construction industry. It is estimated that it excludes about 37 per cent. of firms in the industry.

Literacy and Numeracy

Mr. Ashdown asked the Paymaster General what assessment he has made as to whether inadequate skills or literacy and numeracy in persons in training sponsored or directed by his Department reduce the effectiveness of such training; what steps he has taken to overcome relevant difficulties that may be experienced by trainees and potential trainees; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: Evidence suggests that a significant proportion of unemployed people undertaking training courses, sponsored or directed by my Department have problems with their basic skills which need to be remedied if they are to improve the range of opportunities open to them.

The Manpower Services Commission makes a significant contribution to improving the literacy and numeracy skills of such people through a range of schemes including YTS, wider opportunities training programme, voluntary projects programme, community programme and the new job training scheme. The commission is currently reviewing its provision in this area.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Paymaster General what information is available to his Department on the number of persons unemployed or in training whose skills of literacy and numeracy are inadequate; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The Manpower Services Commission is currently examining the scale of the problem as a matter of urgency. I shall write to the hon. Member when the results of this study are available.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Janner asked the Paymaster General how many and what percentage of the work force over 60 years of age are men.

Mr. Lee: It is estimated from the labour force survey conducted in the spring of 1985 that, at the time, there were 966,000 men aged 60 and over in paid employment, representing 69·5 per cent. of all persons aged 60 and over in paid employment in Great Britain.

Manpower Services Commission Schemes

Mr. Hicks asked the Paymaster General, for the Manpower Services Commission, YTS, adult training and community programmes, what are the total numbers involved since their inception for (a) England, (b) the south-west region and (c) Cornwall; and what are the available proportions who found permanent positions after taking part in these schemes.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 9 February 1987, c. 54]: The information is not available in the precise form requested. However, from the latest information available, the total numbers involved in YTS, adult training and community programmes and the percentage who were known to have found employment after taking part in the schemes in England, the south-west region and Cornwall are shown in the table.

[5] The figure relates to Great Britain not England.

Mr. Hicks asked the Paymaster General what is the cost of each Manpower Services Commission scheme and the numbers involved in (a) the south-west region and (b) Cornwall, respectively, in 1985-86 and 1986-87.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 9 February 1987, c. 54]: The amounts paid by the Manpower Services Commission to the providers of its principle schemes in the south-west* and in Cornwall in 1985-86 are given, where available, in the following table. The table also gives, where practicable, the numbers helped by those schemes in that year. Additionally the table shows the respective amounts the commission anticipates spending and the numbers it expects to help in 1986-87.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL FOR SCOTLAND

Duke of Argyll

46. Mr. Canavan asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland whether, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Falkirk, West on 26 November 1986, Official Report, columns 261-3, about illegal fishing by the Duke of Argyll and his associates, he has had any further response from the Duke of Argyll; and whether the Crown Office will now take action to prosecute.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: The trustees of the tenth Duke of Argyll have indicated they do not accept the method of fishing used in the past was necessarily illegal. However, they have given a written undertaking to the effect that the fishing will not be resumed unless and until it can be shown to be within the law.

Scottish Prison Disturbances

47. Mr. Dalyell asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland if he will make a statement on prosecution policy towards those found guilty of offences in disturbances at Scottish prisons.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: There can be no prosecution policy after guilt has been determined. No special prosecution policy obtains in respect of those accused of causing disturbances in Scottish prisons. These are investigated by the procurator fiscal in the same manner as any other offence reported to him.

51. Mr. Hirst asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland how many prosecutions there have been for offences committed during recent disturbances in Scottish prisons; what is the nature of the alleged offences; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: Indictments have been served on four persons for trial in the High Court at Peterhead on 23 February in connection with the disturbances at Peterhead prison. A further four persons have been indicted to the High Court at Edinburgh on 2 March on charges arising out of the disturbances at Saughton prison. These matters are now sub judice and further comment would be inappropriate.

Salmon Poachers

48. Mr. Bill Walker asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland what advice his Department has given to procurators fiscal for the prosecution of salmon poachers.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: Circulars are issued from time to time. The most recent of these dealt with the implementation of the Salmon Act 1986.

Travelling People

49. Mr. Henderson asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland if the Secretary of State for Scotland's advisory committee on travelling people has provided the Scottish Law Officers with a list of persons for whom the toleration policy on unauthorised encampment was designed; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: No such list has been provided. However, I am not aware that procurators fiscal have experienced any problems in identifying who would fall within the ambit of the toleration policy.

Dornoch Procurator Fiscal

50. Mr. Maclennan asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland what has been the effect on the operation of the sheriff court's office at Dornoch of the decision not to replace the procurator fiscal.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: The procurator fiscal for Tain became the procurator fiscal for both Tain and Dornoch on 25 August 1986. Criminal business at Tain and Dornoch sheriff courts has been rearranged accordingly. There have been a number of minor teething troubles, but generally the new arrangements are working satisfactorily. Back-up from the procurator fiscal offices at Dingwall, Inverness and Wick is available should any emergency arise. The situation is being closely monitored by the regional procurator fiscal at Aberdeen.

Legal Aid

52. Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland if he has had any discussions with the procurators fiscal about the granting of legal aid under the Legal Aid (Scotland) Act 1986.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: discussions have taken place at an official level on the impact the setting up of a new legal aid board will have on the fixing of trials.

Kilmarnock and Ayr (Procurator Fiscal Office)

53. Mr. Foulkes asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland what is the current establishment of the procurator fiscal offices at Kilmarnock and Ayr.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: The current establishment of the procurator fiscal offices at Kilmarnock and Ayr is 33 and 19½ respectively.

Suspects (Tape Recording)

54. Dr. Godman asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland what recent discussions he has had with procurators fiscal regarding the tape recording of the questioning of suspects in police stations.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: I discussed this matter most recently with procurators fiscal at a meeting of all the senior procurators fiscal in Scotland in November 1986.

State Security

55. Sir Alex Fletcher asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland if he has anything to add to his previous statement to the House on 3 February, Official Report, column 852 and on 9 February, regarding the relationship between the procurators fiscal and the police in applying for a search warrant; and if he is satisfied with regard to the search of the British Broadcasting Corporation's premises in Glasgow on 31 January that the actions of the procurators fiscal were in accord with that relationship.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: The decision as to the operational desirability of the search warrant was for the police. It was in accordance with proper and accepted practice and procedure in Scotland for them to request the procurator fiscal to make an application to the sheriff. In deciding whether to present an application to the sheriff for the search warrant requested it was properly for the procurator fiscal to be satisfied as to the legal justification for the application and in this regard he considered the information to be sworn to by the police and the known attitude of the British Broadcasting Corporation to the requirement of due legal process. He sought to ensure the warrant was sufficient to meet its purposes and it did not go beyond what was required.

Official Secrets Acts

Mr. Dalyell asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland if he will make a statement on his practice, when considering prosecutions and the issue of warrants in relation to offences under the Official Secrets Acts, on consulting other Ministers about the damage to the public interest caused by a particular disclosure.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: When considering prosecutions under the Official Secrets Acts where there is a legal sufficiency of evidence the Lord Advocate would have regard to the damage to the public interest which has resulted from the disclosure and the effect of a prosecution on the public interest. To this end he may, but is not obliged to, consult any of his colleagues in the Government. It would not be his practice to consult any other Minister when considering applications for search warrants in the course of a criminal investigation.

BBC, Glasgow (Search Warrant)

Mr. Dewar asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland if he will place in the Library a copy of the Lord Advocate's letter dated 6 February to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Garscadden regarding the search warrant against the British Broadcasting Corporation's Glasgow premises.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: I shall arrange for a copy of the letter to be placed in the Library of the House.

SCOTLAND

Edinburgh Castle

10. Sir Hector Monro asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what consultations he has had on the future development of Edinburgh castle; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: In July last year my right hon. and learned Friend invited comments from interested bodies and the public upon the conclusions of a feasibility study, prepared by consultants, of possible improvements to visitor facilities at Edinburgh castle. We are now considering those conclusions in the light of the responses received.

Peterhead Prison

11. Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the present position in relation to the award of a contract for the new Peterhead prison; what is the proposed commencement date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: Invitations to tender will shortly be issued for the preliminary site works contract for the new prison at Peterhead. The contract for construction is at present programmed to begin in March 1988.

Student Support

12. Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next expects to meet the National Union of Students Scotland to discuss financial provisions for students.

Mr. John MacKay: I met representatives of the National Union of Students (Scotland) on 23 January. I will meet them again when they give oral evidence to the ministerial committee which is reviewing student support.

Regional Development Grant

13. Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what he estimates will be the outturn figures for regional development grant expenditure in Scotland in the current financial year; and what criteria were used in fixing regional development grant expenditure for 1987-88.

Mr. Lang: The expenditure provision for regional development grant in the current financial year is £171 million gross. The provision for expenditure in 1987-88 has been set after consideration both of outstanding commitments due in that year, arising out of grant already approved, and of the anticipated level of future approvals and claims.

Torness Nuclear Power Station

14. Mr. Campbell asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will state the latest estimated date for the commissioning of the first set at Torness nuclear power station.

Mr. Lang: The South of Scotland Electricity Board expects that the first reactor will be in commercial operation by October 1987.

Electricity Sales

15. Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the timing and size of recent sales of electricity generated in Scotland to the Central Electricity Generating Board.

Mr. Lang: I am advised by the South of Scotland Electricity Board that 500 mw of electricity were contracted to the Central Electricity Generating Board on 12 January 1987; from 13 to 16 January 1000 mw were contracted and from 19 to 23 January 600 mw were contracted, in each case for 12 hours per day.

Sir Norman Macfarlane

16. Mr. Hirst asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met Sir Norman Macfarlane, the chairman of Guinness plc; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. and learned Friend and I had a confidential meeting with Sir Norman Macfarlane and other representatives of Guinness plc on Thursday 22 January. A number of matters were discussed including Guinness's operations in Scotland.

Shipbuilding

17. Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the current number of people employed in shipbuilding in Scotland; and how this compares with 1979.

Mr. Lang: In 1984, the most recent year for which information is available, the estimated number of people employed in the shipbuilding and ship repair industry in Scotland was 21,800. This compares with 30,600 in 1979. These estimates are from the annual census of production.

Scottish NFU

18. Mr. Pollock asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he has met representatives of the Scottish National Farmers Union in order to discuss the annual review of agriculture; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: The NFU of Scotland was consulted as part of the 1987 annual review of agriculture; I am due to meet representatives of the union on 13 February 1987.

The annual review results show a welcome improvement in Scottish farm incomes from the very low levels experienced in 1985. However, the industry in Scotland has not yet completely recovered from the effects of disastrous weather in 1985.

Afforestation

19. Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will undertake a review of the financing procedures and practice of afforestation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans at present to undertake such a review.

Small Firms

20. Mr. MacKenzie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many small firms in Scotland, as defined by the Bolton committee, are currently having Government financial assistance withheld from them as a result of the Government's moratorium on regional development grants.

Mr. Lang: I regret that the information is not available in the form requested, since RDG I—that is old style RDG — payments are not categorised into small and large firms. As regards RDG II—that is new RDG—to date no payments have been affected by the recently announced two-month delay in payments.

Caterpillar Tractor Company

21. Mr. James Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the up-to-date position with the proposed closure of Caterpillar Tractor company at Tannochside, Glasgow; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: On 3 February Caterpillar reconfirmed its decision to close the Tannochside facility. I continue to find the company's decision extraordinary but, given its public stance, I have now arranged for my officials to open discussions with the local management of the company to explore all possibilities for maintaining manufacturing operations and employment at the plant.

Agriculture (Prospects)

22. Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent discussions he has had with officers of the National Farmers' Union for Scotland about the prospects for agriculture during the current year.

Mr. John MacKay: My right hon. and learned Friend and I regularly meet union representatives to discuss the state of Scottish agriculture. The most recent occasion was on 5 January when I met the union's president, and we will meet again on 13 February.

Granton Gas Works

23. Mr. Ron Brown asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has received representations from the trade union movement about the closure of Granton gas works.

Mr. Lang: Yes. A letter dated 16 January has been received from the branch secretary of the General, Municipal Boilermakers and Allied Trades Union.

West Fife (Pit Closures)

24. Mr. Douglas asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on initiatives between his Department and the Scottish Development Agency to combat increased unemployment in West Fife as a result of pit closures.

Mr. Lang: I have asked the Scottish Development Agency to consider the possibility of some form of economic initiative for the West Fife area, involving the local public and private sectors. Initial discussions on this are now under way.

Rate Reform (Crofters)

25. Mr. Kennedy asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received concerning the implications for the crofting communities of the proposed reform of the domestic rating system; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: My right hon. and learned Friend has received representations on the matter from the Western Isles islands council, the Crofters Commission, the National Farmers' Union of Scotland, the Scottish Crofters' Union and the Harris council of social service, as well as from a number of individuals.

Housing

26. Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what new initiatives he has in mind for the solution of the housing problem in Scotland.

Mr. Rifkind: We shall continue to pursue those policy initiatives which, since 1979, have succeeded in increasing the percentage of families in Scotland who are owner-occupiers from 35 per cent. to over 42 per cent., and which have seen the completion of 140,000 new homes, the inclusion of 210,000 council homes in modernisation schemes, the halving of the number of houses below the tolerable standard and the trebling of the number of sheltered and amenity dwellings for the elderly and disabled. We shall encourage initiatives to bring empty council housing back into use and to introduce greater diversity of management and tenure into council estates.

Scottish Lithotripter Centre

27. Mr. Lambie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he is going to announce the siting of the Scottish lithotripter centre; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: Three health boards have expressed an interest in this matter and my right hon. and learned Friend is still considering the best location to serve patients in Scotland.

Paper Mill, Irvine

28. Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received about the funding of the new paper mill at Irvine; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: None other than those made by the hon. Member in connection with the purchase of capital equipment about which I will be writing to him shortly.

Scottish School of Physical Education

29. Mr. Millan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what further consideration he has given to the future of the Scottish school of physical education at Jordanhill college of education.

Mr. Rifkind: I refer the right hon. Member to my reply of 14 January, at columns 81-82, to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Garscadden (Mr. Dewar).

I have now received and am giving urgent consideration to the views of the three governing bodies concerned.

Unemployment

30. Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures he plans to take to reduce unemployment in Scotland.

Mr. Lang: In addition to the Government's overall policies for controlling inflation and stimulating the economy, thereby improving the job prospects for the unemployed, a wide range of employment and training measures is brought to bear on the problem. The Government's continuing commitment to tackling unemployment was emphasised by the additional package of measures announced on 28 January, at columns 337-39, by my right hon. and learned Friend the Paymaster General. The extension of the YTS guarantee, the introduction nationally of a new job training scheme, the extension of the restart programme, and the expansion of the enterprise allowance scheme will all further enhance the job prospects of the unemployed in Scotland.

CBI (Scotland)

31. Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next intends to meet the Confederation of British Industry (Scotland) to discuss the Scottish economy.

Mr. Rifkind: I met representatives of the employment committee of CBI Scotland earlier this week for an informal discussion of matters affecting the Scottish economy. I have as yet no specific plans for further meetings.

Manufacturing Job Losses

32. Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the total number of job losses in the manufacturing sector in Scotland since May 1979 to the latest available date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: June 1979 is the closest date to May 1979 for which the information requested is available. I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to a question by the hon. Member for Motherwell, North (Mr. Hamilton) on 3 February. Business surveys released last month suggest improved prospects for manufacturing orders and output in the early months of 1987, particularly in the case of exports.

Jobs Costs

33. Sir Russell Johnston asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the average cost per job created by the Highlands and Islands Development Board and the Scottish Development Agency in each of the last five years.

Mr. Lang: The information requested is not available in respect of the activities of the Scottish Development Agency, which are not in general specifically directed at job creation. The information in respect of financial assistance from the Highlands and Islands Development Board is as follows:

Average cost of jobs created and retained (£ at 1986 prices)

Year	Average cost
1982	5,539
1983	5,355
1984	7,085
1985	6,500
1986	5,082

Springburn Railway Workshops

34. Mr. Martin asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on progress with talks between the Scottish Development Agency and British Rail Engineering Ltd. on job creation measures following the rundown of the Springburn railway workshops; and what action his Department is taking to mitigate the social consequences.

Mr. Lang: Good progress continues to be made in the discussions between representatives of the Scottish Development Agency, British Rail Engineering Ltd., local authorities and other interests on the plans for an initiative for the Springburn area, and it is hoped that an agreement will be concluded shortly. While the emphasis of the proposed initiative is likely to be primarily on economic and employment measures, there will clearly also be social benefits.

Local Government Finance

35. Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next plans to meet the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities regarding local government finance matters.

Mr. Ancram: My right hon. and learned Friend next plans to discuss local government finance matters with the convention on 27 April.

Community Charge

36. Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the number of additional staff which Strathclyde regional council will need to employ to compile the register for the purposes of the proposed community charge; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: It will be for individual local authorities to consider what staffing and other resources they will need to implement the community charge system.

Oil Industry

37. Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what action he is taking to mitigate the social consequences of the rundown of the oil industry in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. and learned Friend is concerned over the fall in oil-related employment during the present downturn in offshore activity. The Scottish Development Agency and the Highlands and Islands Development Board are constantly seeking practical means to promote and increase economic activity and the Government are providing the resources necessary to achieve this objective. It is, however, vital that the oil-support industry in Scotland should itself adopt a tough and competitive attitude towards the opportunities for work which do exist, both in the North sea and internationally and also seek to exploit their scarce skills in non-oil related markets.

Labour Statistics

38. Mr. Robert Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish in the Official Report the percentage unemployment rate in the Aberdeen travel-to-work area for 1979 and the current figure.

Mr. Lang: On 11 December 1986, the latest date for which information is available, the unemployment rate in the Aberdeen travel-to-work area was 8·9 per cent. In December 1979 the corresponding figure was 3·7 per cent. The figures are not comparable due to the various changes which have taken place in the compilation of the statistics.

This information is available in the Library.

Aberdeen (Common Good Fund)

39. Mr. Bruce asked the Secretary of State for Scotland under what powers he acted in requiring his consent for capital expenditure incurred by the city of Aberdeen be funded from the common good fund.

Mr. Ancram: My right hon. and learned Friend's powers to control capital expenditure by local authorities are set out in section 94 of the local government (Scotland) Act 1973. This provides that a local authority must have the consent of the Secretary of State before incurring any liability to meet capital expenses, except where they are financed from current revenue. The definition of capital expenses in section 94(2) includes any expenses of a capital nature which are to be met otherwise than out of current revenue.

Amateur Sports Clubs

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received from bodies representing amateur sports clubs about financial difficulties arising from the payment of high levels of rates.

Mr. Ancram: Representations have been received from the Scottish Sports Council and the Scottish Sports Association. Office bearers of certain sports clubs have also been active in bringing to attention the effect of rates on the financial position of amateur sports clubs generally.

Guinness plc

41. Mr. O'Neill asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the board of Guinness to discuss its Scottish operations.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. and learned Friend and I met representatives of Guinness, including the chairman and another board member, on Thursday 22 January.

Dalgety Foods

Mr. Robin Cook asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will meet the management of Dalgety Foods to discuss the closure of its potato crisp plant at Broxburn.

Mr. Lang: I have written to the chairman of Dalgety expressing my concern about the adverse impact of the closure on the community in the Broxburn area. I have made it clear that the Government will consider assisting any viable proposal for the future use of the facility.

Department of Registers

43. Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received about the proposal further to privatise some of the search work carried out for the public by the Department of Registers of Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: Representations have been received from the trade union side of the Department of the Registers of Scotland, and from several hon. Members, about the decision to limit the Department's searches of the Register of Sasines and the personal register to areas to which the land register has been extended.

Private search firms already account for more than 90 per cent. of searches in non-land register areas. The Department is under no obligation to offer a search service, and the resources saved will be used to improve property registration services to the public. The Department's other search activities, including the free provision of reports from the land register, are not affected.

Wildlife (Conservation)

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the total number of incidents involving the misuse of poisons or stupefying substances on wildlife which have been reported to his Department in each of the last two years; for each of those totals what was the number of cases which were referred to the police or the procurator fiscal for investigation; and of those investigations, what was the number which resulted in legal proceedings, and the outcome of those proceedings.

Mr. John MacKay: In the years 1985 and 1986, 32 and 27 incidents involving the misuse of poisons or stupefying substances were reported to the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland. The police were involved in four cases in each of the two years. Legal proceedings followed in one case each year; a conviction was obtained only in the 1986 case.

Local Authorities (Personal Social Services)

Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what was the total expenditure on local authority personal social services in each of the last six years, broken down in terms of (a) pay, (b) total current expenditure and (c) total capital expenditure;

(2) what was the total expenditure on local authority personal social services in each of the last six years, broken down in terms of (a) pay, (b) current expenditure and (c) capital expenditure.

Mr. John MacKay: The information requested is set out in the following table:

£000s

	1980-81	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86

New Towns (Manufacturing Jobs)

Mr. Norman Hogg asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the net loss in manufacturing jobs in each of the Scottish new towns since June 1979.

Mr. Lang: The estimated net change in employment in manufacturing plants employing more than 10 people in the Scottish new towns between 1979 and 1985 is given in the table below. These estimates are taken from the Regional Data System. No reliable information is available from this source for plants with less than 10 employees.

Net change in manufacturing employment

Town
Cumbernauld	−2,200
East Kilbride	−5,200
Glenrothes	−3,000
Irvine	−2,700
Livingston	no change

State Security

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Scotland at what precise time he was informed of the existence of a search warrant in relation to the British Broadcasting Corporation's Glasgow premises; and by whom.

Mr. Rifkind: After the warrant had been granted by the court, on my arrival at the BBC's Glasgow offices on the evening of Friday 30 January I was informed for the first time by two Strathclyde police officers who had been assigned as a matter of routine to accompany me during my visit to Glasgow that there was likely to be a police operation at the BBC premises the following day. I was given no details of the nature of that operation.

Cows (Slaughter)

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the number of cows which will require to be slaughtered when the EEC milk package is implemented; and what impact he estimates this will have on the beef cattle prices.

Mr. John Mackay: The European Commission has estimated that across the Community up to the spring of next year 500,000 dairy cows may be culled as a result of the agreement reached by the Agriculture Council in December. The impact on the beef market will depend on various factors, including the effectiveness of market management measures for which 435 mecus have been allocated.

Suckler Cow Premium

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what is the current delay in the payment of the suckler cow premium; and what action he proposes to take in order to eliminate this delay;

(2) what is the reason for the delay in payment to farmers of the beef cow subsidy; and when the delay will be overcome.

Mr. John Mackay: The closing date for receipt of applications for suckler cow premium (sometimes referred to as beef cow subsidy) in 1986 was 30 September and the Deprtment of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland began processing applications in October that year. Approximately 9,000 applications were received and by the week ending 7 February payment had been made on 7,650 of them. Most of the remaining outstanding cases are those who have not yet responded to the income check which the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland is obliged to make on a random selection of applicants in order to ensure that the condition of the scheme that not less than half of an applicant's annual income is derived from farming is met. For 1986 such a check was made on approximately 30 per cent. of all applicants.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Blood Donors

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when the blood transfusion service stopped taking blood from prisoners in penal establishments.

Mrs. Currie: Collection of blood from closed prisons and borstals in England and Wales stopped at the end of 1984 and stopped from the last open prison in 1986.

Benefits

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will provide figures for the number of people in the Burnley and Pendle constituencies dependent on social security benefits, broken down by category of benefit and age group.

Mr. Lyell: The constituencies of Burnley and Pendle are covered by the Department's local office at Burnley. The latest available information about recipients of various locally administered benefits is as follows:

	Number
Sickness and Invalidity Benefit	6,402
Maternity Allowance	461
Severe Disablement Allowance	750
(all above figures as on 13 January 87
Supplementary Benefit (as on 10 December 1986)
a. beneficiaries over pension age	5,958
b. beneficiaries under pension age who are unemployed	5,816
c. other beneficiaries under pension age	4,998

Housing benefit is administered by the local authority and the number of recipients in Burnley and Pendle borough council areas at autumn 1986 (the latest date for which estimates are available) was as follows:—

	Burnley	Pendle
Rent rebate recipients	5,060	4,070
Rent allowance recipients	1,780	1,900
Rate rebate recipients	10,765	12,670

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give details of the number of family income supplement recipients for each of the years 1979 to 1986 showing, in each case, the number of recipients estimated to be liable to income tax at the date of their previous claim.

Mr. Major: The information requested is shown in the table:

Total number of Family Income Supplement recipients and those estimated to be liable to income tax at the date of their claim.

Year at April	Number of recipients	Number who are liable for income tax
		(thousands)
1979	80	65
1980	90	65
1981	105	75
1982	140	110
1983	190	150
1984	205	165
1985	205	145

All figures have been rounded to the nearest 5,000.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the average waiting period for the processing of new supplementary benefit claims by his Department's Brighton offices; and if he will provide details of waiting times for each year since 1979 on a quarterly basis.

Mr. Lyell: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Planning Research

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services pursuant to his Answer of 29 January, Official Report, column 373 concerning a study comissioned from Social and Community Planning Research, in what areas of the United Kingdom the pilot study has been carried out; and how much money has been allocated to pay for the full study.

Mr. Major: The sample for the pilot study was taken from people who became unemployed and signed on at the following unemployment benefit offices:

Barnsley A
Basildon A
Bradford D
Chatham B
Farnborough
Folkestone
Forest Hill
Kings Lynn
Leeds B
Liverpool Old Swan B
Mexborough
Maidenhead
Maidstone
Poplar B
Rochdale
Sandbach
Selby
Sheffield C
Stalybridge
St. Marylebone

The estimated expenditure covering fieldwork, staffing and non-departmental computer costs for the full study for the four years, 1986-87, 1987-88, 1988-89, and 1989-90 is £356,500 (at 1986-87 prices).

Diabetics

Mr. David Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to reach a conclusion following his discussions with the British Diabetic Association on the proposed changes in the existing National Health Service supply arrangements for plastic syringes to diabetic patients; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: The arrangements for the supply of syringes to diabetics are currently under review.

Government Data Network

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what new interactive, interrogative and batch facilities will accrue to his Department from the connection to the Government data network; and what is the estimated saving to his Department from joining the network.

Mr. Lyell: There are no new plans for interactive, interrogative or batch facilities which depend directly on connection to the Government data network. However, as I explained to the hon. Member on 26 January, at columns 90-91 we will wish to use the facility to transfer the information which is currently exchanged on magnetic tape between ourselves and the Inland Revenue.

Comparative costs and savings cannot be estimated until planning has reached the award of contract stage.

Maternity Payments

Mr. Dixon asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in the Jarrow constituency received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in the Jarrow constituency are expected annually to receive statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 488 claims to maternity allowance were made at Jarrow and 807 at South Shields, the Department's offices which cover the constituency although the boundaries are not conterminous. It is not possible to predict how many women in Jarrow will qualify for statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance from April 1987. Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) since when myalgic encephalomyelitis has been diagnosable; and if the medical profession in general can diagnose it;

(2) if he has received any reports of faulty diagnosis of myalgic encephalomyelitis; and what steps he proposes to take to assist doctors to diagnose the disease;

(3) if he will give financial support to the Association of Victims of Myalgic Encephalomyelitis to encourage their research and support groups;

(4) how many research studies are being undertaken into the causes and treatment of myalgic encephalomyelitis; and at which hospitals or research centres they are located;

(5) when his Department was first notified of the disease myalgic encephalomyelitis; and what steps he has since taken to further research into its causes and treatment;

(6) what is his estimate of the number of people who suffer from myalgic encephalomyelitis.

Mrs. Currie: The condition known as benign myalgic encephalomyelitis was first described in 1934, and in the 1950s outbreaks occurred in some London hospitals. Despite extensive investigation then, no causal agent was found, and this remains the case. No outbreaks have been reported in recent years, and as the symptom resemble other forms of debilitating illness it is not easy to diagnose single cases or to draw up diagnostic guidance. The Department is not aware of any reports of faulty diagnosis. The Department is always prepared to consider proposals for research projects relating to the provision of health services but no request has been received from the group named. The Department is not currently funding any other research into this condition, but I understand that serological surveillance studies are proceeding at the regional virus laboratory, Ruchill hospital, Glasgow, with further related work at the Southern General hospital, Glasgow, and separate research at St. Mary's hospital, medical school, London.

Myalgic encephalomyelitis is not a notifiable disease and data on its incidence are not therefore available.

Pensions and Benefits

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will estimate the total amount of pensions and social security benefits unclaimed in the last year by persons entitled to such payments; if he has any information on the part played by inadequate skills of literacy and numeracy in such cases; what steps he has taken to overcome relevant difficulties that may be experienced by potential claimants; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what information is available to his Department on the number of persons entitled to pension or social security benefit whose skills of literacy and numeracy are inadequate; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: The Department's general policy is to allow the public to decide, on the basis of clearly stated advice, whether to claim benefits to which they may be entitled. A document design unit ensures that forms distributed nationally are expressed in a language which people with only limited literacy should understand — a fact recognised by the receipt of a number of plain english awards. Contacts are maintained with 300 interested organisations — including adult literacy groups — which often provide valuable suggestions on document design.

On a personal level, local office staff are trained to provide a sympathetic information service. This can be at the office, over the telephone or in the person's own home. More general benefit advice and information is available through the Department's freephone, supplemented by regular local media broadcasts.

The Department spends about £6½ million on media advice, publicity and leaflets. For child benefit and the major contributory benefits, such as retirement pension, it is thought that virtually everyone who is eligible receives the benefit and take-up of one parent benefit is also high amongst those that stand to gain.

Respondents to the "Family Expenditure Survey", from which estimates of unclaimed income-related benefits are obtained, are not asked questions relating to their literacy or numeracy, but there is some evidence to suggest that entitlements are less likely to be claimed when the amount is small. Take-up of supplementary benefit expenditure was 89 per cent. in 1983 implying £615 million was unclaimed. About £35 million in family income supplement went unclaimed in 1981.

First estimates of housing benefit expenditure take-up and more recent estimates for family income supplement should be available shortly.

Disabled Persons

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if doctors' surgeries' improvement grants are available to carry out improvements to the accessibility of surgeries for disabled people; and what guidance has been issued to family practitioner committees on the subject.

Mr. Newton: Family practitioner committees have discretion to make available grants to improve surgeries in a number of ways, including improving accessibility for disabled people. Guidance on eligibility for improvement grants is contained in the statement of fees and allowances payable under the National Health Service general medical services issued to all family practitioner committees and family doctors. The importance of ease of access to premises and movement within them is fully recognised in the minimum standards criteria for surgery rent and rates reimbursement. This too is set out in the statement of fees and allowances.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the committees on which disabled people should be appointed according to section 10 of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986.

Mr. Major: Section 10 of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986 will apply to the following committees:

Social Security Advisory Committee.
Central Advisory Committee on War Pensions.
War Pensions Committees.
Committees attached to bodies constituted under Section 10(2) of the Employment and Training Act 1973 or persons appointed to advise the Secretary of State under S5(2)(a) of that Act.
Disabled Persons Transport Advisory Committee.
Transport Users Consultative Committee.
London Regional Passengers Committee.
Advisory Committee on Telecommunications for Disabled and Elderly People.
Gas Consumers Council.
Electricity Consultative Councils.
Post Office Users' Councils.
Domestic Coal Consumers' Council.
Any local authority committee concerned with matters in which chronically sick and disabled people have special needs.

Young Physically Disabled People

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has as to how many physically disabled people under 35 years of age are currently attending local authority day centres.

Mr. Major: The information available centrally does not indicate the number of physically disabled people under 35 years of age currently attending local authority day centres.

Information available relates to the number of places in day centres for physically handicapped people under 65 years of age and is published in "Day Centres for the Mentally Ill, the Elderly and the Younger Physically Handicapped at 31 March 1985, England" copies of which are in the Library.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what guidance he has given to local authorities regarding the provision they should make in day centres for young physically disabled people.

Mr. Major: Circulars LAC 12/70 and LAC 13/74, copies of which are in the Library, give guidance to local authorities on how they should discharge their responsibilities under the National Assistance Act 1948 and the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Act 1970 to provide day centre facilities for young physically disabled people.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations his Department has received regarding provision in day centres for young physically disabled people.

Mr. Major: No specific representations have been received recently, although the Royal College of Physicians Report "Physical Disability in 1986 and Beyond", published in July 1986 recommended in its survey of services for younger physically disabled people, that there should be adequate day care services.

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will ask Sir Roy Griffiths in the course of his overview of community care to make an assessment of the achievements of Support and Housing Assistance for People with Disabilities in providing community care for young disabled people.

Mr. Major: I will ensure that Sir Roy notes this suggestion.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if his Department will undertake a review of day centre services for young physically disabled people; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: Future needs for day centre services for physically disabled people are being considered in the context of discussions with local authority associations about the costs of implementing the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986.

Attendance and Mobility Allowances

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people were in receipt of (a) attendance allowance and (b) mobility allowance at the latest date for which figures are available; and if he will classify the data according to sex and standard age bands.

Mr. Major: The information requested is set out in the following tables:

Table 1: recipients of attendance allowance at 31 March 1986

Age	Male[1]	Female[1]
2-4	8,000	5,000
5-9	13,000	10,000
10-15	15,000	11,000

80 and over	39,000	148,000
All ages[2]	224,000	361,000

[1] Because attendance allowance is administered by local offices as well as the 2 central offices, the figures quoted are not precise counts but are statistical estimates, rounded to the nearest thousand.

[2] Rounding means that these totals do not correspond to the sum of the individual figures for each age group.

Wheelchair Service

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will extend the wheelchair service to include the provision of occupant controlled outdoor powered wheelchairs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: We are at present considering whether the Department's wheelchair service should include the provision of dual purpose occupant controlled powered wheelchairs. Those considerations will include occupant controlled outdoor powered wheelchairs. I hope to be able to announce a decision in due course, together with other matters relating to the wheelchair service.

Mobility Allowance

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will amend the mobility allowance regulations to ensure that no elderly disabled people who are currently in receipt of the allowance are deprived of it when they reach the age of 75 years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: The limit of age 75 for the payment of the allowance will not affect any recipients before November 1989 and we shall consider whether the legislation should be amended rather nearer that time.

Methaemoglobinaemia

Mr. Willie Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish a table showing the regional incidence of methaemoglobinaemia over the last 10 years.

Mrs. Currie: This information is not available as there is no requirement to report cases of methaemoglobinaemia, and they are not identifiable in routinely collected health statistics.

However, it is an extremely rare condition. There has been no response to DHSS requests to medical practitioners in 1976 and 1981 for notification of any confirmed cases of infantile methaemoglobinaemia. Indeed, we know of only some 14 cases attributable to nitrate in drinking water in the past 36 years, and these were mostly suspected rather than proven. The last reported and confirmed case was in 1972.

AIDS

Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what estimate he has made of the number of people in the area covered by the West Midlands regional health authority who are known to have the AIDS virus; and how many within this total are estimated to be haemophiliacs who have been given the AIDS virus through blood products.

Mr. Newton: For the West Midlands region the communicable disease surveillance centre figures record four current cases of clinical AIDS, and 262 positive tests for HIV antibody. Records are not held centrally showing by region the number of haemophiliacs included in these categories.

Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what specific funds have been allocated to the West Midlands regional health authority for the provision of counselling services at district level for haemophiliacs who have been found to be carrying the AIDS virus; what is the present level of such provision; and what plans there are to improve the service to meet need.

Mr. Newton: Health authorities provide haemophilia care through a network of haemophilia centres. Six of these centres are designated haemophilia reference centres.

Since December 1985 additional allocations of £60,000 have been made to each HRC specifically for AIDS counselling, because of the particular burden they bear. there is no HRC in the west midlands. A further £280,000 has been allotted for 1987-88 but the basis for distribution is still under consideration.

The provision of counselling services at other haemophilia centres is a matter for the local health authority to consider in the light of local needs and priorities.

Meningococcal Infections

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will list the research projects currently in progress into meningococcal infections;

(2) what plans he has for further research into meningococcal infections;

(3) how much money has been spent by his Department on (a) research into and (b) publicity and health education regarding meningococcal infections in (i) the last year and (ii) the last five years for which figures are available;

(4) if he will take steps to encourage early diagnosis of meningococcal infections and an increase in public awareness of the disease and its symptons;

(5) if he will add all meningococcal infections, and in particular meningococcal septicaemia to the list of notifiable diseases; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: I shall let the hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Retirement Age

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Social Services to what extent the costs of establishing a voluntary retirement age of 60 years for both men and women would be offset by a reduction in unemployment and other benefits.

Mr. Major: After taking account of savings of about £1·6 billion in unemployment and other benefits, the net cost of establishing a common minimum pension age of 60 for both men and women would be about £3 billion in public expenditure, on our best estimate.

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the average age at which (a) men and (b) women retire from work in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Major: I shall let the hon. and learned Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Hard-to-heat Designations

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the number of hard-to-heat designations made to council tenants in the borough of Brighton for each year since 1983; and if he will break down the figures by month for each year.

Mr. Major: No heating systems have been designated in the borough of Brighton as being disproportionately expensive to run.

Hospitals (Cheshire)

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will take steps to increase the average daily number of available beds in hospitals in Altrincham and Sale, Cheshire.

Mrs. Currie: The management and planning of health services locally is a matter for district health authorities. The hon. Member may therefore wish to contact the chairman of Trafford district health authority or of the North Western regional health authority on this matter.

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will take steps to ensure that funds are made available immediately to enable the transfer of patients and staff from Denzell hospital, Altrincham, to St. Anne's hospital, Altrincham.

Mrs. Currie: The allocation of resources to individual district health authorities is a matter for regional health authorities, which are best placed to make the necessary judgments in the light of local circumstances. The hon. Member may therefore wish to contact the chairman of the North Western regional health authority on this matter.

Neasden Hospital

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many of the nurses and other National Health Service staff evicted from their homes at Neasden hospital in December are now in National Health Service accommodation elsewhere; and by whom the additional costs to these residents are being borne.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 21 January 1987, c. 622]: Brent district health authority does not maintain a record of evictions but believes that there have been only three from Neasden hospital since 1979. These were of former employees whose contracts with the health authority had ended, and none occurred within the last two years.

Breast and Cervical Cancer

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what arrangements are made in the Eccles constituency, the city of Salford, the greater Manchester and the North West region for cervical cancer smear tests for women up to the age of 30 years, 30 to 40 years, 40 to 50 years, 50 to 60 years and over 60 years of age; and if he will provide the figures for these tests and these age groups for 1970, 1975, 1980, 1985 and any later figures; what new proposals on these tests have been made by the North West health authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 3 February 1987, c. 583]: Services for testing operate throughout the North Western region. The location of testing laboratories and the number of tests carried out by each in 1975, 1980 and 1985 is as follows:

All district health authorities in the North Western region will have computerised patient call-up and recall systems by April 1988.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Agricultural Support

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was (a) the overall cost and (b) the net cost to the Exchequer of support to United Kingdom agriculture in each year from 1960 to 1986 in actual and real terms; and if he will show each set of figures as a percentage of the gross domestic product.

Mr. Jopling: I refer my hon. Friend to the following published sources which are available in the Library:

(a) The costs of agricultural support to United Kingdom agriculture in the years from 1960-61 to 1986-87 are shown in the annual review and determination of guarantees White Papers as follows:

Years	Source
1960-61 to 1967-68	1969 Cmnd. 3965 Appendix V —Table A
1968-69 to 1971-72	1973 Cmnd. 5254 Table 24

(b) Gross domestic product for the years up to 1984-85 are given at pages 9 and 10 of the Economic Trends Annual Supplement 1986. For the years 1985-86 and 1986-87 this information is given in table 2.5 of the Financial Statement and Budget Report 1986-87.

(c) Retail price indices at pages 116 and 117 in the Economic Trends Annual Supplement 1986 may be used to convert figures from earlier years to current prices.

Agricultural Land

Mr. Steen asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how many acres of agricultural land including rough grazing have been taken out of agricultural use in each of the last five years;

(2) how many acres of agricultural land including rough grazing have been recorded in each of the last five years as going out of agricultural use and then becoming dormant, derelict or vacant, in public ownership; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Surplus Food

Dr. McDonald asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish in the Official Report how much of the promised supplies of European Commission surplus food has already been distributed in the United Kingdom, and to Thurrock in particular; how much more remains to be distributed; what steps are being taken to speed up distribution in the United Kingdom and to Thurrock; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jopling: My most recent information is that 640 tonnes of butter and 19 tonnes of beef have been released from intervention stores in the United Kingdom. As I said in my reply earlier today milk and milk products are now available to charitable organisations from the commercial market. The actual distribution of all these foodstuffs, including distribution in Thurrock, is a matter for those organisations. The eventual total uptake of the various products will depend on their requirements, and I am not yet in a position to give estimates. My Department and the Intervention Board for Agricultural Produce are in constant touch with the organisations to ensure that distribution is as speedy and efficient as possible.

Beef

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will ensure that any surplus beef which may be produced following the period of the EEC milk package does not go into intervention; and what plans he has for the disposal of the surplus.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if, in view of the 13 per cent. reduction on the intervention price of beef on 6 April, he will press the other member states in the EEC for a substantial reduction in the green pound before that date.

Mr. Jopling: The reform to the beef regime agreed at the December Agriculture Council provide for reduced reliance on intervention and greater reliance on production premia as a means of supporting the beef sector. Intervention prices will, in future, more closely reflect market price levels. But in the United Kingdom it is the beef variable premium scheme, rather than intervention, which provides the main means of production support and we have secured continuation of the scheme until the end of 1988. In addition, our producers have already had their support level improved as a result of the 6 per cent. devaluation of the green rate for beef and will benefit from adjustments to harmonise steer and bull intervention prices.

I am considering the question of the future level of the green pound in the context of the forthcoming price fixing.

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any plans to prevent further agricultural products from being placed into storage, particularly in the beef sector.

Mr. Jopling: The Government generally believe that intervention arrangements applicable to the various EC commodity regimes should operate as a buyer of last resort and not as a normal sales outlet.

I am pleased that the decisions taken at the December Agriculture Council on reforms to the beef regime represent progress in this direction, and place less emphasis on intervention as a means of underpinning producers' returns.

Quotas

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any plans to introduce quotas for other agricultural products; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Agriculture Council

Mr. Maclennan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the outcome of the meeting of the Council of Agriculture Ministers on 9 and 10 February.

Sir Peter Mills asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Council of Agriculture Ministers' meeting held in Brussels on 9-10 February; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I represented the United Kingdom at the meeting of the Council of Agriculture Ministers in Brussels on 9 and 10 February.

The Council had before it the detailed regulations for implementing the December decisions on beef, milk and socio-structures.

The Council agreed the implementing measures on beef.

On milk, there were differences of view about how the intervention system should be changed and about the rules for paying compensation for temporary suspensions of quota. I insisted that the arrangements agreed must be consistent with the intentions of the December agreement.

A regulation amending the rules relating to the financing of a major disposal of butter stocks was agreed. This provides for the cost of a disposal programme to be financed over the years 1989 to 1992. This proposal was endorsed by the Council in December.

On socio-structures, the Council was unable to reach agreement, particularly on the rules relating to early retirement and to extensification of production.

Discussions on milk and socio-structures will be resumed at an additional Council meeting on 23 February.

The Council endorsed arrangements for a further year which give the Commission powers to implement obligatory distillation of wine. Agreement was also reached (with the United Kingdom abstaining) on a measure which changes the arrangements in Ireland for paying grants on pigmeat marketing and processing, without however, increasing the total allocation of aid to Ireland.

DEFENCE

DROPS

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will specify the technical shortcomings found in Boughton's 1982 detachable rack off-loading pick-up system proposals; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will specify precisely which of his Department's stated requirements for detachable rack off-loading pick-up system the Boughton 1982 detachable rack off-loading system proposal for MMLC detachable rack off-loading pick-up system met less well than the Scammell MMLC; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will specify precisely which of his Department's stated requirements for detachable rack off-loading pick-up system the Boughton 1982 detachable rack off-loading system proposals for IMMLC detachable rack off-loading pick-up system met less well than the Foden IMMLC; and if he will make a statement;

(4) if he will specify precisely which of his Department's stated requirements for detachable rack off-loading pick-up system the Boughton 1982 proposals for the LMLC trailer met less well than the Craven Tasker Trailer; and if he will make a statement;

(5) if he will specify precisely which of his Department's stated requirements for detachable rack off-loading pick-up system the Boughton 1982 flatrack proposals met less well than Marshalls; and if he will make a statement;

(6) precisly which of his Department's 1982 stated detachable rack off-loading pick-up system requirements the Boughton LHS proposals, as submitted to Scammell for incorporation into its MMLC, met less well than Multilift Mark 2; and if he will make a statement;

(7) precisely which of his Departments 1982 detachable rack off-loading pick-up system requirements the Boughton LHS proposals, as submitted to Scammell for incorporation into its MMLC proposals, met less well than Powell Duffryn; and if he will make a statement;

(8) precisely which of his Department's 1982 stated detachable rack off-loading pick-up system requirements the Boughton LHS proposals, as submitted to Scammell for incorporation into its MMLC, met less well than Multilift 4; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Boughton's DROPS proposals were found to be technically inferior to those of the successful competitors in a number of areas. As I have indicated previously to my right hon. Friend, 15 January 1987 at column 308, I cannot disclose details of equipments tendered competitively by firms or the Department's assessments of them.

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is the percentage increase between the production cost estimate submitted in 1982 for Scammell's MMLC detachable rack off-loading pick-up system chassis cab and the firm price for Scammell's MMLC now contracted; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what is the percentage increase between the production cost estimate submitted in 1982 for Foden IMMLC detachable rack off-loading pick-up system chassis cab and the firm price for Foden's IMMLC now contracted; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The fixed prices secured from Foden and Scammel for production are lower in real terms than the production cost estimates it submitted in the 1982-83 competition.

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence precisely what quantities of (a) MMLC detachable rack off-loading pick-up system, (b) IMMLC detachable rack off-loading pick-up system, (c) flatracks, (d) trailers, (e) rail transfer equipment and (f) simplified RTE are included in arriving at the combined contract value of £220 million announced on Friday 5 December; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is not normal practice to disclose exact details of the number of equipments ordered for operational use by the Services. However, as I announced to the House on 5 December, at column 840, the DROPS programme will cover some 2,000 vehicles and ancillary equipment.

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence what were the economic grounds for ruling out Boughton's in the 1983 detachable rack off-loading pick-up system selection; if there is any particular reason for the use of the term economic; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The term "economic" refers to the programme costs indicted by the fixed and budgetary price estimates provided by Boughtons in the competition. These were considerably higher than those of the other competing firms.

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) in what respect his Department's detachable rack off-loading pick-up system selection team in 1983 found Boughton's technical proposal lacking in completeness or less complete than its competitors; and if he will make a statement;

(2) which of the proposals of the detachable rack off-loading pick-up system contenders in 1983 was adjudged by his Department's team to be superior in system appreciation and why; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Boughton submission in the 1982-83 competition was judged to show a good appreciation of the requirements, being ranked joint second with two other contenders. It was judged less satisfactory than those of other contenders in terms of completeness, being more restricted in the range of vehicles and equipments offered and options.

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence if the chosen detachable rack off-loading pick-up system LMLC solutions of MMLC and trailer for use on roads meets road transport requirements while fully laden on roads in either the United Kingdom or Germany; if it is able to carry as great a load within such requirements as the Boughton proposal rejected by his Department; if legality was an argument advanced for the rejection of Boughton's in 1983; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: None of the competitive proposals for a fully laden DROPS LMLC trailer combination could meet peacetime construction and use regulations in the United Kingdom or Germany. Legal considerations were not paramount in the selection process for these combinations.

Merchant Ships (Design)

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Defence what efforts are made by his Department to ensure that at the design stage of merchant ships features are incorporated which would make the ship of military value in the event of requisition; what fiscal incentives are given; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: While the MOD would welcome the incorporation of such features in merchant ships at the design stage, the many competing pressures on defence resources have prevented the necessary funding from being made available.

United States Forces

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the military construction projects at installations in the United Kingdom used by United States forces, which he has been advised will take place in 1988.

Mr. Stanley: I understand from the United States authorities that the following military construction projects at the relevant installations will continue or be completed during the United States fiscal year 1988 (1 October 1987 to 30 September 1988):

Service Children's Schools, Germany

Mr. Hargreaves asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the present cost of employing staff to supervise duties at service children's schools in Germany during the current industrial dispute.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: During the current industrial dispute in Germany an extra 157 lunchtime supervisors are being employed in service children's schools at a cost of 1,750 DM per day. At the garrison accounting rate of 2·75 DM = £1 this is a daily cost of £636·36.

The extra cost since the beginning of term on Tuesday 6 January until Friday 6 February 24 days is therefore some £15,273.

Project Definition

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) whether, in any defence project since 1981, expenditure originally authorised or incurred under the heading of project definition has been subsequently attributed to either of the other two categories set out in his answer of 6 February;

(2) what is his practice regarding the attribution of project research costs to more than one project definition budget;

(3) if he will define the term project definition used in respect of the £10 million threshold for referral to the Comptroller and Auditor General in relation to the categories of expenditure referred to in his answer of 6 February.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The definition of "Project Definition" given in my right hon. Friend's answer of 6 February is the one used for deciding whether projects appear in the major projects statement. This does not include research costs. Project definition is a distinct stage for which separate approval is required: expenditure on that stage is separate from expenditure on full development or production.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what arrangements he makes to supply to the Comptroller and Auditor General information on significant projects of a national security nature where the project definition cost does not exceed £10 million and where the £250 million threshold is not expected to be exceeded;

(2) whether he has supplied to the Comptroller and Auditor General information on all projects of a national security nature where the project definition costs exceeded £10 million but where the projects' costs were not expected to, or did not, exceed £250 million.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There are no defence projects which are not available for audit by the National Audit Office.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Defence if, further to his answer of 6 February, he will list those matters discussed with Sir Frank Cooper at the occasions referred to in the course of 1986.

Mr. Younger: I do not recall discussing any specific matters with Sir Frank Cooper.

Sir Frank Cooper

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions Sir Frank Cooper telephoned his Department during 1986; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Younger: The information requested is not available as records are not kept of all telephone calls received by my Department.

WALES

Horticultural Development Council

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the work of the Horticultural Development Council in Wales during 1986.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The first financial year of the Horticultural Development Council does not end until 30 September 1987. The council is not expected to report to Ministers on its work before then.

Annual Review of Agriculture

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report the corresponding tables for Wales to those published in the "Annual Review of Agriculture 1987", Cm. 67 as tables 1, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 20, 21, 22 and 26.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: I shall reply to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

YTS

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of those leaving YTS schemes in each training division area in Wales (a) entered employment, (b) entered further education, and (c) were subsequently unemployed; and what are the corresponding figures for each year since the scheme's inception.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Information is not available in the precise form requested. Since April 1985, 100 per cent. surveys of the destination of YTS leavers have been undertaken three months after youngsters leave the scheme. Surveys prior to that date were of a 15 per cent. sample only.

A comparison between the latest figures available and those for the same period a year earlier are shown in the following table:

	Entered Employment (Per cent.)		On a full-time course (Per cent.)		Unemployed (Per cent.)
	April-July 1986	April-July 1985	April-July 1986	April-July 1985	April-July 1986	April-July 1985

TVEI

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what funds have been made available by his Department specifically to ensure teaching of the technical and vocational educational initiative schemes through the medium of Welsh in each year since the scheme's inception.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The technical and vocational educaton initiative is funded by the Manpower Services Commission in response to bids from local education authorities. To date no specific funding has been provided for the provision of TVEI through the medium of Welsh, though a number of LEAs have used general TVEI funding to develop Welsh medium or bilingual courses.

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what funds have been made available to secure the provision of Welsh-medium in-service teacher training to support the technical and vocational education initiative in Wales in each year since the inception of the scheme.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The in-service teacher training scheme related to the technical vocational and education initiative is funded by the Manpower Services Commission. TRIST is an interim scheme introduced in advance of the passing of the Education (No. 2) Act. This Act provides for a new, more widely drawn scheme, to be operated by the Department from April 1987.

A total of £70,000 has been made available through the TRIST arrangements for a collaborative project under which six local education authorities are commissioning Welsh-medium teacher training materials in the new technologies. A further £10,000 has been approved for the dissemination of this material.

Apart from this, much of the funding made directly available to local education authorities for TRIST is being used to promote Welsh-medium teacher training, especially in Gwynedd, whose allocation is £150,000 for the five-term duration of the TRIST scheme ending in March 1987. Further funds are now being made available for the general dissemination of the TRIST experience to ensure its continuity within the new Welsh Office in-service teacher training arrangements. Wherever possible this material is being translated into Welsh.

Jobcentres

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales which jobcentres in Wales have been closed since 1979, and which have been newly opened during the same period; and whether there are plans to make further closures or to open new centres.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Since 1979 two jobcentres in Wales have closed, two have opened and four have merged with neighbouring jobcentres:

Closed	Opened	Merged
Llandovery	Caldicot	Swansea (Castle Street) with Swansea (Grove House)
Bethesda	Abergele (part time)	Cardiff (St. Mary Street) with Cardiff (The Friary)
		Treforest Industrial Estate with Pontypridd
		Bridgend Industrial Estate with Bridgend

Source: MSC Wales.

Two new jobcentres are planned, for Cardiff and Blaina. There are no plans to close any further jobcentres.

Voluntary Projects Programme

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many unemployed people have taken part in the voluntary projects programme in Wales in each year since its inception.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Available information relates to financial years and is as follows:

Financial year	Voluntary project programme participants
1982-83 (part year only)	1,421
1983-84	5,335
1984-85	6,167
1985-86	4,913
1986-87 (to December 1986)	6,601

Source: MSC Wales.

These totals will include a small number of employed supervisory staff.

Rescue Archaeology

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales how much money has been allocated by his Department for rescue archaeology in Wales in each financial year since 1978-79; and what is the estimted expenditure for 1986-87, 1987-88 and 1988-89.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Since 1980-81 the money allocated by the Department to the archaeological trusts responsible for rescue archaeology in Wales is as follows:

1980-81	295,301
1981-82	321,751
1982-83	352,161
1983-84	350,000
1984-85	367,000
1985-86	392,000
1986-87	450,000
1987-88	480,000
1988-89	—

The figures for 1978-79 and 1979-80 are not available. The figures provided for 1987-88 are still subject to parliamentary approval, while those for 1988-89 have not yet been determined.

MSC Schemes

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales how much has been spent by his Department on each of the various Manpower Services Commission schemes in Wales in each year since their inception; and what is the projected expenditure for 1986-87.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Expenditure on Manpower Services Commission schemes in Wales was not separately identified before 1978-79. The information requested is shown in the following table:

Year	Youth Opportunities Programme/Youth Training Scheme	Training Opportunities Schemes/Adult Training Programme	Enterprise Allowance Scheme	Voluntary Projects Programme	Restart Programme
	£ million	£ million	£ million	£ million	£ million

Labour Statistics

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many people in each (a) travel-to-work area and (b) parliamentary constituency in Wales have been unemployed for (i) six months or less, (ii) between six months and a year, (iii) between one and two years and (iv) over two years; what proportion they represent of the work force; and what are the corresponding figures and proportions for each year since 1979;

(2) how many people in each (a) parliamentary constituency and (b) travel-to-work area in Wales between the ages of 16 years and 21 years are (i) unemployed, (ii) in full-time education and (iii) on Government-sponsored training schemes; what proportion each category represents of the population of that age group in those areas; and what are the corresponding figures for each year since 1979.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Water Supplies

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales what financial assistance is available from his department to local authorities in Wales to assist them in ensuring adequate water supplies to the public.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Grant-aid at the rate of 35 per cent. of eligible expenditure is available through the Rural Water Supplies and Sewerage Acts 1944 to 1971 for the first time provision of mains water and sewerage facilities in rural areas in respect of projects requisitioned by local authorities.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales what funds have been made available for conversion from common water supply systems to separate supply pipe systems through the Welsh water authority since 1979.

Mr. Mark Robinson: No specific funds have been made available by central Government to the Welsh water authority for the conversion of common water supply systems to separate supply pipe systems. Details of the authority's expenditure on such schemes is not held centrally; I have asked the chairman to write to the hon. Gentleman directly.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has as to how many homes in each district health authority area in Wales which were previously supplied with water by a common supply pipe have had a separate supply pipe installed under the common supply pipe scheme.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Such information is not held centrally. I have asked the chairman of the Welsh water authority to write direct to the hon. Gentleman.

Historic Buildings Council

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to receive the next annual report of the Historic Buildings Council for Wales.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The latest published report of the Historic Buildings Council was laid before Parliament in October 1986. A further report is expected later this year.

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many people were accepted as homeless by each local authority in Wales in 1986; and what are the corresponding figures for each year since 1979;

(2) how many homeless persons were housed by each of the Welsh housing authorities in Wales in each year since 1979; and what proportion of those accepted as homeless in each area they represent.

Mr. Mark Robinson: [pursuant to the reply, 22 January 1987, c. 683-84]: The information requested is shown in the following tables:

EMPLOYMENT

Community Programme

Mr. Leighton asked the Paymaster General how many participants there were on the community programme in 1986; and how many are anticipated for the current year.

Mr. Lee: In the 12 months to 12 December 1986, the latest date for which statistics are available, there were 307,405 entrants to the community programme.

In 1987, we expect that the community programme will continue to provide opportunities for around 300,000 people.

Nuclear Safety

Mr. Strang asked the Paymaster General if he will list for each of the last five years the amount of money spent by the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate on assessing emergency plans and emergency plan exercises.

Mr. Trippier: This information is not readily available. I shall write to the hon. Member and place a copy in the House Library.

Mr. Strang asked the Paymaster General if he will list the persons employed by the nuclear installations inspectorate who have been involved in the assessment of emergency plans for nuclear power stations; if he will list their area of expertise, qualifications and previous employment; and if he will list any outside consultants employed by the nuclear installations inspectorate in assessing emergency plans, giving in each case their area of expertise.

Mr. Trippier: It is not the policy of the Health and Safety Executive to make public personal details of staff or outside consultants employed by Her Majesty's nuclear installations inspectorate and who may be involved in the assessment of emergency plans for nuclear power stations. Information on the expertise and so on of inspectors and outside consultants will be found in the Health and Safety Executive's publication "The Work of Her Majesty's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate", a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

The inspectorate uses its own staff to assess emergency plans.

Professional and Executive Recruitment

Mr. Wigley asked the Paymaster General how many people have been placed in jobs in Wales by Professional and Executive Recruitment in each year since its establishment; and during each of those years (a) how many people from outside Wales were placed in jobs in Wales, (b) how many people from Wales were placed in jobs in Wales and (c) how many people from Wales were placed in jobs outside Wales.

Mr. Lee: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

PRIME MINISTER

President Reagan

Q34. Dr. Godman asked the Prime Minister if she has any plans to meet President Reagan in the near future.

The Prime Minister: I have no plans to meet President Reagan in the near future.

Fraserburgh

Q47. Mr. McQuarrie asked the Prime Minister if she will pay an official visit to Fraserburgh.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Engagements

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 12 February.

Mr. Greenway asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 12 February.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 12 February.

Mr. Pike asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 12 February.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House I shall be having further meetings later today.

Anglo-Irish Agreement

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Prime Minister what representations she has received from the leader of the Alliance party in Northern Ireland regarding the conditions attached to that party's support for the Anglo-Irish agreement.

The Prime Minister: The leader of the Alliance party, Mr. Cushnahan, wrote to me on 26 November 1986 setting out his party's views on a number of matters relating to the Anglo-Irish Agreement. I sent him a full reply on 15 December. The correspondence has been published. Copies of both letters are being placed in the Library.

Nuclear Accidents

Mr. Strang asked the Prime Minister, pursuant to her reply of 18 December 1986, Official Report, column 612, in the event of a nuclear accident in Britain, which member of the Government would take the lead in co-ordinating Government action.

The Prime Minister: Responsibility for co-ordinating Government action in the event of a nuclear accident in the United Kingdom would depend on the circumstances and locality of the accident. The relevant Ministers are the Secretaries of State for Energy, Defence, Scotland and Transport.

Mr. Beith asked the Prime Minister if, in the light of recommendation 6(a) of the report on the Sizewell public inquiry by Sir Frank Layfield, concerning a review by the Health and Safety Executive of the extent of the area covered by emergency plans, and, pursuant to her reply to the hon. Member for Stafford (Mr. Cash) on 18 December, Official Report, column 612, she will place in the Library copies of any post-Chernobyl review papers relating to (a) the adequacy of the areas covered by existing emergency plans for nuclear sites and (b) the costs or practicability of extending the areas covered by emergency plans for nuclear sites; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I have nothing to add to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Stafford (Mr. Cash) on 18 December 1986.

DEFENCE

Tactical Missile System

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about United Kingdom involvement in plans for a new tactical missile system.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I shall answer shortly.

Swynnerton Range

Mrs. Golding asked the Secretary of State for Defence who has tendered for the range at Swynnerton near Stone; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Following evaluation of eight competitive tenders, a contract for the provision of support services at the Proof and Experimental Establishment at Cold Meece near Swynnerton was placed with RCA Ltd. on 1 February 1987.

Armoured Production

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will consider establishing a European research development unit to harmonise and economise on armoured production; and if he will make a astatement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No. For the present this aim is best served by continuing to work through our existing machinery for promoting international collaboration. This machinery includes the independent European group, the NATO conference of national armaments directors, and our various bilateral arrangements with NATO Allies, in all of which we are working actively to increase collaboration.

Defence Projects

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will provide to the Comptroller and Auditor General within the framework agreed for provision of information on projects the sums to date expended under (a) project definition, (b) development and (c) manufature of the Zircon project.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave in 11 February 1987.

Squadron Leader Hare

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Defence what action he is taking to restrain Squadron Leader Hare from making unauthorised statements to the press; and what disciplinary action has been taken with regard to unauthorised statements to the press by Royal Air Force officers in the course of the last month.

Mr. Freeman: "Queen's Regulations (RAF)" contain provisons governing not only contacts with the press but also the correct procedure to be followed by officers who wish to state a complaint. Squadron Leader Hare has been interviewed and reminded of these. Unauthorised statements to the press by Royal Air Force officers are unusual; it has not been necessary to take any disciplinary action in the course of the last month.

Royal Air Force

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total number of Royal Air Force pilots short of establishment.

Mr. Freeman: The Royal Air Force at present has sufficient pilots to fill cockpits; at 1 January 1987 it was 19 short of the overall requirement for trained pilots.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many pilots applying for premature early retirement from the Royal Air Force have been removed from flying duties in each of the past three years.

Mr. Freeman: Since October 1986, it has been the policy to review the future employment of pilots in flying appointments who have applied for premature voluntary release in order that the RAF does not invest further valuable experience and expensive training on those who have indicated a wish to leave. However, each case is considered on its merits in the light of the service interest. As a result of this policy, since 1 October 1986, 11 pilots have been posted to and are now serving in ground appointments.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many pilots and navigators in the Royal Air Force qualified for, and capable of, flying duties of the rank of (a) pilot officer, (b) flight lieutenant, (c) squadron leader and (d) group captain are at present engaged in non-flying duties.

Mr. Freeman: The number of pilots and nagivators, by rank, qualified and capable of flying duties who, on 1 January 1987, were posted to non-flying duties was:

	Pilots	Navigators	Total
Group Captain	98	29	127
Wing Commander	235	113	348
Squadron Leader	296	330	626
Flight Lieutenant	154	196	350
Flag Officer	2	3	5
Total	785	671	1,456

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many pilots indicated a wish to apply for premature early retirement and then withdrew their applications on being informed that if they continued with their application they would be removed from flying duties in each of the past three years.

Mr. Freeman: Officers are not required to explain their reasons for withdrawing PVR applications. However, since October 1986 when the policy to consider posting from flying appointments officers who apply to PVR was introduced, five pilots have withdrawn their applications.

Pensions

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence if, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Kingston upon Hull, North on 2 February, Official Report, column 516, he will state the number of service men and women who received lump sums or pensions under the armed forces pension scheme for each year since the scheme came into operation.

Mr. Freeman: It is not possible to provide the information requested without disproportionate cost.

Royal Navy (Drugs)

Mr. Robert Atkins asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he is satisfied with the anti-drug enforcement measures currently in use in the Royal Navy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The Royal Navy has a comprehensive set of measures to combat drug abuse, as do the other two services. Extensive and regular education is given, and active steps are taken to uncover possible abuse. All suspicions and allegations are investigated thoroughly, and where there is sufficient evidence the case is brought to trial either by the naval authorities or the civil courts. The sentences awarded by naval authorities are severe, nearly always involving a period in dentention and often dismissal from the service. Administrative discharge is considered where trial is inappropriate or following a civil conviction. Counselling is arranged for all offenders whether discharged or retained. These measures are regularly reviewed and updated.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Universities (Grants)

Mr. Brandon-Bravo asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will announce the recurrent grants allocated to universities for the academic year 1987-88 by the University Grants Committee, along with the provisional allocations for future years.

Mr. Walden: The University Grants Committee's initial allocation of recurrent grant to universities in 1987-88, along with provisional indications of the basic distribution for 1988-89 and 1989-90, is shown in the table. Copies of the general letter of guidance that the chairman of the UGC has sent to all universities have been placed in the Library. The general letter will be followed in about a week's time by an institutional annex about student numbers and funding for individual universities. These annexes will also be placed in the Library.

The total grant distributed by the UGC as announced in the table does not include items which it is the UGC's practice to allocate separately, such as local authority rates, the overseas research student awards scheme and the committee's small central reserve. Nor does it include provision which is to be allocated separately in respect of certain initiatives, some of which were referred to in my right hon. Friend's announcement on 6 November 1986 at columns 487-91, in answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Salisbury (Mr. Key).

The total recurrent grant available to the UGC in 1987-88 is £1,432 million, of which £150 million will be distributed later in addition to the amounts shown in the table.

Schools (Finance)

Mr. Hind asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish the guidelines supplied to shire county education authorities on applying for capital grants in the financial year 1987-88.

Mr. Dunn: My right hon. Friend does not make capital grants to local education authorities. The Department's letter of 30 June 1986, a copy of which I have placed in the Library of the House, invites all local education authorities to submit information about their capital expenditure plans for 1987-88 as a basis for the formulation of expenditure allocations for that year, and gives guidance about the form in which that information should be supplied.

Chancellors School

Mr. Murphy asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received from pupils and parents regarding the future of Chancellors school, Brookmans Park; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: My right hon. Friend has received no such representations.

Trafford

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will meet representatives of Trafford education committee and the Salford Roman Catholic diocese to discuss the reorganisation of secondary education in Trafford.

Mr. Dunn: My right hon. Friend has received no request for such a meeting.

Secondary Schools (Substandard Places)

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science, further to his reply to the hon. Member for Yeovil on 9 February, Official Report, column 27, concerning recent information on substandard places in secondary schools, what comparable information is available from responses made by local education authorities in other years since 1979; if he will place copies in the Library of each circular letter sent by his Department in any year since 1979 requesting information on substandard secondary places or schools; if he will publis in the Official Report a table similar to that given in his reply of 9 February, showing figures for the earliest year since 1979 for which such figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

TRANSPORT

M1 (Telephones)

Mr. Harrison asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many unserviceable telephones are there on the M1 motorway service stations between London and Wakefield; when they were reported faulty; and when they will be made serviceable.

Mr. Moore: On 6 February, 46 of the 147 public telephones provided at motorway service areas on M1 were out of order. The 46 included telephones from which 999 calls could continue to be made. Some of the faults were reported more than two weeks ago.

Provision and maintenance of the telephones is the responsibility of service area operators in association with British Telecom. I look to them to have the necessary repairs carried out as soon as practicable.

Mr. Harrison asked the Secretary of State for Transport when telephone number 830185 on the Rothersthorpe service station on the M1 southbound between Wakefield and London was reported as unserviceable; and when it will be repaired.

Mr. Moore: This is a matter for the operator of the Rothersthorpe motorway service area (Blue Boar). I understand that the telephones are checked daily, and faults reported almost immediately. I also understand BT gives high priority to repairing public telephones in motorway service areas.

Cars (Change of Ownership)

Mr. Iain Mills asked the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of car owners changing cars notify change of ownership to the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Centre; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The DVLC register relates to vehicle keepers rather than owners. In 1986 some 8 million changes of keepership were notified to the centre, the number of such changes which were not notified is unknown, but is thought to be relatively small.

Private Hire Vehicles

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his reply of 26 January, Official Report, column 2, in which respects the Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1976 is not achieving its intended purpose so far as it relates to licensed private hire vehicles; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: I hope to discuss this question with my hon. Friend shortly.

M1 Service Stations

Mr. Harrison asked the Secretary of State for Transport on what date the 1986 annual inspection was carried out on all the service stations on the M1 between London and Wakefield; and if he will identify individually each service station by name and date.

Mr. Moore: Inspections were last made at motorway service areas on the M1 as follows:

Service Area	Date
Woolley Edge	7 July 1986
Woodall	24 July 1986
Trowell	27 November 1986
Leicester Forest East	27 November 1986
Watford Gap	10 October 1986
Rothersthorpe	10 October 1986
Newport Pagnall	27 July 1986
Toddington	5 November 1986
Scratchwood	30 October 1985

A further inspection of Scratchwood will be made soon.

Transportation of Hazardous Goods

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what representations he has received on the minimum weight exemption level under the transportation of hazardous goods regulations after 1 April 1987;

(2) what representations he has received regarding the permitted designs of refrigerated lorries following the 1 April implementation of the transportation of hazardous goods regulations;

(3) if he will take steps to publicise the position of vehicles such as refrigerated lorries following the implementation of the transportation of hazardous goods regulations on 1 April;

(4) how many currently operating vehicles will be excluded from British roads following the implementation of the transportation of hazardous goods regultations on 1 April.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: New regulations — The Road Traffic (Carriage of Dangerous Substances in Packages etc) Regulations — come into effect on 6 April 1987. They will not exclude any vehicles, nor contain any provisions specifically related to refrigerated vehicles. I have received no representations on the new provisions.

If the hon. Gentleman has a particular point in mind, perhaps he could write to me.

Light Dues

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will list information available to him on which maritime member states of the European Community charge users light dues; and, in each case, to which categories of users the charge applies.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Within the EC member states light dues are charged in Greece, the Republic of Ireland and the United Kingdom. I have no information about the scope of the charges in Greece, but in the Republic of Ireland I understand they are levied on the same categories of use as in the United Kingdom, although the rates may differ from time to time. The categories of use that are subject to charges in the United Kingdom at present are set out in the Merchant Shipping (Light Dues) Regulations 1981: I have laid a copy in the Library. My right hon. Friend announced on 5 February that he was considering extending light dues liability to the larger fishing vessels.

BAA (Shares)

Mr. Hayes asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about arrangements for employees to acquire shares in the offer for sale of BAA plc, formerly British Airports Authority.

Mr. Moore: It is our intention that BAA employees should have every encouragement to take a stake in their company when it is privatised. Special arrangements will therefore be made as follows.

Most BAA employees will be eligible for about £100 worth of free shares at the time of the flotation. In addition, the Government will provide two free shares for each share purchased by an employee, up to a maximum of about £400 worth of free shares for £200 purchased. All employees and pensioners of BAA will be able to apply on a priority basis for shares at the offer price.

ENVIRONMENT

Private Flats

Mr. Wheeler asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he now proposes to introduce legislation to strengthen the rights of residents of private flats and to give effect to the other recommendations of the Nugee committee.

Mr. John Patten: My right hon. Friend hopes to introduce this legislation within the next few weeks.

Safety Glass

Mr. Moate asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish available statistics for recent years indicating the number of deaths and injuries caused in the home or factories through accidents involving people walking into or falling through ordinary glass doors and windows; and what encouragement is being given to the use of safety glass.

Mr. John Patten: According to the home accident statistics collected by the Department of Trade and Industry, there were four fatal accidents involving glass in the home in 1983 (the last year for which complete figures are available). Three involved glass doors and one a window pane. In 1985 there were 27,000 non-fatal home accidents (16,000 involving glass doors and 11,000 involving windows) recorded as requiring hospital treatment.

The Health and Safety Executive's records show no cases of fatal accidents in factories from 1981 to 1985 involving glass doors and windows (other than skylights). Separate figures are not readily available for injuries involving glazing.

The British standard code of practice on glass and glazing, which gives guidance on the use of safety glass, is being revised. If the general safety requirement proposed in the Consumer Protection Bill now before Parliament becomes law, the Government intend to approve this code of practice.

Mr. Moate asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress is being made with regard to the inclusion in building regulations of the increased use of safety glass in doors and windows; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: A consultative document on the review of the building regulations issued on 15 December 1986 proposes that a requirement should be added to the regulations requiring safety glazing in doors and low-level glazing in new building work subject to the regulations.

London Docklands Development Corporation

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Environment further to his answer of 5 February, Official Report, column 773, about the board of the London Docklands Development Corporation, whether any nominations have been received for these vacancies.

Mr. John Patten: Yes. A nomination has been received from the London borough of Tower Hamlets.

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Environment further to his answer of 5 February about the board of the London Docklands Development Corporation, how long these three vacancies have been outstanding.

Mr. John Patten: Two of these vacancies have been outstanding since May 1986 and one since November 1984.

Disabled People (Housing)

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will extend to the occupants of rented wheelchair housing owned by charitable housing associations the right to qualify for a transferable discount; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: Transferable discounts were provided to help certain housing association tenants who would have had the right to buy were their landlord not a charity. Wheelchair housing is exempt from the right to buy and hence excluded from the discount scheme.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many units of wheelchair housing have been constructed by local authorities and by housing associations in England in each of the last five years; and, of these, how many have contained two or more bedrooms;

(2) how many units of mobility housing have been constructed by local authorities and by housing associations in Eengland in each of the last five years; and, of these, how many have contained two or more bedrooms.

Mr. Tracey: Completions of wheelchair (previously referred to as "specially designed") dwellings and of mobility dwellings in the years up to 1985 appear in table 6.7*(b)* of "Housing and Construction Statistics, 1975-1985" and provisional figures of the first three quarters of 1986 in table 1.6*(b)* of the quarterly "Housing and Construction Statistics" No. 27. Copies are in the Library.

Information on the numbers of bedrooms in those dwellings is not collected by the Department.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many improvement grants have been made for the adaptation of houses to meet the needs of disabled people in each of the last five years; and what has been the value of these;

(2) how many intermediate grants have been made for the adaptation of houses to meet the needs of disabled people in each of the last five years; and what has been the value of these.

Mr. Tracey: The number of improvement and intermediate grants paid and the amounts paid in the years up to 1984 appear in table 7.5*(a)* of "Housing and Construction Statistics, 1975-1985" and the 1985 figures and provisional figures of the first three quarters of 1986 are in table 2.17*(a)* of "Housing and Construction Statistics" No. 27. Copies are available in the Library.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the eligible expense limit for improvement grants for adaptation of houses to meet the needs of disabled people; how long it has been at this level; and if he has any plans to increase it.

Mr. Tracey: The limits were set in May 1983 and are £13,800 in Greater London and £10,200 elsewhere. There is no evidence that they are causing serious difficulties and there are at present no plans to increase them. However, it is open to local authorities to apply to the Department for approval of a higher eligible expense limit, if there are exceptional reasons.

Capacitors (Health Hazards)

Mr. Michael Morris asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will take steps to advise users of capacitors containing polychlorinated-biphenol to replace them in view of their toxicity and non-biodegradebility;

(2) what advice he gives on the safe disposal of capacitors containing polychlorinated-biphenol.

Mr. Waldegrave: I shall answer these questions shortly.

Lancaster House (Conference)

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for the Environment why he has cancelled the booking of Lancaster House, London by the services of the European Parliament, Luxembourg for a conference from 9 to 12 February; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Hamilton (Mr. Robertson) on Monday 9 February, at column 125.

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the conditions for booking Lancaster House which apply to the eight political groups of the European Parliament; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The rule governing the use of Lancaster House under successive Governments is that a Government Minister must be involved in any meeting held there.

Housing Management Courses

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what further steps the Government have taken, following their announcement in the last two years of funding for studentships at the London School of Economics and Sheffield polytechnic, to encourage the development of new housing management courses eligible for similar support.

Mr. John Patten: Following negotiations between the Department, the Institute of Housing, the University of Salford and Salford College of Technology, a new full-time, two-year, postgraduate course in housing studies will be launched at Salford next autumn. It will meet the necessary professional criteria.

My right hon. Friend intends to provide funding, through the ESRC, for 15 studentships a year for this course. A contribution will also be made towards setting-up and development costs.

The studentships will provide for maintenance and fees in the first year and for fees only in the second year, when the students are on placement.

This initiative is particularly welcome because of the close co-operation between the university and the college of technology, which will be reflected in the inauguration of the Salford centre for housing studies by HRH Duke of Edinburgh tomorrow.

We are continuing to discuss the scope for launching further suitable courses with educational institutions in Newcastle, Bristol and Birmingham.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Labour Statistics

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will estimate how many persons were employed in each region and in Scotland and Wales by (a) British Shipbuilders and (b) British Steel in June 1979; and how many are now employed.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I shall reply to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Timesharing

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has as to the introduction by the Spanish Government of legislation to ban timeshare touts from the streets of Spain; and if he will introduce similar legislation for the United Kingdom.

Mr. Howard: I have no information about proposed Spanish legislation specifically to control timeshare salesmen but I understand that several British companies operating in Spain have already decided to modify their selling methods. I have no plans at present to introduce such legislation in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Michael Cocks asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what timeshare developers have requested supplies of the consumer leaflet called "Your Place in the Sun"; and which have indicated that they will be issuing the leaflet to their customers.

Mr. Howard: Heavy demand for the leaflet has precluded detailed recording or analysis of the requests, many of which are made by telephone. I will, however, write to the right hon. Member shortly.

Mr. Michael Cocks asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many timeshare developers' offers of gifts he has referred to the Advertising Standards Authority; and what was the adjudication in each case.

Mr. Howard: I regret that the information requested is not readily available but I will write to the right hon. Member as soon as possible.

ENERGY

Plutonium

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Energy whether he will publish a table of (a) the yearly production, (b) the cumulative total and (c) the proportion of total electricity source plutonium reprocessed at Sellafield and produced at Hinkley Point A since it was commissioned.

Mr. Goodlad: During the period 1979-80 to 1985-86 the spent fuel discharged from Hinkley Point A and dispatched to Sellafield contained an estimted 2,190 kg of plutonium. The estimated plutonium content of the spent fuel despatched from the CEGB's stations in the same period is 12,597 kg.

Euratom

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the agreement between Her Majesty's Government and Euratom regarding access by Euraton inspectors to reprocessing lines; and what is the current position regarding access by Euratom inspectors to (a) civil, (b) military and (c) co-processing facilities.

Mr. Goodlad: I refer to the reply given to my hon. friend the Member for Penrith and The Border (Mr. Maclean) on 4 June 1986, at columns 594-95. Euratom inspectors now have continuous right of access to all civil nuclear material reprocessed at Sellafield. Civil nuclear material is additionally reprocessed at Dounreay where Euratom inspectors have had right of continuous access since the United Kingdom joined the European Economic Community in 1973.

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Energy on how many occasions and on what dates Euratom inspectors have visited nuclear power stations since 1979 to carry out inspections of reprocessing facilities under the headings (a) civil, (b) military and (c) co-processing; and if he will name the facilities involved.

Mr. Goodlad: Information about individual visits by Euratom inspectors to Sellafield and Dounreay over this period could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

House Coal

Mr. Woodcock asked the Secretary of State for Energy (1) what was the size of the domestic market for house coal in Yorkshire in 1984, 1985 and 1986;

(2) what is the average annual consumption of house coal in those homes in the United Kingdom which use house coal for heating.

Mr. David Hunt: House coal was supplied to the domestic market in Yorkshire as follows:

	tonnes
1983-84	430,000
1984-85	290,000
1985-86	390,000

Figures for calendar years are not available.

The estimated average annual consumption of house coal in homes in the United Kingdom using house coal for heating is 2·75 million tonnes.

Mr. Woodcock asked the Secretary of State for Energy (1) what tonnage of house coal was supplied as concessionary coal in 1984, 1985 and 1986;

(2) what is the annual tonnage of coal supplied to miners as concessionary fuel in each National Coal Board area.

Mr. David Hunt: The provision of concessionary coal is a matter for British Coal and governed by agreements between them and the mining unions. I have asked the chairman to write to the hon. Member.

Diesel Fuel

Mr. Michael Morris asked the Secretary of State for Energy what discussions have taken place with the major oil companies with a view to altering the British standard for diesel fuel in the winter months to prevent waxing-up.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: The specification for diesel fuel sold in the United Kingdom is determined by the British Standards Institution. It is currently being amended, and will be issued for public comment in the near future.

Nuclear Power Stations

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will place in the Library copies of the essential services emergency plans for each nuclear power station in Britain.

Mr. Goodlad: The detailed emergency plans for each civil nuclear site have been, or are about to be, published by the operators. Copies will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Energy, pursuant to his reply of 10 December 1986, Official Report, column 196, for what reasons papers connected with the reviews of emergency plans for nuclear power stations are confidential.

Mr. Goodlad: The Department's working papers are subject to the usual confidentiality rules.

Nuclear Safety

Mr. Beith asked the Secretary of State for Energy (1) what statistical demographic criteria, for each type of nuclear reactor, are used in Her Majesty's nuclear installations inspectorate's assessment of the safety of sites for nuclear power stations; if he will publish a list showing for each existing nuclear power station (a) the relevant limiting criteria compared with (b) the actual population figures in each case; and if he will make a statement;

(2) when public safety siting criteria for nuclear installations were last changed or updated; what information on such safety criteria has been published by his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mr. Beith asked the Secretary of State for Energy, in the light of recommendation 6(a) of the report on the Sizewell public inquiry by Sir Frank Layfield, concerning a review by the Health and Safety Executive of the extent of the area covered by emergency plans, what demographic criteria are satisfied for safety purposes by the site at Sizewell; what is the maximum number of persons likely to be affected by evacuation measures taken in accordance with (a) the existing emergency plan for the present nuclear site and (b) the emergency plan currently considered appropriate with the proposed pressurised water reactor on that site; what is the relevant maximum radius of evacuation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: My right hon. Friend has a quasi-judicial role in respect of the Central Electricity Generating Board's application to construct Sizewell B. It would not be proper for him to comment on the inspector's report, including any recommendation, before he has taken his decision.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Energy (1) whether ambulance staff have participated in the exercise at the local emergency plan at Chapel Cross, Sellafield, Wylfa, Trawsfynydd, Oldbury, Berkeley, Hinkley Point, Winfrith, Dungeness, Bradwell and Sizewell; and, in each case where units were involved, if he will list which ones participated;

(2) if he will list for each of the following power stations what studies have been made of the problems of evacuating all low mobility groups in the event of a worst case atomic accident at Chapel Cross, Sellafield, Wylfa, Trawsfynydd, Oldbury, Berkeley, Hinkley Point, Winfrith, Dungerness, Bradwell, Sizewell and Hartlepool; and if he will also list for each study the geographical area covered;

(3) what specialist equipment, including personal dosimeters, radiac survey meters and decontamination meters are available for ambulance staff at: Chapel Cross, Sellafield, Wylfa, Trawsfynydd, Oldbury, Berkeley, Hinkley Point, Winfrith, Dungeness, Bradwell and Sizewell, respectively; and in each case what training staff have received;

(4) what training has been given to ambulance staff to deal with a major accident at each of the following nuclear installations: Chapel Cross, Sellafield, Wylfa, Trawsfynydd, Oldbury, Berkeley, Hinkley Point, Winfrith, Dungeness, Bradwell, Sizewell and Hartlepool.

Mr. Goodlad [pursuant to his reply, 19 January 1987, c. 402]: All nuclear sites operated by the Central Electricity Generating Board, Atomic Energy Authority and British Nuclear Fuels in England and Wales have their own ambulance services which participate in exercises of local emergency plans. It is unlikely that a reference accident at a civil nuclear site would require the services of the NHS ambulance service.

Circulars HC(85)24, and WHC(85)34 in Wales, nevertheless require health authorities, who manage the ambulance service locally, to ensure that all ambulance staff are made aware of the contingency plans at civil nuclear sites and how they fit in with health authorities major accident plans.

NHS ambulance services have participated in exercises at Wylfa, Trawsfynydd, Oldbury, Berkeley, Hinkley Point, Dungeness, Bradwell and Sizewell, and have been alerted to their possible involvement by the police during exercises at Sellafield and Winfrith. Site emergency plans provide in all areas where NHS ambulance service personnel are required to enter contaminated areas that they should be under the direct supervision of qualified staff, and that dosimeters and professional health physics assistance and decontamination equipment would be provided to any such visiting service by site management.

Arrangements for the evacuation of the public, including low mobility groups, are the responsibility of the police.

Emergency planning at Chapelcross is the responsibility of the Secretary of State for Scotland.

NCB (Manpower)

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Energy how many persons were employed by the National Coal Board in June 1979 in each region and in Scotland and Wales; and how many are now employed.

Mr. David Hunt: Information on total employees is not available in the form requested. The number of men on colliery books at end-June 1979 and end-December 1986 was as follows:

Area	June 1979	December 1986
Scottish	21,007	4,828
North East	33,766	15,219
North Yorks	31,701	18,530
South Yorks	33,555	16,499
North Derbyshie	12,115	7,722
Notts	33,952	23,538
South Midland	13,294	7,876
Kent	3,024	959
Western	23,172	12,829
South Wales	27,273	11,007
Total	232,859	119,007

British Gas

Sir Trevor Skeet asked the Secretary of State for Energy if, further to his answer of 12 December 1986, Official Report, column 244, he will provide further information on the costs of the British Gas flotation.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: As a result of a considerable reduction in the amount of commission expected to be paid to brokers and financial intermediaries, the cost of the sale to the Exchequer in 1986-87 is now expected to be approximately £10 million less than the figure given in my right hon. Friend's answer of 12 December at column 244.

The projected cost to the Exchequer in the year of the flotation will therefore be £154 million. The corresponding spring supplementary estimate for these costs, which will be presented shortly, is for a total of £208 million. The difference represents transfers of funds within Government, principally stamp duty and VAT, which are not a cost to the Exchequer.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Licensing

Mr. Colvin asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the number of on and off-licences in England and Wales broken down by such categories as his records permit;

(2) if he will list in respect of each bench of licensing magistrates the number of applications granted for occasional permissions in respect of the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Waddington: Information on the total number of on and off-licensed premises at 30 June 1986 is published in tables 1 and 2 of "Liquor Licensing Statistics, England and Wales, July 1985-June 1986" (Home Office Statistical Bulletin, 37/86). Corresponding figures for each bench of licensing magistrates and figures for occasional permissions granted in the period July 1985-June 1986 are given in the associated supplementary tables. Both publications are in the Library. The only other reliable information available relates to the number of garages-petrol stations with off-licences, 212 of which were recorded at 30 June 1986.

Houses in Multiple Occupation

Mr. Knox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his Department first announced that a code of guidance setting out a national advisory standard for means of escape in houses in multiple occupation was being prepared; when he most recently published "A Draft Guide to Means of Escape in Certain Houses in Multiple Occupation"; to what proportion of houses in multiple occupation that guide would apply; and when he intends to issue a national advisory standard on means of escape for all houses in multiple occupation.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Preparation of the code was announced by the then Home Secretary on a written answer on 17 December 1980. A draft version of the guide, on which comments were invited, was published on 27 February 1986. It is estimated that the guide could be applied to around 60 per cent. of houses in multiple occupation in England and Wales. We are at present reviewing the scope and the content of the draft in the light of comments received and hope to issue a revised version later this year. Further consideration will then be given to the need for guidance on other types of HMOs not covered by the draft guide or existing guides.

Police Discipline (Access to Witnesses)

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his reply of 30 January, Official Report, c. 408, to the hon. Member for Bury St. Edmunds, how long he expects to spend on consideration of the judgment of the High Court before reaching a decision as to whether to draw his judgment to the attention of all chief constables of police.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We intend to issue certain amendments to the guidance to chief officers on complaints and discipline procedures later this year after consultation with the police staff associations, including the Police Federation. We shall take account of the judgment in the Connah case further in the course of that consultation.

Animal Welfare

Mr. Iain Mills asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has received representations from the People's Dispensary for Sick Animals and the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals about controls on the sale of puppies.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We received a number of representations last year about the sale of puppies, but none recently from the People's Dispensary for Sick Animals or from the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. The Pet Animals Act 1951 provides for controls over the sale of pets, including puppies, from pet shops, and the Breeding of Dogs Act 1973 provides for the licensing of establishments where dogs are bred for sale.

National Marriage Guidance Council

Mr. David Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to increase his Department's grant to the National Marriage Guidance Council; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: We hope to be able, next year, to maintain the grant to the NMGC at the present level, with some increase in recognition of inflation.

Immigration

Mr. Randall asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many interviews have taken place per month at Humberside airport in respect of applications for permanent entry to Britain under the immigration rules; and how many officers are involved.

Mr. Waddington: None.

Data Networks

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if there are any plans to make use of private consultants in relation to (a) the Government data network system and (b) the police national computer; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hurd: The procurement of a Government data network is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer. Private consultants are used from time to time in relation to the Police National Computer in particular specialised areas, but only where the necessary expertise is not available within my Department. There are no plans for the use of private consultants in any other circumstances.

Domestic Crime Prevention

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will report the findings of his Department's crime prevention unit working in the Surrey constabulary area on what effect cost has in influencing whether the public fit domestic security devices.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The study is not yet complete but preliminary results are available. These indicate, subject to verification, that some 10 per cent. of the sample of 262 householders gave cost as the reason for not implementing the security recommendations made by police crime prevention officers.

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what success his Department's standing conference on crime prevention through its working group on residential burglary has had in devising a low-cost security package to protect residential dwellings.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Home Office standing conference on crime prevention working group on residential burglary succeeded in devising a low-cost security package which is described in a leaflet they have produced. This has been well received; almost 1·5 million copies are now in circulation, mainly in inner city areas.

State Security

Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis about the total cost to public funds of the police raid on the British Broadcasting Corporation's premises in Glasgow on 31 January and 1 February.

Mr. Hurd: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that the additional cost to the Metropolitan Police of executing the search warrant for the BBC premises in Glasgow is estimated at about £2,500. The cost to Scottish police forces is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Nuclear Safety

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library a copy of each police emergency plan for each nuclear power station in Britain.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand that detailed emergency plans for each civil nuclear site have been, or are about to be, published by the operators. Any more detailed plans specific to the police are a matter for individual chief constables and copies are not held centrally.

Bail Hostels

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any proposals for the provision of additional bail hostels; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: There are no immediate proposals to provide new hostels. Not only bail hostels, but combined probation and bail hostels, and all probation hostels, make places available for persons on bail. In England and Wales there is a total of 102 approved hostels with over 1,800 places. During the last 12 months, 22 additional places have been provided by expanding existing hostels. In 1986 average occupancy was 78·7 per cent. of the approved number of places. There thus appears to be no general shortage of places and the Home Office has no present evidence of serious difficulties in finding places locally. We are co-operating with the Association of Chief Officers of Probation, however, in research to establish more certainly the need for such accommodation and the position is kept under constant review.

Remand Prisons

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any proposals for the reduction of overcrowding in remand prisons; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: In the last year we have converted one training prison to a local prison and remand centre and we have introduced units for untried prisoners into three more establishments. Further such changes are planned. In addition we are creating extra places at a number of establishments for untried prisoners, in some cases by reducing their sentenced population. We are also considering further changes to the catchment areas served by particularly overcrowded establishments.

In the longer term, the prison building programme includes seven new local prisons and one new remand centre. Furthermore, a high proportion of the additional places planned in the existing establishments will be in local prisons or remand centres.

Mafia

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what evidence exists of the activities of the Mafia organisation within the United Kingdom; and if he will raise at the next meeting of the relevant EEC Minister the question of the alleged financing of that organisation through abuse of the common agricultural policy.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: It would not be in the public interest to comment on operational police matters relating to the Mafia organisation. Any evidence of criminal activities by members of the Mafia would, of course, be investigated in the normal way.

Deportations

Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will estimate the number of people in each of the last three years for which figures are available who were deported from the United Kingdom using (a) British Airways and (b) other airlines by name.

Mr. Waddington: The available records cover the period from April-December 1984, 1985 and 1986 and relate to payments of accounts for removals at public expense from the United Kingdom following refusal at a port, under deportation powers or as an illegal entrant.

Bookings are made through British Airways or another British airline whenever possible. The number of accounts paid in the relevant period was as follows:

	British Airways	Other Airlines
1984 (April-December)	576	248
1985	1,128	223
1986	1,680	130

I regret that the other information requested is not readily available.

AIDS

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, as part of the campaign to reduce the spread of AIDS, there are any plans to issue free condoms to prisoners; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: There are no plans to do so.

SCOTLAND

Domestic Violence

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he is considering any new measures to deal with the problem of domestic violence in the light of the report by the Women's National Commission entitled "Violence Against Women", a copy of which has been sent to him; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: Though none of the recommendations in this report was directed specifically to my right hon. and learned Friend, action consistent with the measures recommended by the Women's National Commission is taking place in Scotland. For example, the subject of domestic violence, with particular reference to the Matrimonial Homes (Family Protection) (Scotland) Act 1981, now features prominently in training programmes for police officers both at the Scottish police college and within all Scottish police forces and revised guidelines to Chief Constables on the operation of the Act were issued last November by my noble and learned Friend, the Lord Advocate. Research has been commissioned to assess the operation of the 1981 Act, and in the light of the findings, which will be published, we shall consider the need for any further action. We continue, too, to give financial assistance through the urban programme and grants to voluntary bodies to assist in the provision of refuges for women and children and in the operation of victim support schemes.

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with police authorities about (a) training, (b) procedures and (c) information, liaison and referral systems in relation to police duties with regard to incidents of domestic violence; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: Matters relating to the training of police officers at the Scottish police college are kept under continuing review on behalf of my right hon. and learned Friend by the board of governors and other committees at the Scottish Police College on which the Scottish Home and Health Department, the police associations and the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities are all represented. Training on the subject of domestic violence and related procedural matters, with particular reference to the Matrimonial Homes (Family Protection) (Scotland) Act 1981, now features prominently in courses at the college and in training programmes mounted by the Scottish police forces; and this has been given added emphasis by the revised guidelines on the Act which were issued recently by my noble and learned Friend, the Lord Advocate. The police service is fully aware of the value of victim support schemes and co-operates fully in their operation.

Rape

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many reported cases of rape there have been in Scotland in each of the last five years.

Mr. Lang: The available information relates to cases recorded by the police. The figures for the last five years for which data are available are as follows:

Recorded Cases of Rape, Scotland, 1981-85

Year	Number
1981	170
1982	131
1983	139
1984	224
1985	248

Stobhill General Hospital, Glasgow

Mr. Martin asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) printed postcards and (b) personal letters he has received against the proposed closure of the maternity unit at Stobhill general hospital, Glasgow; and how many signatures on petition forms he has received.

Mr. John MacKay: My right hon. and learned Friend has received over 9,600 printed postcards and 205 individual letters about the proposed closure of the maternity unit at Stobhill General. Six petitions containing some 23,300 signatures have also been received.

Gaelic Language

Mr. Kennedy asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the most up to date figures available for the level of per capita support for the promotion of the Gaelic language; and if he will detail the basis and method of calculation for arriving at that figure.

Mr. John MacKay: Excluding possible Scottish Arts Council grant to promote Gaelic arts bodies and using the 1981 census figures for the number of Gaelic speakers the approximate per capita spend for the current financial year is £5·42 net of specific grants to education authorities and £8·45 including those grants. The breakdown of funding for the promotion of Gaelic in 1986-87 is as follows:

National Voluntary Organisations (including Database Research Project)	141,000
Gaelic Books Council	58,250
Direct funding by Highlands and Islands Development Board	242,400
Consultative Committee on the Curriculum	6,100
Specific Grants to Education Authorities	250,000
	697,750

The 1981 census shows the number of Gaelic speakers as 82,620.

EC (Food Stores)

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how much butter and beef from the European Economic Community's intervention food stores in Dundee is to be released in the current scheme to help the needy; and what further plans he has to distribute such foodstuffs on an all-year basis.

Mr. John MacKay: The amount of food being released from stores and distributed is dependent on the needs established by the charitable organisations. The present European Community scheme ends on 31 March 1987, and I am not aware of any plans to extend it.

AIDS

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what procedures govern the giving of consent by (a) prisoners and (b) detained patients to being tested for AIDS; and what information is given to them on the outcome of such tests.

Mr. John MacKay: If the doctors caring for a prisoner or a patient detained in hospital because of mental disorder consider that a test for the presence of HIV antibodies is necessary, the individual would first be counselled on the significance and implications of the test and his or her informed consent would be required before it could be carried out. The prisoner or patient would be informed of the result of the test and given further counselling whether this was positive or negative. The procedures relating to the testing of prisoners for HIV antibodies are outlined in guidelines issued by the Scottish Home and Health Department to prison medical officers on 10 October 1986, which amplified earlier guidance given on this subject. Updated guidelines on the testing of all other patients were issued by the Department to all doctors on 12 December 1986.

Auctioneers (Registration)

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will introduce legislation to make the registration of auctioneers obligatory.

Mr. Lang: No.

Mentally Ill People (Services)

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to change his Department's policy on services for the mentally ill; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Moray (Mr. Pollock) on 22 January at column 1663.

Alternative Land Use

Mr. Bill Walker asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any specific plans to help farmers in Scotland find alternative use for marginal land; and what proposals he has to support pony trekking and pony breeding.

Mr. John MacKay: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my right hon. and learned Friend on 11 February to my hon. and learned Friend the Member for Perth and Kinross (Mr. Fairbairn). Details of the new diversification scheme have still to be settled and will be the subject of consultation. Pony trekking is an area which may be considered.

Nuclear Safety

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether ambulance staff have participated in the exercise of the local emergency plan at each of Dounreay, Torness and Hunterston; and in each case where units were involved, if he will list which ones participated.

Mr. John MacKay [pursuant to his reply, 19 January 1987, at column 396-97]: Local ambulance units have participated in exercises to test the emergency plans at Torness and Hunterston. The ambulance service has not yet participated in any such exercises at Dounreay, though the service is fully aware of its role under the emergency plan.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for Dounreay, Hunterston and Torness what studies have been done on the problems of evacuating all low mobility groups in the event of a worst case atomic accident; and if he will also list for each study the geographical area covered.

Mr. Lang [pursuant to the reply, 19 January 1987, c. 397]: Within the framework of the emergency plans which must be prepared by the operators of civil nuclear installations in Scotland and of their own related contingency plans, the police are responsible for the evacuation of the areas around these installations. I understand from the chief constables of the forces concerned that their contingency plans for evacuation of the population in the event of a large scale emergency take account of the problems of evacuating low mobility groups.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list what specific equipment, including personal dosimeters, radiac survey meters and decontamination meters are available for ambulance staff at: Dounreay, Torness and Hunterston, respectively; and in each case what training staff have received.

Mr. Lang [pursuant to the reply, 19 January 1987, c. 397]: All civil nuclear sites operated in Scotland by the South of Scotland Electricity Board, the Atomic Energy Authority, and British Nuclear Fuels have their own medical services.

External ambulance services entering a site would be under the supervision of the trained site staff. Dosimeters and professional health physics assistance and decontamination equipment would be provided to any such visiting service by site management.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what training has been given to ambulance staff to deal with a major accident at Dounreay, Hunterston and Torness respectively.

Mr. John MacKay [pursuant to his reply, 19 January 1987, c. 396-97]: Ambulance service staff generally are trained in major accident procedures. Staff who may be involved at Dounreay and Hunterston are aware of the precautions to be taken in accidents involving radioactivity. Staff who may be involved at Torness are receiving appropriate training, in advance of the commissioning of the power station.

Public Bodies (Appointments)

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all the public bodies for which he is responsible on which the consideration of the appointment or co-option of a person with knowledge of disability is a statutory requirement; if he will name the persons so appointed or co-opted on each body; and if he will indicate which of those persons is a person with a disability.

Mr. Rifkind [pursuant to his reply, 21 January 1987, c. 576]: By virtue of section 14 the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Act 1970, I am required, when making appointments to the Scottish Electricity Consultative Councils, to have regard to the desirability of including one or more persons with experience of work among, and the special needs of, disabled persons. This consideration is borne in mind when appointments are made, but no individual member of the Councils has so far been appointed solely by virtue of it. Records of whether persons appointed are disabled or not are not maintained, but I am aware that disabled persons have been and are included in the membership of the councils. There are no similar statutory requirements for the other bodies to which I make appointments.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Parliamentary Contributory Pension Fund

Sir David Price asked the Lord Privy Seal if he will publish a revised and accurate version of the 1973 booklet entitled "Parliamentary Contributory Pension Fund."

Mr. Biffen: Production of a revised edition of the 1973 booklet has been hindered by a succession of amendment Acts and instruments.

There is available a leaflet which describes the pension arrangements for Members, Ministers and office-holders. The leaflet is designed to comply with the requirements of the Occupational Pension Schemes (Disclosure of Information) regulations 1986 (SI 1986 No. 1046). Other leaflets, dealing in more detail with specific aspects of the pension arrangements, are being drafted with the intention of creating a booklet in loose-leaf format. This will facilitate the speedy replacement of out-dated material.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Republic of Ireland (Embassy)

20. Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from the Government of the Republic of Ireland concerning the alleged surveillance of the Irish embassy by the British security services.

Mr. Renton: None.

Austria (AIDS Testing)

Mr. Robert B. Jones asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made by Her Majesty's Government to the Austrian Government concerning British subjects who are proposing to work in Carinthia and who will have to undergo AIDS testing.

Mr. Eggar: We have made no such representations. We understand, however, that the Austrian Federal Government do not intend to introduce a requirement for such testing.

Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Council

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the work of the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Council since the conclusion of the Anglo-Irish Agreement, in view of the commitment made by the Prime Minister and the Taoiseach in paragraph 10 of their joint communiqué issued at Hillsborough on 15 November 1985.

Mr. Eggar: The Intergovernmental Conference established by the Anglo-Irish Agreement was set up within the framework of the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Council. There have been a number of meetings at all levels under the auspices of the council since the conclusion of the agreement. In addition, the co-ordinating committee met in July 1986.

Geneva Conventions

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs why the United Kingdom has not ratified the 1977 first and second additional protocols to the Geneva conventions of 1949; whether there is any intention to review the decision; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: We support the aim and spirit of the additional protocols which we signed in 1977. The present position is that we are consulting with our NATO partners but I am not able to say when we may proceed with ratification.

Mafia

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will raise at the next meeting of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation the issue of the alleged use of falsified accounts in respect of that organisation to enable the Mafia organisation to secure European Economic Community funds for the delivery of fruit juice to the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation headquarters in Naples; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: If my hon. Friend can supply details of the alleged use of falsified NATO accounts we will, of course, look into the matter.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Corporation Tax

Mr. Wainwright asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the total amount of agreed losses currently available for offsetting profits in respect of liability to corporation tax; and what was the comparable figure 12 months ago.

Mr. Norman Lamont: We estimate that the total of these losses (excluding the public sector) has stood at some £25 billion to £30 billion in recent years and that the amount is now reducing by some several billions of pounds a year. These estimates are extremely tentative.

Mr. Wainwright asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will answer the question about corporation tax from the hon. Member for Colne Valley which was due for answer on 28 January last.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I regret the delay in answering this question. It is being answered today.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will state the number of jobs (a) in total and (b) as full-time equivalent that have been subject to denationalisation since 1979-80.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The total number of jobs which have been transferred to the private sector as a result of privatisations since 1979 is around 600,000. Information about the number of full-time equivalent jobs which this total represents is not centrally available.

Central Office of Information (Cash Limit)

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he is proposing any further change to the Central Office of Information cash limit for 1986-87.

Mr. Brooke: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class XIX vote 1 will be increased by a further £54,023,000 from £97,977,000 to £152,000,000. The increase will be offset by reimbursements by the clients of the Central Office of Information and will therefore not add to the planning total of public expenditure. The running costs of the department have decreased by £1,439,000 due to improved efficiency and a change in the pattern of business involving some shifts from high resources to low resource areas of the COI.

Higher Rate Taxpayers

Mr. Marlow asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the number of higher rate taxpayers as a proportion of the population for each county in England and Wales.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to the reply, 9 February 1987, c. 137]: Estimates for individual counties are subject to considerable uncertainty. The latest available estimates for English regions and for Wales are as follows:

Taxpayers[1] liable to tax at higher rates as a percentage of total taxpayers[1]

	1984-85 per cent.
English regions
North	2·6
Yorkshire and Humberside	3·0
North West	3·3
East Midlands	3·2
West Midlands	3·0
East Anglia	3·9
South East	6·8
South West	3·3
Wales	3·0

[1] Counting husband and wife as one.

Film Industry

Mr. Janner asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he is prepared to consider similar Inland Revenue write-off proposals for the British film industry as exist in other major western film-producing countries; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 11 February 1987]: The film industry is taxed on broadly the same lines as other businesses and we do not believe that films should be subject to a different system of taxation, but we have introduced into this system some special measures where they can be justified by the special nature of the film industry. These include alternative systems for writing off expenditure on films. Broadly, this expenditure can be written off either over the income-producing life of the film or against income as it accrues on a pound for pound basis. We have no plans to change this treatment. Alternatively, capital allowances may be available in some circumstances in respect of capital expenditure on a British film.

Incomes

Dr. McDonald asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will detail the proportions of pre-tax and post-tax increases paid to the top 1 per cent., 2 per cent., 3 per cent., 4 per cent., 5 per cent., 10 per cent., 20 per cent., 30 per cent., 50 per cent. and 75 per cent. of taxpayers in 1978-79 and the latest available year; and what this represents in money terms;

(2) if he will detail the proportions of pre-tax and post-tax increases, including national insurance contributions, paid to the top 1 per cent., 2 per cent., 3 per cent., 4 per cent., 5 per cent., 10 per cent., 20 per cent., 30 per cent., 50 per cent. and 75 per cent. of taxpayers in 1978-79 and the latest available year; and what this represents in money terms.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his replies, 20 January 1987 c. 470 and 23 January 1987 c. 781]: Information is available to provide estimates of earning levels at the top 5 per cent., 10 per cent., 25 per cent., 50 per cent. and 75 per cent. of the earnings distribution. I regret that reliable estimates of earnings above the top 5 per cent. point are not available and that the other specified points in the distribution could be calculated only at disproportionate cost. The table below shows the annual percentage increases in pre-tax and post-tax earnings for a married man at the specified levels of earnings at April 1978 and April 1986. The earnings levels are those for males (all occupations) paid at adult rates with pay unaffected by absence. It is assumed that the wife has no earnings. Income tax has been calculated using the regimes for the financial years commencing in the appropriate Aprils. Contracted-in rates of national insurance contributions have been assumed.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Republic of Ireland

14. Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what subjects he discussed at his last meeting with representatives of the Government of the Republic of Ireland.

15. Mr. Stuart Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last met the Foreign Minister of the Republic of Ireland; and what discussions he proposes to have with him before 17 February on the Anglo-Irish Agreement.

Mr. Tom King: My last meeting with an Irish Minister was with the Irish Minister for Foreign Affairs and the Minister for Justice at a meeting of the Intergovernmental Conference on 8 December. The matters discussed then are referred to in the joint statement issued after the meeting, a copy of which I have placed in the Library. I have no plans to meet Mr. Barry before 17 February.

Public Representatives (Co-operation)

16. Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what co-operation and contact he now enjoys with public representatives in the Province; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Tom King: I enjoy regular and useful contact with public representatives from the Alliance and Social Democratic and Labour parties. It is a matter of regret that Unionist representatives choose not to pursue with us those issues which are important to the future development of Northern Ireland.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

17. Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a further statement on the Sampson report on matters concerning the Royal Ulster Constabulary.

19. Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he now plans to publish the recommendations of the Sampson report, in whole or in part; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tom King: As I told the House on 15 January, I propose to make a statement to Parliament at the earliest appropriate time on any aspects of the report that fall within my responsibility.

Anglo-Irish Agreement

18. Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the progress of the Anglo-Irish Agreement.

Mr. Tom King: Steady progress has continued to be made, not least on security co-operation. I remain of the view that the agreement offers us a good opportunity for the people of Northern Ireland. It is capable of helping all —and it will harm the legitimate interests of no one.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Wildlife (Poisons)

Dr. David Clark asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the total number of incidents involving the misuse of poisons or stupefying substances on wildlife which have been reported to his Department in each of the last two years; for each of those totals, what was the number of cases which were referred to the police for investigation; and, of those investigations, what was the number which resulted in legal proceedings and the outcome of those proceedings.

Mr. Donald Thompson: In the year October 1984 to September 1985, 65 incidents involving misuse of pesticides were confirmed, 37 of these being referred to the police. One prosecution resulted, the farmer concerned being prosecuted under section 8 of the Protection of Animals Act 1911 and section 5 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981, with a fine of £20 in each case.

In the year October 1985 to September 1986, 67 incidents involving the misuse of pesticides were confirmed, 28 of these being referred to the police. No prosecutions resulted.

Food Aid

Mr. Colvin asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what is his definition of needy people for the purposes of the distribution of free food from United Kingdom intervention stocks;

(2) if he will make a statement on the procedure to be adopted, and by whom, for assessing the eligibility of needy people for free food from United Kingdom intervention stocks.

Mr. Jopling: The Community legislation provides that the food shall be made available through charitable organisations to the most needy. Assessment of eligibility is for the charitable organisations themselves, but the Government have indicated that they regard the term "most needy" as covering people in receipt of supplementary benefit and family income supplement, and those who are homeless, living in hostels, attending feeding centres, receiving meals-on-wheels or very disadvantaged in other ways.

Mr. Colvin asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the procedure to be used by applicants for free food from United Kingdom intervention stocks to be made available to needy people.

Mr. Jopling: Any person who feels that he or she may qualify to receive free food should get in touch in the first instance with the local branch of one of the charitable organisations listed in the answer that I gave on 29 January to the hon. Member for Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley (Mr. Foulkes).

Mr. Colvin asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what help will be given by his Department to charitable organisations before introducing to the United Kingdom the European Economic Community's recently announced free food for needy people scheme.

Mr. Jopling: My Department held discussions with the charitable organisations before introducing the arrangements and subsequently. I am not aware of any outstanding request for help.

Mr. Colvin asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what further action he intends to take to publicise the free food for needy people European Economic Community scheme.

Mr. Jopling: As a result of the Government's public statements through the various media, knowledge of the arrangements appears already to be widespread among those concerned. I intend to make further public statements as required.

Mr. Colvin asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he intends to take to modify the recently introduced free food for needy people European Economic Community scheme in the light of representations he has received.

Mr. Jopling: I have decided to reduce the minimum amount applying to releases of beef from intervention stores. With immediate effect, the minimum amount will be reduced from 1 tonne to 0·25 tonne.

Mr. Colvin asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what help will be given by his Department to charitable organisations for drawing from intervention, bulk-breaking, packaging and distributing free food for needy people under the recently announced European Economic Community scheme.

Mr. Jopling: The European Commission is making payments available at a flat rate per tonne for re-packing foodstuffs into small amounts where necessary and for transporting them to charitable organisations' distribution points. Costs of further distribution to individual recipients are for the charitable organisations themselves.

Mr. Colvin asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many tonnes of United Kingdom intervention stocks of food he has estimated will be handed out as free food for the needy under the recently announced European Economic Community scheme.

Mr. Jopling: I am not yet in a position to estimate how much butter and beef from United Kingdom intervention stores will be required by charitable organisations up to 31 March 1987.

Mr. Colvin asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the recently announced European Economic Community scheme for free food for the needy will be extended beyond the present expiry date of 31 March.

Mr. Jopling: I am not aware that any such proposal is contemplated by the Commission.

Mr. Colvin asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will remove the condition that food provided under the European Economic Community free food for needy people scheme may only be distributed to beneficiaries as a cooked meal; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jopling: The Community legislation provides for free distribution of beef only in the form of prepared meals. It is not open to the United Kingdom to vary this condition, but it does not apply to the other foodstuffs covered by these arrangements.

Mr. Colvin asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many beneficiaries there have been to date of the recently announced free food for needy people European Economic Community scheme.

Mr. Jopling: This information is not available.

Mr. Colvin asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he had with food producers' organisations before introducing to the United Kingdom the European Economic Community's recently announced free food for needy people scheme.

Mr. Jopling: Prior discussion with food producers' organisations was not necessary. My Department is, however, in constant touch with organisations in the food industry and this has allowed consultation on a number of points relating to the arrangements for distribution of free food.

Mr. Madden asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what persons in the United Kingdom are entitled to receive free beef and butter as a result of the recent European Economic Community agreement; what arrangements have been made in Bradford to distribute beef and butter; what action has been taken to publicise this scheme and to help those eligible; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jopling: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave yesterday to the hon. Member for Thurrock (Dr. McDonald) and the replies that I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Romsey and Waterside (Mr. Colvin).

Sir Peter Mills asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has held further discussions with charitable organisations about the European Community arrangements for free distribution of food to the most needy.

Mr. Jopling: Yes. In the light of these discussions, the Government have extended these arrangements to cover provision through the charitable organisations concerned of milk, cheese, semi-skimmed milk, buttermilk and concentrated butter. With effect from 6 February, the charitable organisations are in a position to buy these products on the United Kingdom commercial market. The products must in all cases be of Community origin. The Intervention Board for Agricultural Produce, which is administering the arrangements, will make payments from Community funds to cover the full cost of purchase and delivery to a central distribution point.

The charitable organisations and the Government have agreed that the Community arrangements for distribution of sugar and flour milled from bread-making wheat cannot appropriately be operated in the United Kingdom.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will designate west Berkshire as an environmentally sensitive area.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Horses (Botulism)

Mr. Hickmet asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, what, further to his reply of 6 February, Official Report, column 846, is the scientific advice available to him on the prognosis for a horse which contracts botulism; what steps he is taking to ensure that no further cases arise in Devon and Cornwall; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The prognosis in affected horses is poor and there is no specific therapy. Mildly affected horses may recover with supportive therapy such as mild laxatives and intravenous glucose saline. Practising veterinary surgeons in Devon and Cornwall have been made aware by the Ministry's veterinary investigation service that a clinical diagnosis of botulism has been made in the area.

Mr. Hickmet asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether, further to his reply of 6 February, Official Report, column 846, investigations are being made into whether horses which have died or been destroyed in recent months in Devon and Cornwall from hitherto unknown or differently diagnosed causes contracted botulism; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The Ministry is not undertaking any special investigations into the cause of death or destruction of horses in Devon and Cornwall in recent months. However, the Ministry's veterinary investigation centres will continue to provide a diagnostic service to private practitioners.

Mr. Hickmet asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if, further to his reply of 6 February, Official Report, column 846, he will state the nature, type and description of the fodder being analysed; how many other horses have been fed fodder of a similar nature from the same source; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The fodder being analysed is conserved grass in bags. One other horse in the stable where two horses were clinically diagnosed as having botulism was fed with the fodder and to date has remained clinically normal.

Mr. Hickmet asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, further to his reply of 6 February, Official Report, column 846, from which feed merchant the fodder came which was fed to the two horses which contracted botulism; what steps he has taken to ensure that the fodder is withdrawn from the market and that horse owners are warned of the potential dangers of the fodder concerned; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: It would not be appropriate to name the feed merchant. However, the practising veterinary surgeon has reported that he has notified the company of this incident and told them that samples of fodder from the premises concerned are being analysed. Because of the nature of this disease and the negative test results obtained so far, it would not be appropriate to consider advising the feed merchant or horse owners about this matter.

Mr. Hickmet asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what were the sources of information for the information as to (a) the location and (b) the fate of the two horses referred to in his answer of 6 February, Official Report, column 846.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The information in relation to the location and fate of the two horses was obtained from the practising veterinary surgeon dealing with this case.

Mr. Hickmet asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, further to his reply of 6 February, Official Report, column 846, what have been the results of the diagnosis of the specimens and fodder referred to; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Interim test results on post mortem material and fodder are negative.

Mr. Hickmet asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, further to his reply of 6 February, Official Report, column 846, how many recorded cases of botulism in horses there have been in England and Wales in the last two years; what were the causes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: No cases of botulism have been recorded by Ministry laboratories in England and Wales in the last two years.

Mr. Hickmet asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, further to his reply of 6 February, Official Report, column 846, what assumptions he is using in ascertaining the cause of horses contracting botulism in the case of the two horses concerned.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Botulism is a well recognised syndrome in horses in a number of countries and investigations into the disease have been carried out. Clostridium botulinum is an organism which occurs in the soil. In certain conditions it is able to multiply and produce a toxin in grass silage. Clinical signs develop when the toxin is ingested and absorbed from the intestine into the blood stream.

Mafia

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will raise at the next meeting of the Agricultural Council the substantial payments allegedly made from European Economic Community funds for the bogus export of non-existent fruit juice from Sicily as a means of financing the Mafia organisation; if he will take immediate steps to ascertain the precise amount of public funds involved; and if he will further seek to ensure that further such frauds are prevented;

(2) if he will take steps to deduct from the United Kingdom's European Economic Community contribution that part of common agricultural policy expenditure which relates to the provision of common agricultural policy funds to the Mafia organisation in Sicily for the claimed delivery of non-existent fruit juice to the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation headquarters in Naples and other alleged customers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Milk Quotas

Mr. McLoughlin asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farms in the United Kingdom have milk quotas (a) over 2 million litres, (b) between 1,999,999 litres and 750,000 litres, (c) between 749,999 litres and 500,000 litres, (d) between 499,999 litres and 300,000 litres, (e) between 299,999 litres and 200,000 litres and (f) under 200,000 litres, respectively.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Headage Payments

Mr. McLoughlin asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has as to in which other European Economic Community countries headage payments are made on dairy cows on farms that fall within less-favoured areas.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Cattle (Tuberculosis)

Mr. McLoughlin asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give details of those parishes to be deleted from the list of parishes with a recent history of cattleherds with tuberculosis breakdowns of badger origin.

Mr. Donald Thompson: A full review has been carried out and my right hon. Friends the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Secretary of State for Wales have agreed that the revisions below should be made to reflect the position at 1 January this year.

Parishes deleted from the list of "badger problem" parishes

Cornwall	Quethiock
Blisland	Roche
Breage	St. Breock
Calstock	St. Erme
Cury	St. Hilary
Duloe	St. Neot
Egloskerry	St. Wenn
Kenwyn	Towednack
Lesnewth	Tresmeer
Morvah	Withiel
Mullion
North Petherwin	Devon
Perran Zabuloe	Woodland

In the past, badger control operations in these parishes have proceeded automatically. In future, badger control operations may be undertaken in these parishes only by my Department after reference to the consultative panel on badgers and tuberculosis.

No parishes have been added to the list.

A full list of the problem parishes, taking account of the above deletions, is being made available in the Library of each House.

Agricultural Land

Mr. Steen asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many acres of agricultural land including rough grazing have been taken out of agricultural use in each of the last five years.

Mr. Donald Thompson [pursuant to his reply, 11 February 1987]: For England, the estimated net loss of agricultural land to other uses for the five years to June 1985 was as follows:

Five-year average ending in June	Net area lost (Thousand hectares)
1981	16
1982	16
1983	14
1984	13
1985	14

Five-year averages are used because data for single years are not reliable.

Mr. Steen asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many acres of agricultural land including rough grazing have been recorded in each of the last five years as going out of agricultural use and then becoming dormant, derelict or vacant, in public ownership; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson [pursuant to his reply, 11 February 1987]: The information requested is not available.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Severe Weather Payments

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give (a) the daily mean temperature and (b) the weekly mean temperature for the weather stations used by his Department for the week beginning Sunday 25 January.

Mr. Major: The Department receives information from the Meteorological Office in respect of seven-day periods beginning each Monday. The information requested for the week commencing Monday 26 January is as follows:

Ambulance Service

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will tabulate in the Official Report the patient journeys made by the London ambulance service, non emergency provision for each of the quarters in 1986, as set out and in the categories in his written answer of 6 November 1986, Official Report, column 599-600, showing for each figure for the fourth quarter and annual totals, respectively, the percentage increase or decrease on the equivalent figures for 1984.

Mrs. Currie: The information requested is not yet available.

I shall let the hon. Member have a further reply as soon as possible.

Mentally Ill and Handicapped People

Mr. Soames asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the objectives, priorities and achievements of Her Majesty's Government's policy towards mentally ill and handicapped people since 1983.

Mrs. Currie: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Benefits

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services according to the latest available data, how many claims for supplementary benefit have taken more than 14 days to process before initial payment in each Department of Health and Social Security office (a) in London and (b) in each region outside London in the latest period for which figures are available; and what proportion of first claims for supplementary benefit at that time each of these figures represents.

Mr. Lyell: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to him on 2 February at column 553. The information which was subsequently placed in the Library is the closest available information to that which he has now requested.

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will review the limits on supplementary benefit payments for boarders and people in residential care and nursing homes; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: We have recently completed a full review of the supplementary benefit limits for ordinary board and lodging accommodation and residential care and nursing homes. The review took into account information about charges and costs from DHSS local offices and other sources. We intend to publish in due course a report from management consultants Ernst and Whinney on the movement of costs specific to residential and nursing homes, as well as research reports by Kent and York universities on charges in these homes as they relate to our limits. Our review has also paid particular attention to representations from hon. Members and interested organisations and individuals.

The evidence showed that there is no case for a general increase in the limits. However, our review did point to four specific areas where additional help for people in residential care and nursing homes would be particularly welcome. We propose to increase the limits selectively, in accordance with those findings, to take effect at the same time as the general uprating of benefits in the week beginning 6 April 1987.

First, we propose to increase the limit for people in residential care homes for elderly people from £125 to £130. This compares with a level of £110 in April 1985 —an increase of approaching one fifth over two years.

Secondly, the new higher limit for very dependent elderly people or blind people in residential care homes which we introduced last July will be increased from £140 to £145. This limit permits significant allowance to be made for real variations in the needs of people in residential care homes not just for the elderly but also for the mentally ill and drug and alcohol abusers.

Thirdly, strong representations have been made to us on behalf of younger physically handicapped people in residential care homes, many of whom have very high needs for care. We propose to increase the limit which applies to them by £10 to £190.

Finally, we are increasing the limit for people in nursing homes for the elderly from £170 to £175. This means that the limits for these homes will have increased by more than one quarter in two years.

Taken together, the changes that we propose will continue to enable reasonable charges to be met in homes during the coming year, in which we expect to receive the proposals of the joint working party between central and local government which is due to report by Easter on the harmonisation of funding arrangements for residential care in the longer term.

AIDS

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what co-ordination there is between member countries on AIDS research within the World Health Organisation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: The World Health Organisation has set up a network of collaborating centres in member countries to undertake research on various aspects of prevention and control of AIDS. In addition the organisation's special programme on AIDS is to have a research and development component which will assist in co-ordinating the international multidisciplinary research effort into the disease.

Abortions

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women came to England and Wales from other European countries for abortions in the latest year for which figures are available; and if he will classify them by country of origin.

Mr. Newton: The available information is given in the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys publication "Abortion Statistics" series AB12 published October 1986, a copy of which is in the Library.

Councillors (Allowances)

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received about the financial loss suffered by some local authority councillors because of the interaction between their invalidity benefit and allowances paid for their council work; and what action he proposes to resolve the problem.

Mr. Major: There has been growing concern about the dilemma facing councillors dependent on invalidity benefit. Even if those councillors chose not to draw the allowance paid for each attendance on council duties, current rules mean that they may lose all their benefit as soon as the allowances for which they are ordinarily eligible exceed £25·50 a week. This is the maximum amount that someone is allowed to earn from work medically considered desirable while still fulfilling the basic benefit condition of incapacity for work. The same rules apply also to sickness benefit and severe disablement allowance, but with invalidity benefit in particular the financial loss can be considerable.

Experience shows that people with long-term sickness or disability can give valuable services as councillors even though they cannot undertake normal employment. It would be wrong if they were deterred by the rules of the benefit system from contributing to local democracy as elected representatives. These criticisms have been put to us by right hon. and hon. Members from all parts of the House and we take them seriously. We have decided that the rules must be changed in this special case.

We propose that in future councillors receiving sickness benefit, invalidity benefit or severe disablement allowance should not automatically lose all their weekly benefit (or, as happens in some cases at present, their benefit for the particular days worked) once their council allowances exceed £25.50. Instead, so long as a councillor remains eligible for the benefit on grounds of incapacity, it will be reduced pound for pound once allowances exceed £25.50. This change requires primary legislation, and we will make the necessary amendments to the Social Security Act 1975 at the first available opportunity. However, since we do not wish to deter candidates from standing for the local authority elections in May, I wish to make it clear now that we shall introduce new procedures in local offices to ensure that, to the extent that it is possible within existing legislation, the effect of the proposed new statutory arrangements will be achieved by ex gratia payments. This will take effect from early May.

Heart Disease

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report the latest figures for the total costs of coronary heart disease to the community broken down into medical, social and economic categories.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 6 February 1987, c. 866]: Comprehensive information on the social and economic cost of coronary heart disease to the community is not collected centrally. The impact on employment, social security and social and voluntary services is so diverse that a reliable national estimate cannot be made. The only information that I can give the hon. Member is based on estimates, breaking down the latest cost available by diagnostic group, which suggest that in 1984-85 the cost of coronary heart disease to the National Health Service was about £250 million.

DEFENCE

Hercules Tacamo

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Defence if any United Kingdom forces routinely use the US Navy's EC-130 Hercules Tacamo airborne aircraft for communications; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stanley: United Kingdom forces do not use the US Navy's EC-130 Hercules Tacamo airborne aircraft for communications.

Boddam Island

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to establish defence facilities at Boddam Island in the Chagos Archipelago.

Mr. Stanley: Under the terms of the 1966 exchange of notes between the United Kingdom and the United States, the whole of the British Indian Ocean territory is available for defence purposes. We have no plans to establish any defence facilities on Boddam Island.

Sir John Moore's Barracks

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Defence what investigations are being undertaken into allegations of bullying in the junior leaders infantry battalion at Sir John Moore's barracks, Shorncliffe.

Mr. Freeman: A board of inquiry was convened to look into certain allegations concerning the battalion, and its report is under consideration.

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many suicides have occurred since 1983 among recruits to the junior leaders infantry battalion at Sir John Moore's barracks, Shorncliffe.

Mr. Freeman: Between 1983 and 1986 there were none. The cause of the death of a junior soldier which occurred on 29 January 1987 has still to be determined.

Heysel Stadium (Riots)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Defence if disciplinary proceedings are still pending against any members of the armed forces in connection with their alleged part in the riots in the Heysel stadium in Brussels in May 1985; if any members of the armed forces were arrested by the Belgian police in connection with the riots but not proceeded against by the United Kingdom military authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: There are no members of the armed forces among those accused of offences in connection with the riot at the Heysel stadium.

Royal Navy (Drugs)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence what checks and searches are made on men and officers on boarding and disembarking Royal Navy vessels, in particular for drugs.

Mr. Freeman: As part of normal disciplinary procedures, men returning on board ships may be searched by the gangway staff. Random, occasional checks of baggage were carried out by ship's regulating staff to ensure that dutiable or prohibited goods are not landed. When HM ships return from abroad the normal customs procedures apply. Where there is any suspicion that drugs may be involved the RN special investigation squad undertakes a search.

Royal Navy (Ports of Call)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence what ports have been visited by HMS Ark Royal, HMS Wilton, HMS Hubberston, HMS Iveston, HMS Bronington and HMS Bossington in the last 18 months.

Mr. Stanley: Full records of visits by HM ships to United Kingdom ports are not generally retained. However, in the time available, the following information can be provided.

	Ports
HMS Ark Royal:	Hamburg, Amsterdam, Lisbon, New York, Fort Lauderdale, Norfolk VA, Gibraltar, Souda Bay, Marseilles;
HMS Wilton:	Delfzijl, Leixoes, Rouen, Jersey;
HMS Hubberston	Aarhus, Bremerhaven, Wemeldinge, Leixoes, Ystad, Guernsey;
HMS Iveston:	Aarhus, Bremerhaven, Ystad, Rosyth, Grimsby, Southend, Guernsey, Bristol, Liverpool;
HMS Bronington:	Aarhus, Bremerhaven, Leixoes, Ystad, Hull, Jersey;
HMS Bossington:	Aarhus, Bremerhaven, Leixoes, Ystad, Jersey, Ipswich, Bristol.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence what ports HMS London and HMS Juno visited in their last year of active service.

Mr. Stanley: Full records of visits by Her Majesty's ships to United Kingdom ports are not generally retained. However, in the time available, the following information can be provided.

HMS London paid off in March 1982. During her last full year of operational service, she made the following port visits:

Antwerp
Bremen
Ponta Delgada
Fort Lauderdale
Roosevelt Roads

Records of home visits during this period are no longer held.

HMS Juno is still part of the operational fleet. During the past 12 months, she has made the following port visits (base port not included):

Ponta Delgada
Antwerp
Bayonne
Leixoes
Bermuda
Eastbourne

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many drug offences have been recorded on board Royal Navy vessels in the last 18 months for which figures are available.

Mr. Freeman: I shall reply shortly.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will order an immediate investigation into drug use and trafficking on Royal Navy vessels.

Mr. Freeman: The recent press allegations about drug abuse and trafficking on board Her Majesty's ships are being investigated.

Bombs (Transportation)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the guidelines adhered to by his Department regarding the transportation of bombs.

Mr. Stanley: The transportation of military explosives, including bombs, by road, rail and sea is governed respectively by regulations contained in Statutory Instruments SI 1977 Nos. 888-890.

So far as nuclear weapons are concerned, the regulations applied by my Department are at least as stringent as those governing movements of civil radioactive material, which were set out by my hon. Friend the then Under-Secretary of State for Transport on 25 July 1983 at column 289.

Zircon Project

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether all expenditure so far incurred on project Zircon has been separately and specifically identified as such for the purposes of the scrutiny of his Department's accounts by the Comptroller and Auditor General; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Yes.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Five Star Developments

Mr. Michie asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has completed his consideration of the report concerning Torvinstyle Properties Ltd., trading as Five Star Developments; what action he proposes to take; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: Information obtained concerning Torvinstyle Properties Ltd. remains under consideration.

Mailing Lists

Mr. Michael Morris asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will introduce legislation to require all providers of mailing lists to subscribe to the Mailing Preference Service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: I recognise the value of the Mailing Preference Service to those individuals who wish to restrict the amount of unsolicited mail that they receive. Whilst I would encourage all providers of mailing lists to subscribe to the service, I have no plans to introduce legislation which would require them to do so.

Guinness plc

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has yet been informed by his Department's inspectors about the possible commission of criminal offences in relation to the Guinness takeover of Distillers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: It would not be in the public interest to give detailed information on the progress of this investigation.

Science and Technology Grants

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will specify the number of claims made for various science and technology grants to his Department during each year since 1979; and which of these claims were received from small companies.

Mr. Pattie: I will reply to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

International Telecommunications Union (Orbital Slots)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) when Her Majesty's Government last filed an orbital slot with the International Telecommunications Union;

(2) if he will place in the Library examples of data filed with the International Telecommunications Union in connection with orbital slots.

Mr. Butcher: I will reply to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Teachers (Recognition)

Mr. Mallon asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many teachers have recorded criminal convictions apart from motoring offences;

(2) how many teachers are currently approved by the Department of Education;

(3) how many teachers, as a result of recorded criminal convictions, have had their recognition either suspended or withdrawn by his Department.

Dr. Mawhinney: Information on the total number of recognised teachers is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Seven have had their recognition withdrawn and the continued recognition of a further three is currently being considered. Sixteen with convictions for offences considered not so serious as to warrant withdrawal of recognition currently hold teaching posts in grant-aided schools.

Moslem Community

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the estimated size of the Moslem community in Northern Ireland; what facilities exist for burials in accordance with the rites of the Moslem religion; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: In the 1981 census the number of persons in Northern Ireland who stated their religion to be Mohammedan was 608. Responsibility for burials in Northern Ireland rests with district councils. I understand that none of the councils concerned provides burial facilities in accordance with the rites of the Moslem religion.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Calderstones Comprehensive School, Liverpool

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) what consideration he has given to the disturbance of the children's education at Calderstones comprehensive school, Liverpool, following the proposed closure of the Morrison wing of that school;

(2) what consideration he has given to the timing of the proposals to close the Morrison wing of Calderstones comprehensive school.

Mr. Dunn: Arrangements for the disposal of the Morrison wing are entirely a matter for the Liverpool LEA.

English Language (A-level)

Mr. Robert Atkins asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what guidance he gives to boards as to the standards of spelling, syntax and use of the English language which should be required in A-level examinations.

Mrs. Rumbold: None. The GCE boards are independent bodies wholly responsible for the content and conduct of A-level examinations.

Nursery Education

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what recent representations he has received regarding the provision of nursery education.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Select Committee on Education, Science and the Arts, in its report on achievement in primary schools, made some recommendations about nursery education, which the Government are considering, and the British Association for Early Childhood Education has asked to see my right hon. Friend about aspects of the education of under-fives.

School Population

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what proportion of the school population in each of the years 1978 to 1986, inclusive, attended (a) public schools, (b) direct grant and other fee-paying schools and (c) local education authority schools.

Mr. Dunn: Information on independent schools cannot be readily classified into public schools and other independent schools. The proportion of the school population in England in each of the years 1978 to 1986 who attended independent schools, direct grant schools and local education authority maintained schools was as follows:

January	Independent schools per cent.	Direct grant schools[1] per cent.	Local education authority schools[2] per cent.
1978	4·5	1·3	94·2
1979	4·7	1·2	94·1
1980	4·9	1·1	94·0
1981	6·0	0·1	93·9
1982	6·1	0·1	93·8
1983	6·2	0·1	93·7
1984	6·4	0·1	93·5
1985	6·5	0·1	93·4
1986	6·6	0·1	93·3

[1] Including direct grant nursery schools and non-maintained special schools.
[2] Maintained nursery, primary, middle, secondary and special schools.

Teachers (Pensions)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will allow teachers to include their national service years in calculation of their pension arrangements if their entry into the teaching profession was delayed by national service.

Mrs. Rumbold: No. My right hon. Friend has no intention of altering the present arrangements whereby teachers, in common with all other public servants, can count their national service for pension purposes only if it interrupted pensionable service.

Youth Organisations

Mr. Wainwright asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the total amount he expects to be spent in the current year in grants to national voluntary youth organisations; and what is expected to be the comparable amount in 1987-88.

Mr. Dunn: In the current financial year it is expected that grants to national voluntary youth organisations will total £2,546,180. Overall expenditure for 1987-88 has not yet been agreed.

"Bangladeshis in Britain"

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he intends to publish a response to the parts of the Home Affairs Committee report "Bangladeshis in Britain", relating to education; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Government will be responding to all the Committee's recommendations in due course.

Science Budget

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the distribution of the science budget for 1987-88.

Mr. Walden: Having considered the recommendations of the Advisory Board for the Research Councils (ABRC), my right hon. Friend has decided that the science budget for 1987-88 should, subject to approval by Parliament of the Estimates in due course, be allocated as follows:

1987-88	£ million cash
Agricultural and Food Research Council	52·69
Economic and Social Research Council	24·24
Medical Research Council	133·47
Natural Environment Research Council	71·27
Science and Engineering Research Council	350·25
British Museum (Natural History)[1]	17·56
Royal Society	6·92
Fellowship of Engineering	0·64
Science Policy Studies (ABRC)	0·10
	657·14

[1] Including expenditure of £5·4 million by the Property Services Agency on behalf of the museum.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Police (Searches)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Attorney-General what criteria the Director of Public Prosecutions uses, when suggesting lines of inquiry to the police, to determine the desirability of searches of particular premises belonging to individuals or organisations; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General: The advice given to the police by the Director of Public Prosecutions will be such as seems to him, upon the relevant facts known to him at the time, to be desirable for the purposes of the relevant police investigation.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Clerkenwell Road (Break-in)

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis on the break-in at 27 Clerkenwell road, London, on the night of 26-27 January; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that on 27 January 1987 Mr. Sayed Hussain, an accountant, reported a break-in at his office at 27 Clerkenwell road, London. Mr. Hussain was initially unable to confirm that anything had been stolen but subsequently alleged that some documents had been removed. No arrests have been made and Mr. Hussain has now asked the police to cease their inquiries.

Refugees

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people who have applied for political asylum and refugee status since 1979 have been refused; and, of these, how many have been granted exceptional leave to remain.

Mr. Waddington: Figures for applications, grants and refusals (with separate figures for those refused asylum but granted leave to remain on exceptional grounds) for 1979 to 1985 were published in tables 1 and 5A-5F of Home Office Statistical Bulletin "Refugee Statistics, United Kingdom, 1985" (Issue 12/86). It is hoped to publish corresponding figures for 1986 by the end of April.

Deportation

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people in each of the last three years were charged with an offence and acquitted and were subsequently removed from the United Kingdom.

Mr. Waddington: The information requested is not available. However, no person would be removed from the United Kingdom because of a criminal charge of which he had been acquitted.

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many convicted people in each of the last three years were subsequently deported without a court recommendation.

Mr. Waddington: The information requested is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many convicted people were also recommended for deportation by the courts in each of the last three years.

Mr. Waddington: The number of persons subject to court recommendations to deport were published for the years 1975 to 1985 in table 20 of "Control of Immigration: Statistics, United Kingdom 1985" (Cmnd. 9863). Corresponding numbers for the first three quarters of 1986 were published in table 14 of Home Office Statistical Bulletin "Control of Immigration: Statistics, Third Quarter 1986" (Issue 38/86). Figures for the year 1986 will be given in the next Statistical Bulletin in this series due to be published in the first half of March.

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many people applied for political asylum and refugee status in 1986; and from which countries they came;

(2) how many people are currently awaiting a decision on their application for political asylum and refugee status; and from which countries they came;

(3) how many people were (a) granted political asylum and refugee status in 1986 and (b) granted exceptional leave to remain in 1986; and from which countries they came.

Mr. Waddington: This information is not yet available for the year 1986. It is hoped to publish the figures by the end of April in a Home Office Statistical Bulletin.

AIDS

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of (a) men and (b) women in prison on 31 January who were known to be suffering from AIDS.

Mr. Mellor: There was no reported case, male of female, of diagnosed AIDS in the prison population of England and Wales on the date mentioned.

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the prisons in the United Kingdom that are able to treat inmates who are suffering from AIDS.

Mr. Mellor: As regards England and Wales, I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to his question on 16 December 1986 at column 479. The position elsewhere in the United Kingdom is a matter for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Northern Ireland.

Fresh Start Project

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the prison establishments that are being used as part of the prison department exercise as to the possible working of the fresh start project.

Mr. Mellor: Each establishment will be reviewed under the fresh start arrangements. In the first phase, there are to be development exercises, scheduled to start before 1 April 1987, in the following establishments:

Acklington, Albany, Aldington, Ashwell, Bedford, Blantyre House, Camp Hill, Canterbury, Cookham Wood, East Sutton Park, Eastwood Park, Gartree, Gringley, Hatfield, Haverigg, Leeds, Lewes, Leyhill, Manchester, Onley, Portland, Reading, Rochester, Stafford, Stocken, Styal and Wayland.

Neighbourhood Watch Schemes

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many neighbourhood watch schemes have been established in (a) Burnley, (b) Pendle, (c) Lancashire, (d) Greater Manchester, (e) Merseyside and (f) Cheshire.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: There are 18 neighbourhood watch schemes in Burnley, five in Pendle, 88 in Lancashire, 2,888 in greater Manchester, 2,585 in Merseyside and 3,505 in Cheshire.

Police Officers (Specialist Traffic Duties)

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, pursuant to the answer given by the hon. Member for Grantham (Mr. Hogg) on 10 February, regarding the deployment of police officers on specialist traffic duties, he will state the estimated cost of providing the information covering the period prior to 1986 sought by the hon. Member for Orkney and Shetland.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The estimate of the proportion of police resources devoted to road traffic duties which I gave in response to the hon. Member's previous questions on this subject (5 February 1987, c.783 and 10 February 1987, c.174) was derived from returns held on a computer. Returns for earlier years are stored manually and the records are not in a form which necessarily enables the information required to be extracted. The initial cost of examining the manual returns and extracting the immediately available information is estimated to be of the order of £300. Further costs are likely through follow-up inquiries to try to fill gaps or explain discrepancies.

Wapping (Police Equipment)

Mr. Benn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis, giving details of all surveillance equipment employed by the police at Wapping on 24 January.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from the Commissioner that three video cameras were used to assist the policing of the demonstration.

Mr. Benn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis, listing the full dimensions and specifications, including weight, of all authorised weapons carried or used by officers, mounted or on foot, of the Metropolitan police on 24 January at Wapping.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from the Commissioner that the normal truncheons were carried by foot and mounted officers. Some foot officers drew and used their truncheons but no mounted officers did so. The truncheon carried by foot officers is 15½ ins. long and weighs about 10 oz. Mounted officers carry two truncheons. One is 3 ft. long and weighs 1 lb; the other is 12 ins. long and weighs 9 oz.

Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his policy over the future use of British Airways to return people deported from the United Kingdom following the privatisation of British Airways.

Mr. Waddington: We have no plans to change the existing practice of using British airlines whenever possible, but will keep the matter under review.

Students (Postal Votes)

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will now issue a circular to electoral registration officers advising them that all bona fide students are entitled to a postal vote using form RPF7.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No. We issued a circular letter to electoral registration officers on 6 February which advised them that students who cannot reasonably be expected to vote in person at a particular election because they will be away from their qualifying address will be able to apply for an absent vote at that election on the appropriate form, form RPF9. A copy of the circular (RPA 307) is in the Library.

Mr. Ramasamy Rajendrau

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department why, in the light of the letter of 9 December 1986 from the Home Department to the hon. Member for Newham, North-West, referring him to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office regarding the case of Mr. Ramasamy Rajendrau, the hon. Member subsequently received a letter from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office dated 26 January 1987, referring him back to the Home Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington; Mr. Ramasamy's application was apparently referred by the High Commission in Kuala Lumpur to the Home Office for a decision on 28 October, but the papers went astray in transit. When I wrote to the hon. Member on 9 December I was therefore unaware that the case had been so referred. Having contacted the British High Commission in Kuala Lumpur, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office was able to establish the true position, and this was explained in the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State's letter of 26 January. A further copy of the referral report has now been obtained. I regret the delays that have occurred and shall write to the hon. Member as soon as a decision on the application has been reached.

WALES

European Regional Development Fund

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will specify what grants have been allocated to Wals from the European regional development fund during each year since its inception; how many of these allocations have been de-committed each year; and for what reasons.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The information requested is shown in the table:

Year	Gross commitment (£ million)	Number of projects committed (£ million)	Amount decommitted[1]	Number of projects decommitted[2]
1975	6·2	122	—	—
1976	8·4	116	—	—
1977	7·1	119	0·6	—
1978	17·1	93	—	—
1979	25·6	85	3·9	—
1980	33·0	107	0·6	—
1981	25·5	92	0·7	5
1982	50·7	99	3·3	13
1983	47·3	136	2·2	16
1984	65·6	113	2·6	6
1985	56·9	100	1·9	8
1986	59·5	119	—	—

Figures have been rounded.

[1]Total grant de-commitment; includes projects which have been de-committed in whole or in part.

[2]Relates to entire schemes which have not proceeded as originally intended by the responsible organisation. In addition there are a number of schemes which have not reached the maximum eligible expenditure and a small, residual amount of grant has been de-committed in each case. No records are available of individual project de-commitments prior to 1981.

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many people work on the Welsh Development Agency industrial estates; and what are the corresponding figures for each year since 1979.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The information is as follows:

Number of persons working on Welsh Development Agency industrial estates

As at 31 March each year	Number
1978-79	58,575
1979-80	55,525
1980-81	47,698
1981-82	44,735
1982-83	42,791
1983-84	43,160
1984-85	43,187
1985-86	43,658

The figures do not include Welsh Development Agency staff located at the agency's offices at Treforest.

Migration Statistics

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what was the rate of inward migration and outward migration in each district authority area in Wales during the last decade for which figures are available.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Information on gross migration flows at a district level is available only from the 1981 census and this is given in the following table:

District	Migrants[1] in the year preceding the 1981 census per 1,000 usual residents
	Inward	Outward[2]
Alyn and Deeside	39·3	37·7

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many people from outside Wales came to live in Wales in each year since 1979; and how many people left Wales to live elsewhere in each of those years.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Estimates of migration into and out of Wales are given in the following table. These are estimated from changes notified within the United Kingdom to the National Health Service central register and from the international passenger survey. Migration between the United Kingdom and the Irish Republic is not included.

Year	Migrants in thousands
	Into Wales	Out of Wales
1979[1,2]	55	51
1980[1,2]	51	54

Year	Migrants in thousands Into Wales	Out of Wales
1981[1]	48	53
1982[1]	52	53
1983[1]	49	52
1984[1]	52	50
1985	57	52

[1] Prior to April 1984 estimates of internal movement were based on a 10 per cent. sample of NHSCR data; since then a full count of transfers has been made.

Local Government

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the future of local government development plans in Wales.

Mr. Mark Robinson: A paper, "The Future of Development Plans", was issued by the Welsh Office for consultation on September 15 1986. A copy of this paper is available in the House of Commons Library. The Department of the Environment is undertaking a parallel exercise in England. The closing date for comments is 14 March 1987.

Loft Insulation

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will indicate the total amounts made available in Wales for loft insulation grants in each of the years 1979 to 1987; and what he expects it to be in 1987-88.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Welsh local authorities' homes scheme allocations for the financial years 1979-80 to 1986-87 are as follows:

	£ million
1979-80	1·473
1980-81	1·136
1981-82	1·500
1982-83	2·196
1983-84	1·965
1984-85	3·772
1985-86	2·920
1986-87	2·680

The allocation for 1987-88 is £2·338 million and, as in the previous year, the bids made by local authorities have been met in full.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Beirut (Refugees)

Mr. Soames asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will send immediate medical and food aid to assist Palestinian refugees trapped in the Bourg el Barajneh camp in Beirut.

Mr. Chris Patten: The Government are deeply distressed at the situation in and around the refugee camps. We shall continue to call upon all parties to the fighting to observe humanitarian conventions and to allow relief workers to carry out their essential tasks. As soon as this is possible we shall be ready to respond urgently to requests for emergency aid.

TRANSPORT

Settle-Carlisle Railway Line

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish the financial case submitted by British Rail regarding the proposed closure of the Settle-Carlisle railway line.

Mr. David Mitchell: I understand that copies of the full financial case are now available from British Rail.

British Rail (Finance)

Mr. Haynes asked the Secretary of State for Transport what is his policy towards the extent to which the commercial operations of the British Railways Board should be profitable in every individual year, rather than over a period of years.

Mr. David Mitchell: The objectives set for the board last October do not specify a level of profitability for each individual year, but we have made it clear that we want the commercial businesses to improve their financial performance and to achieve a return of 2·7 per cent. on net assets by 1989-90.

Bus Services

Mr. Evans asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has about changes in bus mileage in the north-west region in the past 12 months.

Mr. David Mitchell: Some reductions in bus mileage have occurred in greater Manchester and Merseyside in the last 12 months. Otherwise I am not aware of any major changes in the north west.

Severn Bridge

Mr. Roy Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement regarding the progress of repair work on the Severn bridge.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Work for the strengthening of the Severn crossing is well under way. The first two contracts, for the provision of improved access and for strengthening the Aust viaduct at the eastern end of the crossing, are complete. A third contract for the supply of new hangers for the suspension bridge is in progress. Tenders for the fourth contract for the major strengthening works are due back on 23 February 1987; this is planned to be a two-year contract, to be completed in spring 1989. A fifth contract, for protection works to some of the river piers against possible shipping collision, is expected to be let later this year. Following the major strengthening work, the entire crossing will be completely resurfaced in 1989-90, for the first time since it was opened in 1966.

Tutbury Bypass

Mr. Lawrence asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has about the cause of the delay in the construction of the Tutbury bypass near Burton-upon-Trent.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Tutbury bypass is a Staffordshire county council scheme. The council's orders, published last September, attracted five objections. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will arrange a public inquiry if requested to do so by the county council.

A1 (Accidents)

Mr. Beith asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many accidents involving death or injury occurred on the A1 between Morpeth and the Scottish border in the most recent years for which figures are available; whether he will calculate these figures as a proportion of the traffic flow on that section of road; and what is the average for the A1 road system as a whole.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The numbers of accidents involving death or personal injury which have occurred on the A1 between Morpeth and the Scottish border were:

	Numbers
1984	59
1985	66
1986	56

Measured against the volume of traffic carried, this gives an accident rate of 0·35 accidents per million vehicle kilometres. The comparable rate for all A roads is 0·78.

Redundancy Payments (Compensation)

Mr. Roger King asked the Secretary of State for Transport when payments will be made to passenger transport executives and district councils in reimbursement for the liabilities for redundancy compensation which they incurred during 1986-87 in respect of their bus operations.

Mr. David Mitchell: My right hon. Friend announced on 4 June 1986 at column 598 that passenger transport executives and those shire districts with municipal bus companies would be reimbursed for additional costs resulting specifically from the effects which bringing forward the abolition of redundancy rebate would have on the special circumstances of their bus operations. Parliamentary approval for these payments will be sought in a Supplementary Supply Estimate for the local roads and transport vote (VIII, 5), and in respect of payments in Scotland for the roads, transport and environmental services Scotland vote (XVI, 6). Pending that approval, urgent expenditure estimated at £7·255 million will be met by repayable advances from the Contingencies Fund.

Channel Tunnel (Select Committee)

Mr. Rowe asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether the Government intend to issue a reply to the recommendations of the Select Committee on the Channel Tunnel Bill in its special report, Session 1986-87: HC34.

Mr. David Mitchell: The Government's reply to the recommendations in the Select Committee's special report has now been issued and a copy placed in the Library.

Railways (Electrification)

Sir Anthony Grant asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will receive a deputation from the hon. Member for Cambridgeshire, South-West, to discuss the proposal by British Rail for the electrification of the railway line between Cambridge and Royston; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: I am studying a proposal from British Rail for electrification of the line between Royston and Cambridge. I shall be happy to listen to a deputation led by my hon. Friend.

Lighthouse Services

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received about the current system of financing lighthouse services in the United Kingdom; what plans there are to harmonise systems within the European Community; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: My Department has received a wide range of representations about the financing of these services. We have no plans for harmonisation. The Government think that, if feasible, the costs should be met by those who use the services. We propose to extend light dues liability to the larger fishing vessels that are exempt at present. Nearly all pleasure craft are also exempt and many use the services. We think that the costs of recovering dues from them would be disproportionate to the likely revenue.

ENVIRONMENT

Home Insulation

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will indicate the total amounts available for loft insulation grants in England in each of the years 1979 to 1987; and what he expects it to be in 1987-88.

Mr. Tracey: There can never be a total amount available since local authorities can, with the approval of the Department, switch resources from their housing investment programme to the homes insulation scheme. However, the expenditure on loft insulation grants for the financial years from 1979 was as follows:

	£ million
1979-80	14·3
1980-81	14·6
1981-82	21·5
1982-83	26·5
1983-84	22·3
1984-85	22·4
1985-86	24·6
1986-87	[1]22·5

[1] Estimated

As my hon. Friend the Minister for Housing, Urban Affairs and Construction made clear in his announcement on 19 December at column 748, £15 million is being made available for the homes insulation scheme in 1987-88.

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on his policy on the homes insulation scheme, in the light of the proposals made to him by Neighbourhood Energy Action.

Mr. John Patten: I shall answer this question shortly.

London Local Authorities

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the total number of written communications between his Department and local authorities in the Greater London area in (a) 1979-80 and (b) 1986-87 to date.

Mr. Chope: No central record is kept of written communications between the Department and local authorities.

Departmental Services

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all functions and responsibilities currently undertaken by any central division or organisation within his Department which is concerned with local authority services solely within the Greater London area, stating the total estimated cost to public funds in 1986-87 and the total number of officials involved.

Mr. Chope: The divisions within my Department's central headquarters have no responsibilities or functions that relate solely to local authority services within the greater London area.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all regional or sub-regional outposts of his Department responsible for functions or services within the Greater London area, stating the functions and responsibilities of such outposts and giving the total cost of such offices to public funds in 1986-87 and the total number of officials involved.

Mr. Chope: The Department's greater London regional office's main functions lie in the fields of housing, planning, the urban programme, land registers and derelict land, together with liaison with the London Docklands Development Corporation and the London Residuary Body. Staff in post total 128. The estimated costs for 1986-87 are about £2,317,000.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the additional functions and responsibilities undertaken by his Department of a temporary or permanent kind as a result of the abolition of the Greater London council, stating the total estimated cost to public funds in 1986-87 and the total number of officials involved.

Mr. Chope: The Local Government Act 1985 conferred on my right hon. Friend a number of duties, controls and powers, including those in relation to the London Residuary Body and other successor authorities. However, the main specific responsibilities undertaken by my right hon. Friend as a direct result of the abolition of the Greater London council are:

- the laying before Parliament of a report in February 1986 on the transfer of functions related to the protection and enjoyment of the countryside, under Section 7 of the 1985 Act.
- the initial preparation of strategic guidance under Schedule 1 to the 1985 Act.

The estimated cost, including accommodation and overheads, during 1986-87 of the six staff that were engaged on the above functions at one time or another is about £55,000.

Staff time devoted to a number of abolition matters in London cannot readily be distinguished from that spent on abolition in all metropolitan counties, with which I am dealing in a separate answer.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what action he has taken since the abolition of the Greater London council to ensure that the functions and responsibilities of his Department and its related non-departmental public bodies dealing with the Greater London area are co-ordinated with each other;

(2) if he will make a statement on measures adopted by the Department of the Environment since the abolition of the Greater London council to ensure that the functions and responsibilities of that Department and its related non-departmental public bodies dealing with the Greater London area are co-ordinated with those of other departments and their related bodies in London matters.

Mr. Chope: The Department, other departments and quasi-autonomous non-governmental organisations consult each other as appropriate on matters of mutual concern.

London Docklands

Mr. Mikardo asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to the answer of 27 January, Official Report, column 169, concerning the price of land to be sold to the Canary Wharf Consortium by the London Docklands Development Corporation, what factors, other than land price, will be taken into account in assessing the terms of the agreement overall; whether the consideration of other factors excludes acceptance of a price below the market value of land in the enterprise zone; if he will list all the previous occasions on which land for which he has any responsibility has been sold at a price below the market value as a result of priority being given to other factors involved in the transaction; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: I shall answer this question shortly.

Rate Support Grant

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the rate support grant, in cash terms, for the borough of Slough for each year since 1979; and what is the percentage difference between the 1979 figure and the most recent figure available.

Mr. Chope: The figures requested are provided in the table.

The figures for 1979-80 and 1980-81 are not comparable with those for 1981-82 to 1986-87 because they comprise the needs, resources and domestic elements whereas from 1981-82 onwards the figures comprise block grant and domestic rate relief grant.

All figures are in cash terms. Those for 1979-80 to 1982-83 are final entitlements. Domestic rate relief grant figures for 1983-84 and 1984-85 are final entitlement; those for 1985-86, and 1986-87 are first estimates. Block grant figures for 1983-84 and 1984-85 are entitlements after holdback based upon provisional outturn; those for 1985-86 are entitlements after holdback based on budgets; those for 1986-87 are entitlements based on initial budget returns.

Borough of Slough rate support grant in cash terms

	£ million
1979-80	3·08
1980-81	3·37
1981-82	3·08
1982-83	2·89
1983-84	3·79
1984-85	3·13
1985-86	3·21
1986-87	5·24

The percentage difference between the 1979 figure and the most recent figure available for rate support grant is a 70·13 per cent. increase.

THE ARTS

British Library

Mr. Fisher asked the Minister for the Arts (1) what estimates he has for the construction costs of the new British Library on completion;

(2) what estimates he has for the construction costs of each phase of the building of the new British Library.

Mr. Luce: The latest estimated cost of stage 1A, the stage so far approved, including the cost of design and supervison of construction, is £218 million at 1986 prices. No decisions have been taken on subsequent stages.

Mr. Fisher asked the Minister for the Arts what schedules he has for the completion of each phase of the construction of the new British Library.

Mr. Luce: Stage 1A of the project, the stage so far approved, is due for completion in 1993. No decisions have been taken on subsequent stages.

Area Museum Councils

Mr. Terry Davis asked the Minister for the Arts when the Office of Arts and Libraries will pay the money which was due to area museum councils in March 1986.

Mr. Luce: I regret that the final instalment of grant payments due to the seven English area museum councils in 1985-86 was not paid because of an administrative oversight in the Office of Arts and Libraries. I have made arrangements to pay a proportion of these payments at once and the balance on 1 April this year. The payments due in 1986-87 have already been made in full.

Mr. Nellist asked the Minister for the Arts when the grant aid due to area museum councils in March 1986 will now be made; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: I refer the hon. Member to my reply given to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Hodge Hill (Mr. Davis) today.

CIVIL SERVICE

Recruitment

Mr. Wareing asked the Minister for the Civil Service (1) what percentage of (a) external male appointees and (b) external female appointees to administration posts in the home Civil Service attended, as their last school attended (i) public schools, (ii) direct grant and other fee-paying schools and (iii) local education authority schools in each of the years 1979 to 1986;

(2) what percentage of (a) external male applicants and (b) external female applicants for administration posts in the home Civil Service attended, as their last school attended (i) public schools, (ii) direct grant and other fee-paying schools and (iii) local education authority schools in each of the years 1979 to 1986.

Mr. Luce: Recruitment to administration posts in the home Civil Service is mainly undertaken by individual departments and statistics on the schools background of appointees and applicants are not kept centrally.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Income Tax

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total amount paid in income tax for the tax year 1985-86 by persons who earned less than the national average wage showing the percentage of the total income tax revenue that this figure represents.

Mr. Norman Lamont: In 1985-86 average earnings were about £10,300 for male employees paid at adult rates with pay unaffected by absence. Taxpaying single people and married couples with gross incomes for income tax purposes below this level had income tax liabilities of about £12 billion in 1985-86, approximately 30 per cent. of total income tax liability.

Concessionary Fuel

Mr. Woodcock asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) whether he has any plans to review extra-statutory concessions in relation to concessionary fuel supplied to miners;

(2) if he will estimate the loss to the Treasury resulting from extra-statutory concessions allowed in relation to concessionary coal supplied to mine workers.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The concession relating to miners' concessionary coal is, like all extra-statutory concessions, reviewed from time to time. The cost of the concession is estimated to be about £15 million annually.

Milk Outgoers Scheme

Mr. Colvin asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how he intends to treat the new milk outgoers scheme for tax purposes.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I assume that my hon. Friend is referring to payments under the Milk (Community Outgoers) scheme or the Milk (Partial Cessation of Production) scheme. Under these, outgoers can opt for the payments to take one of two forms: compensation for the loss of their quota, which is liable to capital gains tax, or compensation for the loss of profit, which counts as income for tax purposes. The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has taken steps to inform those applying for compensation of the tax position before they decide between the two options.

Share Dealings

Mr. Beith asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the implications for the Government's policy on the spread of shareholdings of the incidence of dealings in shares of newly privatised companies on the stock exchange before letters of allotment have been sent out; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

SCOTLAND

Association of Professional Ambulance Personnel

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will take steps to provide for the representation of the Association of Professional Ambulance Personnel on the Ambulancemen's Whitley council.

Mr. John MacKay: By long-standing convention, the composition of the staff sides of the NHS Whitley councils is a matter for determination by the staff sides themselves. I have no power to compel the staff side of the ambulance Whitley council to allow representation of the Association of Professional Ambulance Personnel on the staff side of that council. I can say, however, that the Association of Professional Ambulance Personnel has been granted full local recognition within the Scottish ambulance service.

Conifer Planting

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland on what grounds the Forestry Commission bases its advice that conifers should be planted at least 15 to 20 m back from main watercourses; what account is taken of local geography in reaching this assessment; and in what ways the Forestry Commission establishes whether this advice has been observed by planters.

Mr. John MacKay: The Forestry Commission's advice on this matter is published in its leaflet "The Management of Forest Streams", a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. This leaflet recommends that, depending on the land form, the area to be kept free of conifers at each side of the watercourse should be about 10 times the width of the watercourse up to a maximum of 30 m. This is to avoid dense shading which would block out the sunlight that is essential if water plants and fish food organisms are to flourish. Such areas also provide ground through which water from drainage channels can be filtered to remove silt, space in which broadleaved trees can be planted for landscaping and to improve stream habitats, and easy access for anglers and walkers. The commission monitors whether such advice is being observed in the course of inspections of planting for which grants have been claimed.

Rape

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many men have been prosecuted for rape in each of the last five years in Scotland; how many have been convicted in each of these years; of these, how many have not been sent to prison; and how many have been sentenced to terms of imprisonment of not less than three years, between three and five years, between five and 10 years and over 10 years, respectively.

Mr. Lang: The information requested is set out in the table below:

Persons proceeded against for rape, Scotland

	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985
Total	64	55	52	43	80
Charge proved	40	31	30	20	39
Sentenced to imprisonment[1]	38	30	22	18	36
Of which:
Up to three years	13	6	4	6	11
Over three years and up to five years	12	9	8	3	9
Over five years and up to ten years	13	12	9	8	15
Over 10 years	—	2	1	1	1
Life	—	1	—	—	—
Sentences other than imprisonment	2	1	8	2	3
Of which:
Fine	1	1	1	1	—
Detention of child	1	—	3	—	3
Hospital order	—	—	1	1	—
Probation	—	—	2	—	—
Detention centre	—	—	1	—	—

[1] including detention in a young offenders institution

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people in Scotland have been prosecuted during the last five years for committing the offence of rape having already served a sentence of imprisonment for that offence; and what were the sentences administered.

Mr. Lang: I regret that the information requested is not available.

Health Service (Consultants)

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the total cost of management consultants engaged by the Scottish Home and Health Department to advise on management arrangements in the Health Service in Scotland; and what savings have been achieved as a result of this work.

Mr. John MacKay: The Scottish Home and Health Department commissioned Coopers and Lybrand Associates to review unit management arrangements in the Scottish Health Service and to make recommendations about the introduction of general management at unit level. The total cost of this research, the production of detailed working papers, some additional work commissioned in connection with the research and the printing of the final report was £118,126, including expenses and value-added tax.

The introduction of general management is intended to ensure the efficient, effective and economic use of the substantial resources allocated to health boards. It is not possible to quantify specific savings arising out of the work undertaken by Coopers and Lybrand Associates.

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the cost, broken down by individual health board, of management consultants engaged by the various health boards during the financial years 1984-85 and 1985-86, giving details of the payments made to each firm; and what financial savings have resulted.

Mr. John MacKay: This information is not held centrally.

Population Statistics

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his most recent estimate of the population of (a) Dundee, (b) Tayside and (c) Scotland.

Mr. John MacKay: The most recent estimates of population published by the registrar general relate to 30 June 1985. They are:

	Population
Dundee	177,674
Tayside	394,322
Scotland	5,136,509

Radiation

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will now publish in full the assessment of dose effect relationships referred to on page 118 of the National Radiological Protection Board publication M139.

Mr. Ancram: The Scottish Development Department will publish shortly the Scottish monitoring data relating to the Chernobyl accident for the period up to December 1986. The publication will contain dose assessments.

EC (Food Stores)

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if those on (a) supplementary benefit, (b) housing benefit and (c) family income supplement in Scotland will qualify for free food from European Economic Community intervention food stores in the eight-week European Economic Community campaign; and what monitoring procedures are being undertaken to ensure those eligible receive such food.

Mr. John MacKay: Assessment of eligibility is for the charities themselves, but the Government regard the most needy as including those on supplementary benefit and family income supplement, and other groups of people who are either homeless, living in hostels, attending feeding centres, receiving meals on wheels or very disadvantaged in other ways.

Loft Insulation Grants

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will indicate the total amounts made available in Scotland for loft insulation grants in each of the years 1979 to 1987; and what he expects it to be in 1987-88.

Mr. Ancram: The amounts made available to local authorities in Scotland for loft insulation grants in each of the years 1978-79 to 1986-87 were as follows:

	£ million
1978-79	1·64
1979-80	2·30
1980-81	2·67
1981-82	2·44
1982-83	2·33
1983-84	2·33
1984-85	2·88
1985-86	2·35
1986-87	2·19

The amount available for allocation in 1987-88 has still to be determined.

Agricultural Land

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on his policy for planning guidance on development involving agricultural land.

Mr. John MacKay: My right hon. and learned Friend will shortly consult interested parties with a view to producing revised guidance on development involving agricultural land.

Community Charge

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the percentage of the charges due which he expects to be actually collected by local authorities under the proposed community charge system.

Mr. Ancram: My right hon. and learned Friend expects that local authorities will make every effort to collect all the community charges due under the new arrangements.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL FOR SCOTLAND

Police (Searches)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland what criteria procurators fiscal use, when suggesting lines of inquiry to the police, to determine the desirability of searches of particular premises belonging to individuals or organisations; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: The procurator fiscal in Scotland is entitled to direct the police regarding the investigation of criminal offences. In cases where he gives such directions the lines of inquiry which are considered appropriate in individual cases will depend upon the facts and circumstances of those particular cases.

In general terms, the procurator fiscal will require to be satisfied, having regard to the nature and seriousness of the suspected offence and the necessity to secure evidence, that he is legally justified in applying to the sheriff for a search warrant. Among the factors to be considered will be whether the holder of evidence is prepared to hand it over without recourse to formal legal process.

Domestic Violence

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland if he is satisfied with the adequacy of current safeguards for both the victims and the accused in cases of domestic assault in the light of experience with the operation of the Lord Advocate's guidelines on the subject with particular reference to the extent to which the interpretation of the guidelines is a matter for individual police officers in specific cases; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: The guidelines issued by my noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate provide a source of general advice to police officers and cannot remove the need for the exercise of discretion in individual cases.

I am aware of the widespread concern in respect of domestic violence and share that concern. The matter is under constant review and every effort is made to ensure that such incidents are dealt with promptly and in an even-handed manner.

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland if, in the light of the proposals in the report by Scottish Women's Aid, a copy of which has been sent to him, he has any plans to issue guidelines to procurators fiscal on the police response to domestic assault; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: Procurators fiscal are aware of the revised guidelines issued to chief constables. There are no plans at present to issue further advice or directions to procurators fiscal.

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland if the Lord Advocate intends to issue guidelines on the police response to domestic violence in the light of the recent incident in which a man died after he was left by the police outside in the snow following an intervention by them in a domestic quarrel; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: There are no plans to issue guidelines on this matter at present.

EMPLOYMENT

Skillcentres

Mr. Thurnham asked the Paymaster General what is the number of skillcentres located in each of the Manpower Services Commission's education and training group's areas in the north-west region.

Mr. Trippier: There are nine skillcentres in the Manpower Services Commission's vocational education and training group's north west region, as follows:

MSC VETG Area Office	Number of skillcentres
Greater Manchester North Area Office	2
Lancashire Area Office	2
Cumbria Area Office	1
Cheshire Area Office	1
Greater Manchester Central Area Office	1
Merseyside Inner Area Office	1
Merseyside Outer Area Office	1
Total	9

Youth Opportunities Programme

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General how many people were engaged in the youth opportunities programme for each month of June to August 1983, inclusive; and what was the estimated effect on the number of people registered as unemployed for each of the relevant months.

Mr. Trippier: The numbers of young people engaged in the youth opportunities programme in the months of June, July and August 1983 were as follows:

	Numbers
June 1983	154,409
July 1983	127,800
August 1983	100,040

It is difficult to estimate the effects on the unemployment count as this varies with the different types of scheme offered under the youth opportunities programme and depends on a number of uncertain assumptions. However, on average around 85 per cent. might have been otherwise unemployed during that period.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Madden asked the Paymaster General (1) how many women in Bradford are employed in firms with fewer than 10 employees;

(2) how many women in Bradford are employed for less than 20 hours a week;

(3) how many women in Bradford are in employment; and how many began new jobs on or after 1 June 1985.

Mr. Lee: The precise information requested is not available.

Employment statistics for local areas are obtained from censuses of employment and the most recent are for September 1981. The September 1984 census estimates for local areas are not yet available. Analyses by size of firm or actual numbers of hours worked are not available but, at September 1981, there were 78,000 women employed in the Bradford travel-to-work area (1984 definition) of which 33,500 were working not more than 30 hours a week. My Department has no information about the numbers taking up new jobs.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Paymaster General how many people are unemployed in Slough, by sex, who have been unemployed for (a) less than six months, (b) six months to one year, (c) one year to two years, and (d) over two years, respectively.

Mr. Lee: The following information is in the Library. The table shows the numbers of unemployed male and female claimants who had been unemployed for the durations requested at 9 October 1986, the latest date for which such an analysis is available, in the Slough local authority district.

Unemployed claimants in the Slough local authority district at 9 October 1986

	Male	Female
Under six months	1,307	775
Six months to one year	606	305
One to two years	435	168
Over two years	679	249
Total unemployed	3,027	1,497

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Paymaster General how many people are unemployed in Slough, by sex, who are (a) under 25 years, (b) 25 years to 35 years, (c) 35 years to 50 years and (d) over 50 years of age, respectively.

Mr. Lee: The following information is in the Library. The table shows the numbers of unemployed male and female claimants in the age groups requested at 9 October 1986, the latest date for which such an analysis is available, in the Slough local authority district.

Unemployed claimants in the Slough local authority district at 9 October 1986

	Male	Female
Under 25 years	741	552
25-34 years	732	414
35-49 years	726	286
Over 50 years	828	245
Total unemployed	3,027	1,497

Information Technology

Mr. Pike asked the Paymaster General how many information technology centres there are in Lancashire; and if he will indicate the number of places at each centre.

Mr. Trippier: There are six information technology centres (ITeCs) in the county of Lancashire.

The number of YTS places at each centre is:

	Number
Blackburn ITeC	61
Burnley ITeC	46
Fylde Coast (Blackpool) ITeC	46
Lancaster ITeC	37
Preston ITeC	62
West Lancashire (Skelmersdale) ITeC	52

ITeCs are, however, independent training providers and are therefore free to determine the numbers and type of other training places that they offer.

Community Programme

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Paymaster General (1) if participants in the community programme are eligible for unemployment benefit on the days when they are not working on the programme;

(2) if he has any plans to alter the full extent normal rule to make community programme participants ineligible for unemployment benefits.

Mr. Lee: Social security legislation precludes the payment of unemployment benefit to anyone who establishes a pattern of regular working the same number of days each week. Decisions on individual claims are made by independent adjudicating authorities taking into account the particular circumstances of each case.

The amendment of social security legislation is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Services.

European Social Fund

Mr. Wainwright asked the Paymaster General if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the nature and amount of aid currently received from the European social fund in each of the Huddersfield, Castleford, Pontefract, Normanton, Barnsley, Dewsbury, Oakefield and Hemsworth areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: No comprehensive figures are available for the amount of European social fund support allocated to the industrial areas cited. However, the European Commission allocated the following amounts from the European social fund for employment and training measures taking place in 1986 to local authorities, private companies, industrial training boards and voluntary bodies in west and south Yorkshire:

	£ million
West Yorkshire	5·45
South Yorkshire	1·63

The above figures do not include social fund support for national programmes of employment and training which operate in the areas cited. The United Kingdom Government will continue to support applications to the European social fund from the areas cited as it does applications from all areas of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Simon Montgomery

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Paymaster General if he will provide details of the time, date and place of the appeal board hearing concerning disciplinary proceedings against Mr. Simon Montgomery, a clerical officer in his Department; and if he will give the reasons for the five-month delay in the board's hearing.

Mr. Lee: The appeal board hearing concerning dismissal proceedings against Mr. Simon Montgomery, a former clerical officer in this Department, commenced at 10.30 am on 12 February 1987 at 11 Belgrave road, London.

Mr. Montgomery was given notice of his dismissal on 3 September 1986 to take effect on 17 October 1986. It is understood that his initial appeal to the Civil Service Appeal Board was reviewed by the board on 29 September followed by his main statement on 14 October 1986. The departmental response was received on 5 November 1986. The Civil Service Appeal Board then scheduled the earliest convenient date to all parties, as is its usual procedure.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Paymaster General on what basis Mr. Simon Montgomery, a clerical officer in the Hove unemployment benefit office, was dismissed from duty on 18 December 1986; and if he will detail specifically the disciplinary charges levelled against him.

Mr. Lee: Mr. Simon Montgomery was dismissed from duty in my Department from 17 October 1986 after four separate incidents relating to his work over a period of some two years, each of which led either to a warning about his future conduct or to a disciplinary penalty. More detailed information of the kind sought is properly a confidential matter between employer and employee, as laid down in the Civil Service pay and conditions code agreed with the Civil Service unions. A copy of the latter is available in the House of Commons Library.

Birmingham Adjudication Office

Mr. Terry Davis asked the Paymaster General how many claims were under consideration at the adjudication office in Birmingham (a) on 31 December 1986 and (b) on 31 January 1987; and how many claims had been held there for more than a month on both dates.

Mr. Lee: The number of cases under consideration at the Birmingham adjudication office on 31 December 1986 was 6,170, of which 2,596 cases were held there for one month or more.

The number of cases under consideration at the adjudication office in Birmingham on 31 January 1987 was 5,049, of which 1,730 cases were held there for one month or more.

YTS

Mr. Favell asked the Paymaster General how many people are currently working in (a) the coal industry and (b) the electrical supply industry under the YTS programme.

Mr. Trippier [pursuant to his reply, 3 February 1987, c. 604]: I regret that, in my earlier reply, the number of young people in training on YTS in the electrical supply industry in England and Wales was wrongly attributed to the Central Electricity Generating Board. I apologise for any inconvenience caused by this error.

Professional and Executive Recruitment

Mr. Wigley asked the Paymaster General how many people have been placed in jobs in Wales by Professional and Executive Recruitment in each year since its establishment and during each of those years (a) how many people from outside Wales were placed in jobs inside Wales (b) how many people from Wales were placed in jobs in Wales and (c) how many people from Wales were placed in jobs outside Wales.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 12 February 1987]: The number of people placed in jobs in Wales by Professional and Executive Recruitment in each year since April 1977 is shown in the table. Figures are no longer available for the three previous years.

The information sought in the remainder of the question is not recorded.

	Number
April 1986—January 1987	773
April 1985—March 1986	771
April 1984—March 1985	684
April 1983—March 1984	1,072
April 1982—March 1983	591
April 1981—March 1982	278
April 1980—March 1981	267
April 1979—March 1980	370
April 1978—March 1979	439
April 1977—March 1978	277

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Pike asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the latest estimate of spending by all European Economic Community countries on the common agricultural policy; and what is the estimate for 1987-88.

Mr. Jopling: The provisional estimate for total Community expenditure on the CAP in 1986 is about 23,000 mecus (£14,900 million). For 1987 the Community's draft budget includes 24,152 mecus (£15,500 million) for CAP measures. Figures for 1988 are not yet available.

Fish Stocks

Mr. John Townend asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the Government have any plans to co-operate with the Norwegian Government to reduce the growing damage done to the fish stocks in the North sea by seals.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Whisky Industry

Mr. Canavan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what subjects he discussed at his last meeting with representatives of the Scotch whisky industry.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I have nothing to add to the reply given to the hon. Member on 20 January at column 494.

Sicily (Fruit Juice)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will raise at the next meeting of the Agriculture Council the substantial payments allegedly made from European Economic Community funds for the bogus export of non-existent fruit juice from Sicily as a means of financing the Mafia organisation; if he will take immediate steps to ascertain the precise amount of public funds involved; and if he will further seek to ensure that further such frauds are prevented;

(2) if he will take steps to deduct from the United Kingdom's European Economic Community contribution that part of common agricultural policy expenditure which relates to the provision of common agricultural policy funds to the Mafia organisation in Sicily for the claimed delivery of non-existent fruit juice to the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation headquarters in Naples and other alleged customers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jopling [pursuant to the reply, 12 February 1987]: Community law requires that member states must satisfy themselves that transactions financed by the CAP are actually carried out and executed correctly, and must recover sums lost as a result of fraud or negligence.

The European Commission carries out a full audit before clearing the accounts of member states. If it discovers that Community funds have been used improperly due to negligent administration it has power to reclaim them in full from the state concerned.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Maternity Payments

Mr. James Lamond asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Oldham, Central and Royton claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Oldham, Central and Royton are expected to qualify each year for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Oldham, Central and Royton constituency is covered by the Department's office at Oldham although its boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The number of claims received for maternity grant in the Oldham local office during the calendar year 1986 was 1,021.

It is not possible to predict how many women in Oldham, Central and Royton will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mr. Clelland asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in (a) Tyne Bridge and (b) Newcastle, Central constituencies claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in each of the said constituencies are expected to qualify for maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The (a) Tyne Bridge and (b) Newcastle, Central constituencies are covered by the Department's offices at

(a) Gateshead, and Newcastle St. James, and (b) Newcastle West, Newcastle East and Newcastle St. James although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituencies. The numbers of claims received for maternity grant in each of the four local offices during the calendar year 1986 were as follows:

	Number
Gateshead	2,308
Newcastle St. James	691
Newcastle West	955
Newcastle East	1,459

It is not possible to predict how many women in (a) Tyne Bridge and (b) Newcastle Central will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Denton and Reddish and Stockport constituencies claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Denton and Reddish and Stockport constituencies are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Denton and Reddish and Stockport constituencies are covered by the Department's offices at Hyde, Stockport South, Stockport North and Ashton-under-Lyne although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituencies. The numbers of claims received for maternity grant in each of the four local offices during the calendar year 1986 were as follows:

	Number
Hyde	1,584
Stockport South	2,028
Stockport North	1,848
Ashton-under-Lyne	443

It is not possible to predict how many women in Denton and Reddish and Stockport constituencies will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Great Grimsby received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Great Grimsby are expected to receive statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 2,077 claims to maternity allowance were made at Grimsby, the Department's office which covers the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

It is not possible to predict how many women in Great Grimsby will qualify for statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance from April 1987. However, it is estimated that in total some 230,000 women will qualify for statutory maternity pay and 84,000 for maternity allowance in 1987-88.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Great Grimsby claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Great Grimsby are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Great Grimsby constituency is covered by the Department's office at Grimsby although their boundaries are not conterminous. The number of claims for maternity grant received at Grimsby local office during the calendar year 1986 was 3,096.

It is not possible to predict how many women in Great Grimsby will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mr. Terry Fields asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Liverpool, Broadgreen, claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Liverpool, Broadgreen, are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Liverpool, Broadgreen constituency is covered by the Department's offices at Liverpool City, West Derby, Breckfield, Belle Vale, Toxteth and Edge Hill, although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The numbers of claims received for maternity grant in each of the six local offices during the calendar year 1986 were as follows:

	Number
City	388
West Derby	1,356
Breckfield	1,103
Belle Vale	1,021
Toxteth	854
Edge Hill	747

It is not possible to predict how many women in Liverpool, Broadgreen will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mr. Terry Fields asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Liverpool, Broadgreen, received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Liverpool, Broadgreen, are expected to receive statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, the following numbers of claims to maternity allowance were made at the Department's offices which cover the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous:

	Number
Liverpool City	217
Breckfield	769
Toxteth	551
West Derby	868
Belle Vale	565
Edge Hill	726

It is not possible to predict how many women in Liverpool, Broadgreen, will qualify for statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance from April 1987.

However, it is estimated that in total some 230,000 women will qualify for statutory maternity pay and 84,000 for maternity allowance in 1987-88.

Diabetics

Mr. Beith asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) whether disposable syringes and needles supplied through the hospital service for diabetic treatment are intended for single use only;

(2) what guidance is given to the hospital service with regard to the proportion of disposable syringes to be supplied for diabetic treatment to the number of injections each requires.

Mr. Newton: It is for consultants to advise their patients on the use best suited to their own condition. Departmental guidance on clinical matters would be inappropriate.

AIDS

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what plans he has to ensure that the information contained in the AIDS leaflet, recently distributed to all households, is communicated to the functionally illiterate in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Newton: We are at the start of a long campaign to educate the public about AIDS, the first stage of which has been whole population coverage by advertising in the media and by the AIDS leaflet. We are considering how best to build on this in order to reach specific groups within the community, including those with reading difficulties.

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether his plans to ensure that the AIDS leaflet reaches students in universities and colleges will include arrangements to ensure that YTS trainees training on employers' premises and with private training agencies are similarly informed.

Mr. Newton: The special arrangements made for supplies of the AIDS leaflet to be available in colleges and universities were to enable students living away from home to have their own copies.

I understand that the majority of trainees under the YTS scheme and at private training agencies live at home. They should therefore have had the opportunity of reading the leaflet when it was distributed to each household.

Posters are currently being displayed in main post offices where copies of the leaflet are available.

Benefits

Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the total number of supplementary benefit claimants awarded an additional requirement for domestic assistance; and what were the average amounts paid in each of the years 1980 to 1986 inclusive, for (a) residential assistance and (b) other cases.

Mr. Major: The available information, which does not differentiate between residential assistance and other cases, is as follows:

	Total number of domestic assistance additions (thousands)	Average weekly amount (1) £
1980	4	1·37
1981	5	2·51
1982	4	3·83
1983	2	3·59
(2) 1984	3	3·92

Notes

(1) These amounts do not take account of the effect of the available scale margin in relevant cases so that the average amount of benefit actually received could be somewhat lower than shown.

(2) Latest available date.

Source: Annual statistical inquiries.

Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the total number of supplementary benefit claimants awarded an additional requirement for attendance needs; and what was the average amount paid in each of the years 1980 to 1986, inclusive.

Mr. Major: The number of cases in the statistical sample is too small to provide a reliable estimate of the number of claimants with additional requirements for attendance needs or average amounts. Indications are, however, that for each year 1980 to 1984, the latest year for which information is available, there were fewer than 1,500 claimants. Payments cannot exceed the lower rate of attendance allowance.

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he will be in a position to reply to the letters from the hon. Member for Liverpool, West Derby of 9 December 1986 and 15 January in respect of recent changes in supplementary benefit single payments.

Mr. Lyell: I wrote to the hon. Member on 11 February.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people in Slough are currently in receipt of (a) supplementary benefit, (b) sickness benefit, (c) housing benefit and (d) maternity benefit, respectively.

Mr. Lyell: The table gives the latest available figures of the number of people receiving (a) supplementary benefit, (b) sickness benefit and (c) maternity allowance from the Department's local office at Slough:

	Number
(a) Supplementary benefit	12,900
(b) Sickness/invalidity benefit	2,374
(c) Maternity allowance	690

Source:

(a) 100 per cent. count of cases in action on 10 December 1986.

(b) and (c) 100 per cent. count of cases in action on 13 January 1987.

The estimated number of people who were in receipt of housing benefit in the Slough borough council area at April 1986—the latest available information—was 9,469.

Severe Weather Payments

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many pensioners in (a) Scotland, (b) Strathclyde region, (c) Glasgow district and (d) Shettleston constituency applied for severe weather payments in the current year; and how many applications were (i) accepted and (ii) refused.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claims by pensioners for exceptionally cold weather payments is not available.

Statistics are being maintained on the total number of exceptionally cold weather payments made, the amount of those payments and the number refused, and these will be published in due course.

Cervical Cancer

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received in respect of a new, semi-automated test, known as the HDA test, for screening for cervical cancer; what his response has been; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: We have had numerous representations from and on behalf of the charity "Quest for a Test for Cancer", which is developing this test. We have made it clear that the charity must obtain an independent evaluation of its research before we could consider the test's potential for mass screening in the National Health Service. We have advised the charity on ways in which it might secure such an evaluation.

Ambulance Personnel

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received from the Association of Professional Ambulance Personnel regarding its non-representation on the Whitley Council; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: We have received a number of representations from the association and from right hon. and hon. Members. I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Scotland, my hon. Friend the Member for Argyll and Bute (Mr. MacKay) to the right hon. Member for Tweeddale, Ettrick and Lauderdale (Mr. Steel) today.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Afghanistan

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from Amnesty International on torture in Afghanistan; what representations he has made about it; what action he proposes to take; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The Amnesty International report on torture in Afghanistan has been brought to our attention on several occasions. As I said on 16 December, it confirms a horrifying picture of denial of human rights in Afghanistan. We have raised the matter with the Soviet embassy in London and the Soviet Government can be in no doubt of our concern at the incidents of torture which have been reported and of the alleged complicity of Soviet personnel.

Egypt

Sir Dudley Smith asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the current state of the United Kingdom's relationship with Egypt; what attitude Her Majesty's Government take to the Egyptian middle eastern peace initiative; and if he will make a statement on these matters.

Mr. Renton: Our relations with Egypt are excellent. Egypt has a major role to play in the search for peace in the middle east. We maintain a regular and friendly dialogue on ways of making progress and our views are close.

Diplomats

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish in the Official Report the letter dated 5 December 1986 from the Minister of State the hon. Member for Wallasey (Mrs. Chalker) to the hon. Member for Leicester, East regarding waivers of diplomatic immunity.

Mr. Eggar: I assume that my hon. Friend is referring to the letter of 5 February, the text of which is as follows:

"In Tim Eggar's Answer to your Parliamentary Question of 22 January he undertook to let you have further information about occasions when a foreign Government has refused to waive the immunity of diplomats alleged to have committed serious offences. I am writing in Tim's absence overseas.

Your question was confined to alleged serious offences carrying a minimum prison sentence of 3 years. In fact I understand that the various Acts covering criminal offences provide only for maximum sentences, not minimum ones. Over the past five years, therefore, taking your Question to refer to waivers requested and refused for offences which could attract a penalty of at least three years, there have been eleven such cases since the beginning of 1982. We have requested waivers in connection with alleged offences of shoplifting and theft (7 cases), indecent assault (1), grievous bodily harm (1), assault occasioning actual bodily harm (1) and criminal damage (1). Each of these carries a maximum penalty of more than three years, though of course many sentences would be for shorter periods than this. Gross indecency towards a child under 14 of either sex carries a maximum penalty of only two years; the American case which has recently received so much publicity does not therefore fall into the category covered by your Question. Nor do drunken driving offences, which carry a maximum sentence of six months (plus a fine and mandatory disqualification).

I hope this provides you with sufficient information. As you know, Tim would be happy to chat with you about our policy in this area if this would be of assistance."

Namibia

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contacts have been established by members of his Department with Christian Organisations for Social, Political and Economic Change, in particular the organisation called Church Action on Namibia; and if he will list all meetings that have taken place with members of Christian Organisations for Social, Political and Economic Change and Church Action on Namibia in relation to the Nambian independence issue.

Mrs. Chalker: We have had contacts on Namibia with various Christian organisations. A comprehensive list of meetings with such organisations is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he or officers of his Department last met members of a Namibian political party.

Mrs. Chalker: The last such meeting was when a senior official in my Department met members of a Namibian political party on 10 February in Luanda.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement concerning Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the future of Namibia.

Mrs. Chalker: We remain committed to the independence of Namibia on the basis of the peaceful implementation of UNSCR 435, which is the only internationally agreed basis for a settlement. We have consistently supported the path of negotiation towards its implementation.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he intends next to meet the Government of the United States of America to discuss the failure of the contact group to bring about Namibian independence; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: We maintain regular contact with the Government of the United States of America on Southern African questions, including Namibia.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he plans any changes in Her Majesty's Government's policy towards Namibia in the light of the report, entitled "Human Rights and Namibia", published by the International Society for Human Rights last year, a copy of which has been sent to him; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: Our policy on Namibia is well known and unchanged. We remain fully committed to the independence of the territory on the basis of the peaceful implementation of United Nations Security Council resolution 435.

South West Africa People's Organisation

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contacts have been established by British diplomatic staff with the South West Africa People's Organisation.

Mrs. Chalker: British diplomatic staff have contacts from time to time and at various levels with the South West Africa People's Organisation, which is a negotiating party to the United Nations Plan for Namibia endorsed by United Nations Security Council resolution 435.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contact British diplomatic staff resident in Angola, Zambia and South Africa have had with the South West Africa People's Organisation in the last two years; and if he will give the place and time of all such contacts.

Mrs. Chalker: British officials resident in Angola, Zambia and South Africa have had various contacts with representatives of the South West Africa People's Organisation in the last two years. A comprehensive list is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations his Department has made to the United Nations concerning the use of United Nations funds in South West Africa People's Organisation camps in Angola and Zambia.

Mrs. Chalker: In the course of discussions on the United Nations programme and budget, we regularly urge the economical and efficient deployment of resources throughout the organisation. This includes funds administered through the United Nations Council for Namibia and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects to be informed of the results of the European Commission's investigation into conditions in South West Africa People's Organisation camps.

Mrs. Chalker: Our European partners share our concern over allegations of human rights abuses in Namibian refugee camps. Together with our partners in the Twelve we are continuing to pay close attention to these allegations, as we do to all questions of human rights abuses wherever they may occur, but so far as we know there has been no investigation by the European Commission.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations his Department has made to the Governments of Angola and Zambia concerning the detention of the SWAPO One Hundred in SWAPO controlled camps in Angola and Zambia.

Mrs. Chalker: The office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees is the administering authority for refugee camps in Angola and Zambia. We have not, therefore, made representations on this subject to the Governments of Angola and Zambia.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has concerning the detention without trial of 600 to 700 persons by the South West Africa People's Organisation.

Mrs. Chalker: We have no independent source of information on allegations of detentions without trial by the South West Africa People's Organisation.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he or any of his staff have received concerning the detention by the South West Africa People's Organisation of 100 Namibian refugees; and what information he has concerning the conditions under which they are detained.

Mrs. Chalker: We have received representations about the detention of Namibian refugees by the South West Africa People's Organisation from the International Society for Human Rights, the Namibian Parents' Committee and from right hon. and hon. Members. We have no independent source of information on the conditions under which they are detained.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has about conditions in those South West Africa People's Organisation camps for which British funds have been indirectly made available.

Mrs. Chalker: We have no independent information on conditions in camps for refugees from Namibia. We have expressed our concern at alleged human rights abuses in the camps to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, who is responsible for the administration of the camps.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he or a Foreign Office Minister last met a vice-president of the South West Africa People's Organisation.

Mrs. Chalker: The then Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Edinburgh, Pentlands (Mr. Rifkind) met Mr. Hendrik Witbooi, Vice-President of the South West Africa People's Organisation, on 16 February 1984.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) whether he or any officer of his Department has raised in discussions with the South West Africa People's Organisation allegations that the South West Africa People's Organisation employs torture in camps it controls in Angola and Zambia; and if he will make a statement;

(2) whether he or any officer of his Department has raised in discussions with the South West Africa People's Organisation, allegations that the South West Africa People's Organisation is detaining between 600 and 700 Namibians in inhuman conditions in camps in Angola and Zambia; and if he will make a statement;

(3) whether he or any officer of his Department has raised with representatives of the South West Africa People's Organisation the case of Ben Boois, a Namibian refugee, reported by the International Society for Human Rights in its analysis of "Human Rights and Namibia" published in the United Kingdom (ISBN 3-89248-006-0) and also by the Namibian Parents Committee as having been murdered by SWAPO;

(4) whether he or any officer of his Department has raised with representatives of the South West Africa People's Organisation the case of Nadapdula Mpupa, a Namibian refugee, reported by the International Society for Human Rights in its analysis of "Human Rights and Namibia" published in the United Kingdom (ISBN 3-89248-006-0) as having disappeared from a SWAPO controlled camp;

(5) whether he or any officer of his Department has raised with representatives of the South West Africa People's Organisation the case of Elia Shikwambi, a Namibian refugee, reported by the International Society for Human Rights in its analysis of "Human Rights of Namibia" published in the United Kingdom (ISBN 3-89248-006-0) to be held in detention by SWAPO, without trial, in contravention of the United Nations universal declaration on human rights and the United Nations standard minimum rules for the treatment of prisoners;

(6) whether he or any officer of his Department has raised with representatives of the South West Africa People's Organisation the case of Tauno Hatuikulipi, a Namibian refugee, reported by the International Society for Human Rights in its analysis of "Human Rights and Namibia" published in the United Kingdom (ISBN 3-89248-006-0) as having been tortured and then executed by the South West Africa People's Organisation.

Mrs. Chalker: We are concerned at all violations of human rights and have expressed our concern to representatives of the South West Africa People's Organisation about the various allegations of human rights abuses in Namibian refugee camps.

PRIME MINISTER

EXPO 88 (Brisbane)

Mr. Sayeed asked the Prime Minister which Government Departments will be providing a financial contribution to the British pavilion at EXPO 88 in Brisbane.

The Prime Minister: The British pavilion at EXPO 88 is at present financed solely by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

Privatisation

Mr. Hickmet asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on the progress of the privatisation programme pursued since 1979, the effects on British industry and the British economy, and the effects thereon of wider share ownership and of employee share ownership.

The Prime Minister: The programme of privatisation continues to be highly successful. Fourteen major companies and around 600,000 employees have been transferred to the private sector since 1979. The privatisation of British Gas was the largest flotation ever in Europe or America and survey evidence suggests that this sale alone may have created 2 million first-time shareholders. The privatisation programme is a key element in our strategy for widening share ownership, as a result of which we have succeeded in roughly trebling the number of people holding shares since 1979. The Government have encouraged employee ownership in companies being privatised; nearly 90 per cent. of employees in companies sold by flotation have become shareholders and therefore have a stake in the future of their companies. By transferring these companies to the private sector we have increased their incentives to greater efficiency and competitiveness, thus benefitting their employees, their shareholders and the economy as a whole.

Cabinet Office

Mr. Adley asked the Prime Minister if there are any proposals to change the 1986-87 cash limit for the Cabinet Office.

The Prime Minister: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the cash limit for the Cabinet Office (class XX, vote 2) will be increased by £260,000 from £14,767,000 to £15,027,000 for essential new works concerned with security.

House Building Fraud (Northern Ireland)

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Prime Minister if she will set up a commission of inquiry into the house-building fraud involving exemption certificates and public sector housing estates from which terrorists have benefited, as exposed by Mr. Justice Nicholson in a recent case heard in Belfast, and in particular into the workings of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive in relation to those estates and into the scope of the fraud; what information she has as to whether there have been any similar cases in other parts of the United Kingdom and as to what sums of public money are involved.

The Prime Minister: The recent case to which my hon. Friend refers was the latest in a long line of successful prosecutions for tax exemption fraud in Northern Ireland. In the past two years, 87 persons have been convicted in respect of frauds totalling in excess of £13,250,000; other cases are pending or remain under investigation. There is no evidence of any similar cases in the rest of the United Kingdom.

I am satisfied that the Royal Ulster Constabulary, with the full support of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive and other relevant agencies, has made commendable progress in combating this potential source of finance for terrorist organisations. I therefore, see no need for a commission in enquiry on the lines proposed by my hon. Friend.

The Government will maintain their determined efforts to cut off all the sources of finance for such organisations.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Bail

Mr. McNamara asked the Attorney-General what proportion of persons awaiting trial solely or partially on the evidence of alleged accomplice witnesses have been refused bail; and what is the average period of remand for which persons detained without bail have been held to date after being charged on such evidence.

The Solicitor-General: There are no persons currently awaiting trial on charges directed by the Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland where the Crown case includes the evidence of an alleged accomplice witness.

Mr. McNamara asked the Attorney-General how many applications for bail, by those held on remand for scheduled, non-scheduled offences, and both together, were refused in 1986.

The Solicitor-General: In 1986, 825 applications for bail by those held on remand for scheduled offences were refused by the High Court and magistrates courts in Northern Ireland. The High Court also refused 284 applications in respect of persons on remand for non-scheduled offences. Information is not available in relation to unsuccessful applications in this category in the magistrates courts.

Plastic Bullets

Mr. McNamara asked the Attorney-General how many cases in 1986 involving persons injured by plastic bullets in Northern Ireland have been considered by the Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland; and what action was taken in each case.

The Solicitor-General: Figures for cases received during 1986 by the Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland involving persons injured by the alleged use of baton rounds are as follows:

	Number
Cases	14
Persons injured (including one fatal injury)	15
Prosecutions directed	1
No prosecutions directed	12

In one case a final direction pends the submission to the director of additional evidence.

Crown Prosecution Service

Dame Jill Knight asked the Attorney-General if he will take steps to improve the speed and efficiency of the Crown Prosecution Service in dealing with reimbursement of moneys paid over in cases where a prosecution is brought but when all charges have subsequently been dropped and the prosecution has been ordered to discharge the defendant's costs; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General: Efforts are continually made by the Crown Prosecution Service to speed up the carrying out of all its functions, including the payments of costs.

Mrs. Cynthia Payne

Mr. David Young asked the Attorney-General if he will give the total cost to public funds of the recently ended trial of Mrs. Cynthia Payne.

The Solicitor-General: These cannot be ascertained with any degree of accuracy. The total cost of an individual trial comprises numerous elements, some of which may be part of the general running costs of the several Government Departments concerned and therefore cannot be ascertained as separate components except as an arbitrary estimate. So far as regards individual fees to the legal profession (prosecuting or defending) it is not the practice to publish these, and in any event they could not be ascertained until after taxation of bills of costs, which has not yet taken place. Allowance must also be made for proportion of judicial salaries.

State Security

Mr. Dalyell asked the Attorney-General if he will list all the occasions since 1979 on which he has sought advice from outside Her Majesty's Government in cases involving alleged breaches of the Official Secrets Acts in relation to (a) his assessment of the extent of any damage to national security for the purposes of determining the need for and scope of police inquiries and (b) his subsequent decision as to whether to bring a prosecution; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General: Any request for advice from outside Her Majesty's Government would be confidential, but it is not the Attorney-General's practice to seek such advice, other than on questions of law or evidence, in which event he may consult counsel or the police.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Attorney-General to what extent (a) he and (b) the Director of Public Prosecutions are being kept informed about progress with the police inquiries initiated by him into alleged breaches of the Official Secrets Acts in relation to project Zircon; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General: The Director of Public Prosecutions is being kept informed about the progress of the police inquiries and is himself keeping me generally informed. The Director has not yet received any papers from the police.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Attorney-General what is his practice with regard to keeping other Ministers informed about the progress of police inquiries initiated by him into alleged breaches of the Official Secrets Acts; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General: Whether and to what extent the Attorney-General would keep other Ministers informed about the progress of police inquiries into such alleged offences would depend on the circumstances of the particular case.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Attorney-General if he sought any advice from outside Her Majesty's Government prior to initiating police inquiries into alleged breaches of the Official Secrets Acts in relation to project Zircon; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General: No.

Industrial Tribunals (Birmingham)

Mr. Terry Davis asked the Attorney-General if he will list the legal qualifications of the part-time chairmen of industrial tribunals in Birmingham.

The Solicitor-General: All part-time chairmen of industrial tribunals in the Birmingham region are barristers or solicitors of not less than seven years' standing.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Africa (Food Production)

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will direct Her Majesty's Government's African aid programme more towards increasing domestic food production in recipient countries.

Mr. Chris Patten: Yes. We aim to increase our assistance to food production and agriculture in Africa wherever we can do so effectively.

Aid Agencies (Co-ordination)

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he is satisfied with the existing co-ordination between the various British aid agencies that serve the development programme.

Mr. Chris Patten: Yes. I am satisfied with the present degree of co-ordination between the Government and such other bodies as the British Council, the Crown Agents, the Commonwealth Development Corporation, the voluntary agencies, universities and specialist institutions, but I recognise that all concerned have to work hard to achieve our common objective of promoting development.

EEC (Food Aid)

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reforms have been proposed for the European Economic Community food aid system to increase its effectiveness in the Third world.

Mr. Chris Patten: I refer the hon. Lady to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Harrow, East (Mr. Dykes) on 26 January at column 18.

Bourj el Barajneh

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will urgently dispatch aid and supplies to the Palestinian refugee camp at Bourj el Barajneh in the Lebanon; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Crawley (Mr. Soames) on 13 February. Regrettably little has changed, although a small amount of food has been allowed into the camp. We remain ready to provide help through the international agencies involved immediately it becomes possible to take more substantial supplies into the camp.

Third World

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has any plans to increase public awareness of overseas development and Third world issues by means of a public education campaign, including material to be understood by children of school age.

Mr. Chris Patten: Following a detailed review, we have decided to concentrate our activities in this field in the main through the official information programme. At the same time, I have agreed to provide a further grant of £100,000 to the Centre for World Development Education.

TRANSPORT

Road Safety

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give details of his budget for research into ways of reducing road accidents and casualties for 1985-86 and 1986-87 and the amount proposed for 1987-88.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Details of the annual budget expenditure allocated for road safety research are as follows:

	1985-86 £	1986-87 £	1987-88 £
Road user safety	2,379,000	2,416,000	2,344,000
Vehicle design, construction and safety	1,635,000	1,804,000	1,887,000
Highway engineering improvements	965,000	1,074,000	1,034,000
Research on general highway engineering of which road safety is a factor	(1,625,000)	(1,583,000)	(1,372,000)
Estimate 30 per cent. and 45 per cent. for road safety	650,000	679,000	549,000
TOTAL	5,629,000	5,973,000	5,814,000

Funding for road safety research in future years is under review.

Humber Bridge

Mr. Roy Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Transport what recent discussions he has had with the relevant local authority and other interested bodies concerning the finances of the Humber bridge; what conclusions have been reached; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Officials of the Department and the Humber bridge board have been jointly evaluating ways of putting the finances of the bridge on a sound footing. The board is due to meet shortly to consider these assessments. It will then be for the board to put proposals to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport.

M25

Mr. Lawrence asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has any plans for improving the safety of the Chertsey turn-off on the eastbound carriageway of the M25; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Consultants are currently preparing a scheme for additional fourth lanes on the M25 between junctions 11 (Chertsey) and 13 (Staines). This will include the improvement of the Chertsey junction.

Lorry Parks

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many designated lorry parks there are in England and Wales; if he is considering proposals to add to this number; and what range of charges are made for vehicles using lorry parks.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We do not keep records of lorry parks. Their provision is essentially a matter for local authorities and the private sector. Provision for parking heavy goods vehicles is a standard feature required at motorway service areas.

Heavy Goods Vehicles

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with those who franchise motorway service facilities with a view to improving facilities for those driving heavy goods vehicles.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: In August last year, we wrote to operators asking for certain improvements in standards when new motorway service areas (MSAs) were being developed and existing ones improved. In the case of new MSAs, we now require provision of showers and shaver points, and ask tenderers to consider provision of separate eating facilities for drivers of heavy goods vehicles. Operators have scope within the terms of their leases for improving existing facilities for drivers. We have agreed that overnight accommodation can be built on sites where there is sufficient room for expansion to cope with the increased traffic.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what consultation he has had with interested parties about the provision of trunk road facilities for those driving heavy goods vehicles; if he is satisfied with present provisions for re-fuelling, parking, rest and refreshment; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what representations he has received about trunk road facilities for those driving heavy goods vehicles; and what suggestions have been made for the improvement of such facilities.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Representations have been received in a report by the Association of County Councils published in December last year ("The Travel Needs of Road Users: The way to get things going"). This suggests, amongst other things, that there should be transit stopping facilities for heavy goods vehicles at intervals of roughly 30 minutes driving time.

The provision of services for trunk road users is primarily a matter for private initiative within the framework of planning policies. We will consider in the light of the report whether there is a need for further action by the Department or local authorities to secure provision of facilities.

There have been no recent formal consultations. I have discussed the issues with Jack Ashwell of the Transport and General Workers Union.

A34 (Newbury)

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to have 1987 cost estimates for improving the A34 at Newbury as an alternative to a Weston by-pass; and if he will give the most recent cost estimate for underpassing the Robin Hood roundabout where the A4 meets the A34 in such a way as to separate north-south traffic from east-west traffic.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Estimates of the cost of a number of objectors' alternative proposals for improving the A34 at Newbury are being prepared for the likely public inquiry. They will be ready in the next few months.

No estimate for an underpass at the Robin Hood roundabout only is available. Such a proposal would involve substantial property demolition and provide only a partial solution to the problem.

Greater London

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list all regional and sub-regional outposts of his Department responsible for functions or services within the Greater London area, stating functions and responsibilities of such outposts and giving the total cost of such offices to public funds in 1986-87 and the total number of officials involved.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: This answer can only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list all functions and responsibilities currently undertaken by any division and organisation within his Department which is concerned with local authority services solely within the Greater London area, stating the total estimated cost to public funds in 1986-87 and the total number of officials involved.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: This answer can only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Transport if will list the total number of written communications between his Department and local authorities in the Greater London area in (a) 1979-80 and (b) 1986-87, to date.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: No such record is kept.

Local Government Reform

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Transport if will list the additional functions and responsibilities undertaken by his Department of a temporary or permanent kind as a result of the abolition of the Greater London council, stating the total estimated cost to public funds in 1986-87 and the total number of officials involved.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: These are set out in the Local Government Act 1985 and the associated statutory instruments. They were extensively discussed during the passage of the legislation. The total estimated cost to public funds and the total number of officials involved are not separately identifiable.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the action he has taken since the abolition of the Greater London council to ensure that the functions and responsibilities of his Department and its related non-departmental public bodies dealing with the Greater London area are co-ordinated with each other.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Appropriate arrangements for co-ordination between this Department, the British Railways Board, London Regional Transport and the London Regional Passengers Committee existed before abolition of the GLC.

ENVIRONMENT

Nuclear Waste

Sir Trevor Skeet asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has complied with the recommendation of Sir Frank Layfield in his summary of conclusions chapter 2, paragraph 3, that at least two members of the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee should be advisors specifically to provide an independent expert environmental contribution to the handling of radioactive waste management.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Energy is currently considering Sir Frank Layfield's report on the CEGB application to build Sizewell B. The Secretary of State has a quasi-judicial role in the planning process and it would therefore be improper of me to comment on any part of the report. However, the House of Commons will have the opportunity to express its views before a decision is taken and a debate is being arranged in the week beginning 23 February.

Sir Trevor Skeet asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects the dumping of nuclear waste at sea to be resumed by the United Kingdom.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer my hon. Friend to the Government's response to the Environment Committee's report on Radioactive Waste (Cmnd. 9852) in which it is stated that the Government, in common with many other countries, consider that the disposal of radioactive waste at sea is a safe disposal option, which should remain available. They will, however, continue to decide on any application for the disposal of such waste in the light of all the relevant factors.

Sir Trevor Skeet asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what form of licence has been granted by his Department to Pharmacia Ltd. of Milton Keynes to deposit low level waste in a land fill site near Stewartby, Bedfordshire; and if he will publish the source of the materials involved and the identification of the isotopes.

Mr. Waldegrave: Pharmacia (GB) Ltd. was issued on 11 April 1983 with a certificate of authorisation to dispose of low level radioactive waste by removal as refuse by a waste collection authority or by depositing it at a dump used for the deposit of substantial quantities of waste that are not readioactive waste. The terms of the authorisation do not specify a particualr location. The company is registered as a user of iodine-125 and cobalt-57 for sale and research.

Urban Trees

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to survey the state of health of urban trees in Britain.

Mr. Waldegrave: Research is sponsored by the Department into the many factors which give rise to damage for single trees in a range of adverse evironmental conditions. No specific survey of urban trees is currently planned.

Litter

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what achievements he can list from the UK 2000 initiative; how many litter wardens have been appointed; if he is considering introducing on the spot fines for litter offenders; and if he has any proposals for encouraging people to return empty bottles to suppliers.

Mr. Waldegrave: A report on the achievements of UK 2000 is given in my answer to the hon. Member for Cynon Valley (Mr. Clwyd) on Wednesday 4 February at column 721.

Information on the number of litter wardens is not held centrally. The Government see considerable difficulty in the content of on-the-spot fines for litter offenders.

The Government support the recommendation of the Waste Management Advisory Council that the industry take steps to encourage recycling of bottles. Such steps include the introduction of readily identifiable return-ability symbols and a clearer indication of deposit rates.

Houses (Radon Levels)

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his statement on 27 January, Official Report, column 189, concerning radon levels in houses, for what period he expects the two stated recommended action levels to remain in force before review; whether he expects a review of these action levels to be initiated on publication of reviews during 1987 by (a) the International Commission on Radiological Protection, (b) the Committee on the Biological Effects of Ionising Radiation and (c) any other body; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: As I indicated on 27 January, the Government have followed the formal advice of the National Radiological Protection Board and the Committee on the Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment in setting the levels of radon in dwellings above which precautionary action is advisable. These levels will be kept under review in the light of any further evidence that emerges about the effects of radon on health.

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his statement on 27 January, Official Report, column 189, concerning radon levels in houses, what discussions have taken place on the feasibility of a study of the health effects of such exposure to radon; how soon he expects a decision to be reached on whether to undertake such a study and about its duration.

Mr. Waldegrave: The recommendations for action on radon in dwellings are based in part on epidemiological studies of the health effects of exposure on uranium miners. Both the National Radiological Protection Board and the Committee on the Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment consider that there is a need for a further study of the health effects on persons exposed to radon gas in the home. The feasibility of such a study and the way in which it might be set up are currently being investigated.

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to arrange for further sampling of radon levels in dwellings other than in Devon and Cornwall, and other than at the request of members of the public; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: As I indicated on 27 January, it is intended that the systematic survey of radon levels in houses should be restricted to Devon and Cornwall for the time being as most of the houses with the highest levels are likely to be located there. However, the need for systematic surveys in other parts of the country will be kept under review in the light of the results obtained from the free measurement service to be provided by the NRPB.

Mr. Warren asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what measure the Government will take to ascertain whether existing homes are experiencing radon gas concentrations greater than the action level of 400 becquerels per cubic metre; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer my hon. Friend to my statement of 27 January.

Mr. Warren asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what arrangements he will introduce to enable the financing and inspection of home improvements needed to protect people whose homes are experiencing Radon gas levels greater than 400 becquerels per cubic metre.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer my hon. Friend to my statement of 27 January. No decisions can be made about the implementation of remedial measures until the work in hand on establishing the extent of the problem and the most effective ways of dealing with it has been completed.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for the Environment pursuant to his statement on 27 January,

Official Report, columns 189-90, concerning radon levels in houses, what number of houses in Somerset is to be included in the further survey announced; whether any parts of Somerset are areas where a measurement service will be provided at no cost to those concerned; what arrangements have been made for distribution in Somerset of his Department's leaflet; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave [pursuant to his reply, 9 February 1987, c. 115]: As I indicated on 27 January, it is intended that the systematic survey of radon levels in houses should be restricted to Devon and Cornwall for the time being. However, free measurements will be provided on request, through the National Radiological Protection Board, to people who live in areas of Somerset and other parts of the country where radon concentrations might be at or above the action level; and supplies of the Department's leaflet have been sent to Somerset County Council for distribution to the public.

Water Pollution

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the total number of water pollution incidents in respect of each of the 10 water authority regions in England and Wales for each of the last five years; and for each of the respective totals what is the number of incidents within the following categories according to the cause of the pollution incident (a) agriculture, (b) industry, (c) fish farms, (d) sewage and (e) other.

Mr. Waldegrave: The total number of reported water pollution incidents in each of the 10 water authority areas in England and Wales since 1981-82 are as follows:

	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86
Thames	1,810	2,120	2,345	2,486	2,695
Southern	1,300	1,327	1,400	1,574	1,668
North West	1,350	1,288	1,385	2,241	2,202
Severn Trent	2,401	2,681	3,354	4,372	4,500
Wessex	844	790	966	1,125	993
South West	1,055	1,140	1,600	1,685	1,718
Anglian	1,095	1,077	1,288	1,557	1,707
Northumbrian	509	544	613	654	722
Yorkshire	1,136	1,020	1,165	1,536	2,006
Welsh	n/a	n/a	n/a	1,418	1,681

n/a = not available.

No breakdown of these figures is held centrally but details are available from the water authorities and, in some cases, are contained in the authorities' annual reports.

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for the Environment at what levels it is possible to detect the toxicity of Decapol in (a) drinking water and (b) untreated water.

Mr. Waldegrave: The toxic constituents in the Decapol range of products are acrylamides. The most toxic of these can be detected at 0·2 mg per litre in both drinking water and untreated water.

Radiation

Mr. Knowles asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to receive the report of research commissioned by his Department on radioactive waste management and radioactivity in the environment.

Mr. Waldegrave: I received the 1984-86 report today. Copies have been placed in the Library of the House.

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for the Environment; further to his reply to the hon. Member for South Shields on 2 February, Official Report, column 494, concerning Her Majesty's radiochemical inspectorate, if he will estimate (a) the number of man-years' effort required to undertake the three-year programme of reviewing authorisations of radioactive discharges and (b) the number of man-years' effort required to complete such a review for a typical nuclear site; whether the staffing compliment of the inspectorate was increased by reason of that review programme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: There is no typical nuclear site. The time required at each site will vary but will probably be no more than 150 and no less than 30 man days per review. Preliminary estimates suggest that provision for about 12 man years effort should be provided over the three-year period. The staffing complement of the inspectorate is kept under regular review and the effort required to review the authorisations has been taken into account. The last staffing review was held in October 1986 and authority to recruit additional inspectors has been given.

Smallholdings

Mr. Colvin asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will carry out a review of the Town and Country Planning General Development Order 1977 class VI—Agriculture, with a view to limiting its scope for the development of smallholdings of industrial, commercial and residential use.

Mr. Waldegrave: Class VI of the General Development Order applies only to development for agricultural purposes. Change from agricultural use to industrial, commercial or residential use requires specific planning permission.

Heveningham Hall

Mr. Faulds asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he is now in a position to state whether he will intervene in the neglect of the commitments undertaken by the owner of Heveningham hall, Mr. A. Al-Ghazzi.

Mr. Waldegrave: Not yet. It will depend on the advice I receive from the chairman of the Historic Building and Monuments Commission for England, who I know is looking into the matter very carefully.

Radiochemical Inspectorate

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, further to his reply to the hon. Member for South Shields on 2 February, Official Report, column 494, concerning Her Majesty's radiochemical inspectorate, what is the total number of such inspectors presently in post; what is the authorised complement; when was the staffing level of the inspectorate last reviewed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: The total number of Her Majesty's radiochemical inspectors in post is 22. The authorised complement is 32 but this complement is currently under review and an additional five inspectors have been approved for 1987-88.

AIDS

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the 10 local authorities whose social services departments have experienced most demand from AIDS victims; and if he will state which of them were rate-capped in each year since rate capping began; and if he will give the total rate support grant to each of the local authorities in each year since 1982.

Mr. Chope: The collection of data on the incidence of AIDS is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Services. I understand, however, that the relevant information is compiled by regional health authority, rather than local authority, areas.

Rates

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list in the Official Report (a) the rate support grant spending assumption per head of population for 1987-88 for Adur, Hove and Worthing district councils and (b) the proposed grant to be received in 1987-88 per head of population in Adur, Hove and Worthing district councils; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: I shall answer this question shortly.

Local Authority Flats

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to the number of flats currently owned by local authorities; how many are currently unoccupied; how many such flats he expects to be sold to tenants as a result of his Department's current campaign; what percentage take-up this represents and over what time scale; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: Local authorities in England are estimated to own 1·7 million flats. 113,000 local authority dwellings were unoccupied in April 1986; separate figures are not available for flats.

Thirty five thousand local authority flats were sold in England between April 1979 and September 1986, representing 2 per cent. of the stock of flats. It is difficult to predict the rate of sale in future, but it is hoped that it will increase to over 10,000 a year.

Agricultural Land

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what planning restrictions on the use or development of agricultural dwelling houses would be removed by the policy contained in his draft circular "Development Involving Agricultural Land"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: Policy on the development and use of agricultural dwelling houses in England and Wales is set out in the annex to DOE circular 24/73 (Welsh Office 49/73). Paragraph 4 states that, unless the applicant shows that there are valid reasons why a dwelling house should be erected on the farm rather than in a nearby village, the normal planning considerations will apply and the need for agricultural dwellings should be met as far as possible by building in an accessible village, hamlet or existing group of dwellings. It may sometimes be appropriate to impose conditions when planning permission is granted for such dwellings restricting occupancy to persons employed in agriculture in the locality. Such conditions, as in the case of all planning conditions, should only be imposed where they are necessary, relevant to planning and to the development to be permitted, enforceable, precise and reasonable in all other respects.

The draft circular on development involving agricultural land does not propose any change in this policy although it urges that applications for removal of such agricultural conditions should be considered on the bases of realistic assessments of the continuing need for them.

Homesteading

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to encourage the continuing role of homesteading as one of the ways to bring back into use local authority properties in disrepair.

Mr. John Patten: I am continuing to encourage local authorities to look at a wide range of options for meeting people's housing needs and wishes, and I shall be reminding them of the value of homesteading in this context at the next suitable opportunity.

Homesteading is a very useful way of bringing empty council flats and houses back into use. It also gives people a chance to become home owners at a relatively low cost. It does not suit all properties, and not all first-time buyers are willing and able to take on the often considerable work needed, but it can be very helpful indeed in areas where first-time buyers have the necessary skills to undertake renovation work but find it very difficult to afford the prices of houses on the ordinary market. In such cases, some local authorities will use homesteading, using their powers to offer mortgages and home imporvement grants where necessary. They can also, with the Secretary of State's consent, waive mortgage interest payments for up to five years.

GLC Heritage Collection

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will issue a direction to the London residuary body to prevent the disposal at public auction of the catalogued items in the Greater London Council's heritage collection; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: No. I understand that the LRB does not intend to auction those items that have historical and traditional association.

County Hall, London

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will direct the London residuary body not to accept any proposal for the use of county hall which involves demolition of the building; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: No. Any proposals for the demolition of county hall would require listed building consent and the ususal procedures for obtaining that consent would apply.

Insulation

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will now introduce a home insulation scheme to allow claimants on supplementary benefit and housing benefit 90 per cent. grants to cover costs of draught proofing as well as loft insulation.

Mr. John Patten: I refer the hon. Member to the answer which I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham, Edgbaston (Dame J. Knight) on Wednesday 28 January at col. 244.

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on his policy on the homes insulation scheme, in the light of the proposals made to him by Neighbourhood Energy Action.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to his reply, 13 February 1987]: Neighbourhood Energy Action (NEA) have proposed that the changes to the homes insulation scheme should be extended to cover draught-proofing payments currently made by the DHSS. The future arrangements for help with the cost of materials for draught-proofing are under consideration between the relevant Government Departments concerned and the proposals made by NEA will be taken into account.

Local Government Reform

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give a breakdown of the other public bodies to which staff from the Greater London council and metropolitan city councils transferred following abolition.

Mr. Chope: Staff were transferred statutorily at abolition from the Greater London council and metropolitan county councils to the bodies specified in the following orders made under the Local Government Act 1985:

(i) The Local Government Reorganisation (Designation of Staff) Order 1986—1986/192
(ii) The Mersey Tunnels Order 1986—1986/297
(iii) The Tyne Tunnel Order 1986—1986/298
(iv) The Local Government Reorganisation (Airports) Order 1986—1986/425
(v) The London Government Reorganisation (Designation of Staff) Order 1986—1986/426
(vi) The Local Government Reorganisation (Designation of Metropolitan County Council Staff) Order 1986—1986/523
(vii) The Local Government Reorganisation (Designation of Staff) (No. 2) Order 1986—1986/582

No record is kept centrally of the recruitment by successor or other public bodies of former GLC or metropolitan county councils' employees.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give a breakdown by residuary body of the total paid to date in detriment to staff transferred from the seven abolished authorities to successor bodies.

Mr. Chope: The information is as follows:

Residuary Body	Compensation for Detriment paid up to 31 December 1986 £
London	695,000
Greater Manchester	5,631
Merseyside	96,400
South Yorkshire	645,389
Tyne and Wear	204,000
West Midlands	572,618
West Yorkshire	161,866
Total	2,380,904

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many additional staff were employed by central Government Departments following abolition of the Greater London council and the metropolitan county councils.

Mr. Chope: Much of the Department's work on matters arising from the abolition of the Greater London council and the metropolitan county councils is handled by staff within the appropriate policy areas or regional offices, and is not separately identifiable except at disproportionate cost. The number of staff currently employed centrally in the Department entirely on such matters is 17. The number of staff so employed in other Government Departments is a matter for the respective Secretaries of State.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, if he will provide details of (a) the total number of staff declared redundant and (b) the total cost of redundancy pay for each of the authorities abolished by the Local Government Act 1985.

Mr. Chope: No record is held centrally of any staff having been declared redundant by the Greater London council or the metropolitan county councils in connection with the Local Government Act 1985. However, under that Act, all employees of those authorities who were in post on 31 March 1986 and who were not designated for transfer by order were treated as if they had been declared redundant by their employer immediately before the abolition date. Of those, 6,284 were entitled to redundancy payments or compensation. The details are as follows:

Abolition Council	Number of former employees entitled to redundancy payments or compensation	[1]Total costs to December 1986 £
Greater London	3,188	21,851,333
Greater Manchester	637	6,739,798
Merseyside	370	3,520,174
South Yorkshire	480	3,421,137
Tyne and Wear	149	989,700
West Midlands	524	3,598,535
West Yorkshire	936	7,440,774

[1] These figures include the costs of any redundancies among residuary bodies' employees since 1 April 1986.

Dog Licences

Mrs. Shields asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list the revenue collected from issuing dog licences, and the total cost of collection and administration, for each year since 1978; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what steps his Department is taking to ensure that post offices acting as agents for local authorities issue dog licences when requested to by the general public; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will list in tabular form (a) the number of dog licences issued, (b) the estimated number of dogs in Britain and (c) the number of prosecutions for non-possession of a dog licence for each year since 1978; and if he will make a statement;

(4) what procedures his Department adopts in order to ensure efficient administration and issuing of dog licences by local authorities and post offices acting as their agents.

Mr. Waldegrave: I shall write to the hon. Lady.

Capacitors (Health Hazards)

Mr. Michael Morris asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will take steps to advise users of capacitors containing polychlorinated biphenol to replace them in view of their toxicity and non-biodegradability.

Mr. Waldegrave [pursuant to his reply, 12 February 1987, c. 314]: The Control of Pollution Act (Supply and Use of Injurious Substances) Regulations 1986, Statutory Instrument 1986 No. 902, banned the sale and new use of polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) throughout the United Kingdom.

It is not planned to advise existing users of capacitors containing PCBs to replace them before the end of the service life of such equipment since PCBs pose no threat to human health or the environment whilst in use in secure equipment.

Mr. Michael Morris asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what advice he gives on the safe disposal of capacitors containing polychlorinated biphenol.

Mr. Waldegrave [pursuant to his reply, 12 February 1987, c. 314]: The main source of advice the Department gives on the disposal of wastes containing polychlorinated biphenyls is waste management paper No. 6 which includes advice on the safe disposal of capacitors.

Conservation Areas

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a map of England identifying Country Heritage sites and areas of special importance for nature conservation which will be protected from industrial development and road planning.

Mr. Waldegrave [pursuant to his answer, 10 February 1987, c. 157]: The production of such a map is impracticable. However, details of all formally designated sites are notified to planning authorities so that their status can be properly considered when planning applications are made.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Surplus Food (Disposal)

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the latest annual cost to the United Kingdom of the recent European Economic Community Agriculture Council decision that the financing of disposal of certain surplus Common Agricultural Policy stocks should be borne by national budgets for a period until repayments can be made from the European Economic Community budget; when this procedure was approved by European Economic Community finance ministers; what provision exists in the Public Expenditure White Paper for these costs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: In the context of the package of economy measures agreed by the Agriculture Council in December, the Commission indicated that it would subsequently bring forward a proposal to defer reimbursement to member states in respect of losses on the disposal of 1 million tonnes of butter from intervention stocks in 1987 and 1988. Reimbursements are to be made in four equal instalments starting in 1989, by which time the Commission expect that their cost will be more than offset by savings to the Community budget from the reductions in milk production agreed in December. In the meantime, the member states' financing costs will be reimbursed.

The Commission estimates that deferring reimbursement in this way will reduce EC budget expenditure in 1987 and 1988 by about 2,185 million ecu. The cost to the United Kingdom in postponed receipts from the Community budget is estimated to be broadly neutral, the delay in reimbursement being balanced by a saving in our contributions to the Community budget.

The Council of Agricultural Ministers on 9-10 February approved the necessary regulation, subject to the views of the European Parliament. The subject was also discussed at the Council of Economic and Finance Ministers on 9 February.

Tobacco Duty

Mr. McCartney asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of their income the richest 10 per cent. of households pay on tobacco duty; and what percentage of the income of the lowest 10 per cent. income group is expended on tobacco duty.

Mr. Brooke: The information can be obtained from the tables on pages 107 and 108 of "Economic Trends", No. 397, November 1986, published by the Central Statistical Office, a copy of which is in the Library.

Payroll Giving

Mr. Yeo asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps have been taken to enable civil service employees to donate money to charity under the payroll giving scheme when the scheme comes into effect on 1 April.

Mr. Brooke: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Balance of Payments

Mr. Douglas asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give details for the year ended December 1986 of the United Kingdom balance of payments position (a) overall and (b) with the European Economic Community, and the balance of trade in manufactured goods for the same period (i) overall and (ii) with the European Economic Community.

Mr. MacGregor: The preliminary estimates for the United Kingdom balance of payments in the fourth quarter and year 1986 will be published on 5 March. The first available estimate for the current account in 1986, which included a projected figure for the balance of invisible transactions in the fourth quarter, showed a deficit on £187 million. Estimates of the 1986 United Kingdom balance of payments with the European Community will not be available until this summer.

On trade in manufactured goods, the United Kingdom recorded a deficit of £5,852 million with the rest of the world in 1986 and a deficit of £10,072 million with countries in the European Community.

VAT

Sir Fergus Montgomery asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consultations took place with the mail order industry before the consultation paper, "VAT: Small Business Review" was published.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 9 February 1987; c. 37]: None, but officials of Her Majesty's Customs and Excise have met representatives of the industry to discuss their response to the consultation paper.

Sir Fergus Montgomery asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what compliance cost assessment of the costs and benefits to the mail order industry of the changes proposed in the consultation paper, "VAT: Small Business Review" was carried out by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise in accordance with the provision of paragraph 3.12 of "Building Businesses . . . Not Barriers" (Cmnd. 9794) and if he will publish the findings.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 9 February 1987, c. 37]: The compliance costs of those few proposals which may result in additional costs for certain classes of businesses are being taken into account together with the revenue and other possible benefits, in the consideration which the Government is giving to the responses to the consultation document proposals. No formal assessment will be completed until the Government have announced their decisions.

Sir Fergus Montgomery asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the benefits to the United Kingdom economy as a whole of implementing the changes outlined in the consultation paper, "VAT: Small Business Review" in respect of the mail order industry.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 9 February 1987, c. 37]: This is receiving further examination in the light of the responses to the consultation paper proposals.

Sir Fergus Montgomery asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment has been made by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise of the cost to retail traders providing self-financed credit facilities of compliance with the proposed new requirements in the consultation paper, "VAT: Small Business Review".

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 9 February 1987, c. 37]: Representations received from retail traders providing self-financed credit facilities suggest that, if the proposal to abolish the standard method of reckoning gross takings for users of the VAT special retail schemes were to be implemented, revenue could be in excess of £25 million a year.

Sir Fergus Montgomery asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment has been made by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise of the cost to retail business of compliance with the proposed new requirements in the consultation paper, "VAT: Small Business Review".

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 9 February 1987, c. 37]: The consultation paper proposals are mostly beneficial to small retail businesses. I regret that there is no reliable basis for forecasting accurately the value of these benefits.

Sir Fergus Montgomery asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many representations were received from (a) business organisations and (b) individuals, regarding the present value added tax regulations for mail order firms in each of the years 1979, 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984, 1985 and 1986.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 9 February 1987, c. 37]: There are no VAT regulations relating specifically to mail order firms. The only recent representations have been those at the end of 1986 in the contest of the consultation document "VAT: Small Business Review" and special schemes for retailers.

Premium Bonds

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his reply of 6 February, if he will give sub-totals for the unclaimed prize money from premium bond draws by year; and what is his policy in respect of unclaimed prize money.

Mr. Ian Stewart [pursuant to his reply, 11 February 1987, c. 235]: The unclaimed prize money from premium bond prize draws is as follows:

	Value £
1957	—
1958	50
1959	100
1960	325
1961	425
1962	875

Unclaimed prizes remain available to winners without time limit.

Share Dealings

Mr. Beith asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the implications for the Government's policy on the spread of shareholdings of the incidence of dealings in shares of newly privatised companies on the Stock Exchange before letters of allotment have been sent out; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to the reply, 13 February 1987]: Arrangements for initial dealings in the shares of newly privatised companies are looked at in the circumstances of each case. The practical issues which need to be taken into account include the time needed to process large numbers of applications and the importance of allowing dealings on the stock exchange to begin as soon as possible.

EMPLOYMENT

European Social Fund

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General how much has been allocated since 1981 by the European social fund to each of the Manpower Services Commission's special training measures; and what sums have been applied for in 1987, for each individual programme.

Mr. Lee: The following table shows the amounts allocated from the European social fund to the main groups of Manpower Services Commission training programmes since 1981.

European Social Fund Allocation

1981
Youth Opportunities Programme	59,408,000

Radiation

Dr. David Clark asked the Paymaster General, further to his reply to the hon. Member for South Shields on 3 February, Official Report, column 616, concerning the Health and Safety Executive assessment level of 0·17mSv radiation exposure in a year; when this assessment was introduced; what assessment level is recommended by the International Commission on Radiological Protection; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The assessment level of the dose for any person outside the site boundary was first published by the Health and Safety Executive in April 1979 in "Safety Assessment Principles for Nuclear Power Reactors". The International Commission on Radiological Protection does not make recommendations on assessment levels; it recommends dose limits which are then used by Her Majesty's nuclear installations inspectorate of the HSE in devising the assessment level.

YTS Students

Mr. Lawrence asked the Paymaster General what proportion of YTS students obtain permanent jobs within three months of completing their course in each region of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Trippier: The Manpower Services Commission conducts regular surveys of young people leaving YTS. Results from these surveys (including data for regions) are placed in the Library of the House each month. I refer the hon. Member to these documents.

Community Programme

Mr. Fatchett asked the Paymaster General what has been the impact on targeted community programme schemes in the eight task force areas of the embargo on recruitment of under-25-year-olds to community programme places in connection with the job training scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I will reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Dr. Godman asked the Paymaster General if he will list in the Official Report the number of (a) prosecutions and (b) convictions in England and Wales since 1981 for offences relating to the fraudulent misuse or misappropriation of moneys advanced by the Manpower Services Commission in connection with the community programme.

Mr. Lee: Central records are only held for cases dating back to 1984. Since then there have been 13 prosecutions, resulting in nine convictions; the other four have still to be determined. The Manpower Services Commission vigorously investigate any allegations of misuse of public funds on the community programme, referring serious cases to the police and seeking recovery of the moneys involved.

YTS

Mr. McCrindle asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on the contribution by the financial services industries to the YTS; if he will state the numbers joining the scheme from banks, building societies, insurance companies, insurance brokers, accountants and estate agents, respectively; and how many such young people have subsequently found employment.

Mr. Trippier: (a) Contribution by the financial services industries to YTS.

The financial services industry are making an important contribution to the YTS.

The major banks, building societies and insurance industry run substantial YTS clerical training schemes, designed to deliver transferable office skills. Additionally many insurance brokers, insurance offices and estate agents act as work placement providers for local managing agents.

(b) Entrants to the YTS.

Statistics are not kept nationally by standard industrial classification on two year YTS. However, the latest figures for one-year YTS starters by SIC show the following numbers of entrants at March 1986.

	Number
Banking and finance	3,089
Insurance companies	920
Insurance brokers Accounts Estate agents Business services	27,167

(c) YTS trainees subsequently finding employment

Information on the proportion of ex-trainees who have obtained employment is not available in the form requested. However the Manpower Services Commission's regular follow-up survey provides the following results about those young people who left schemes in the financial service sector between April 1985 and March 1986.

Percentage in work (including part-time) 3 months after leaving

Sector	Per cent.
Banking and finance	84
Insurance	79
Business services	61
Owning and dealing with real estate	63

Earnings

Mr. Robert C. Brown asked the Paymaster General whether any statistics in the 1986 new earnings survey have not been published.

Mr. Lee: The published tables in the 1986 new earnings survey are the same as in previous years apart from results relating to the special questions on size of organisation. However, within the tables there may be small variations in the categories for which information is published which will depend on the reliability of the results including simple size and standard error of the estimate.

Mr. Robert C. Brown asked the Paymaster General what objections have been received from companies or employers' organisations to publication of figures in the new earnings survey.

Mr. Lee: No objections have been received from companies or employers' organisations to publication of figures in the new earnings survey other than on grounds of reliability of the data.

Mr. Robert C. Brown asked the Paymaster General what steps he is taking to ensure that the 1987 new earnings survey discloses figures for all industries including gas supply.

Mr. Lee: Consultations are taking place between employers and my officials where necessary to ensure that the 1987 new earnings survey returns provide reliable results.

Gas Workers

Mr. Robert C. Brown asked the Paymaster General why the new earnings survey does not include any figures relating to manual workers in the gas industry, SIC 1620 public gas supply, gas workers NJIC agreement and gas fitters occupation.

Mr. Lee: Results for the following groups—manual workers in the gas industry SIC 1620 public gas supply, Gas Workers NJIC agreement and gas fitters occupation—are normally included in the new earnings survey published report. My Department took the decision to exclude figures from the 1986 report following advice from British Gas that the survey data were unreliable.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Marshall asked the Paymaster General how many data processing staff are in post within his Department; and how many of them are trainees.

Mr. Lee: At 12 February 1987, the Department of Employment group employed total of 406 professional data processing staff at the levels executive officer to grade 5. Eighteen were trainees.

These figures exclude all staff at levels from clerical assistant to grade 7 employed on non DP work as well as staff at data processor and senior data processor levels.

Mr. Michael Marshall asked the Paymaster General what was the average number of days training per year given to professional information technology staff within his Department who are no longer trainees in the most recent years for which figures are available.

Mr. Lee: The average figure for 1985 was nine days and for 1986 was 10 days for those parts of the Department for which figures are readily available.

Job Training Scheme

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Paymaster General what are the implications for equal opportunities of the eligibility rules for the new job training scheme.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I will reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Paymaster General, pursuant to his reply of 10 February, if unemployed women who have been signing on as unemployed at an unemployment benefit office for six months or more, but who are ineligible for benefit, or who are only in indirect receipt of benefit via an unemployed spouse, will be eligible for a training allowance under the job training scheme.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The allowances paid to participants in the new job training scheme are at a rate equivalent to the amount of benefit in payment immediately before joining the scheme. Men and women not receiving benefit immediately before training will not, therefore, be eligible for a training allowance. They will become entitled to an allowance if a later change of circumstances would have entitled them to benefit had they remained unemployed. Benefits received by the spouse of a trainee who is not getting an allowance will not be affected.

Liverpool Heritage Developments Ltd.

Mr. Fields asked the Paymaster General what is the value of past and current contracts between (a) the Manpower Services Commission and (b) the Merseyside Task Force and Liverpool Heritage Developments Limited formerly Dunebourne Limited.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 9 February 1987, c. 53-54]: I understand that there are no current contracts between the Manpower Services Commission and Liverpool Heritage Developments Limited, formerly Dunebourne Limited, and nor have there been any in the past.

I believe the hon. Member may be referring to the Manpower Services Commission's community programme contract with Merseyside Improvements Agency. I understand that the agency has arrangements with a number of sponsors, one of which involves restoration work on the Liverpool Royal Institute by Liverpool Heritage Developments Limited. The cost of the project is about £335,500.

I also understand that there are no current contracts between Merseyside Task Force and Liverpool Heritage Developments Limited.

In February 1986, Merseyside Task Force provided £200 to Liverpool Heritage Developments Limited for work involved in a presentation on the enterprise allowance scheme, in association with other local bodies.

Nuclear Installations Inspectorate

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Paymaster General if he will publish a list showing the number of any notifiable incidents reported to Her Majesty's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate in each year since 1970 where such incidents involved a flask designed to transport nuclear fuel; whether reporting criteria for such incidents have been changed in the period; whether reporting criteria differ between incidents occurring inside and outside nuclear sites; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: I have been asked to reply.

Since 1970 the number of notifiable incidents relating to fuel flasks on nuclear sites has been:

	Number
1970 to 1973	none
1974	none
1975	none
1976	2
1977	5
1978	2
1979	4
1980	6
1981 to 1983	none
1984	1
1985 to 1986	none

Up to 1976, incidents were reported to comply with site licence conditions and the Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1963. In 1976, under arrangements announced by the Secretary of State for energy on 2 February at column 210, the reporting criteria were extended to include incidents of lesser significance. Modifications to those criteria were announced by the Under-Secretary of State for Energy on 26 July 1982 at column 374.

Those arrangements relate to incidents on nuclear sites. Transport-related incidents off site are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Deportation

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were deported in each of the last three years; to which countries they went; and how many went to countries other than those from which they originally came.

Mr. Waddington: The only information available relates to the nationality of the person deported which will usually be the country of both origin and destination. Figures for 1984 and 1985 are given in the table; corresponding information for 1986 will be available in March.

Shops Act 1950

Mr. Michael Morris asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many local authorities have made section 51 orders under the Shops Act 1950.

Mr. Waddington: This information is not held centrally.

High Street, Kensington (Bomb Explosion)

Mr. George Robertson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what evidence he has received as to any connections between Iranian diplomats in London and the bomb explosion in High street, Kensington, in August 1986;

(2) if he will call for a report from the chief constable of the Metropolis with regard to the police investigations into the bomb explosion in High street, Kensington, which killed Bijan Fazeli in August 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: Police investigations into this incident are continuing. No one has claimed responsibility and I cannot speculate as to who may have caused the explosion.

Terrorism

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons detained under the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Acts in each of the police areas of Metropolitan London, Dumfries and Galloway and Merseyside were charged with offences under the Acts or under other Acts, separately, in 1986.

Mr. Hurd: The available information is shown in the table. Information on detentions in the three police force areas specified is published quarterly in Home Office statistical bulletins, copies of which are in the Library (table 3 of issue 2/87 gives figures up to the end of 1986).

Persons detained in 1986 under the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1984 and subsequent charges

Police force area	Detained	Charged under Prevention of Terrorism Acts	Charged under other legislation[1]
Metropolitan police district	84	[redacted]	9
Merseyside	11	2	—
Dumfries and Galloway	50	8	—
Other areas	57	3	14
Total	202	13	23

[1] Persons also charged with offences under the Prevention of Terrorism Acts are included in the previous column.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was the average number of days spent on remand by those remanded in custody for terrorist-type offences in 1986 with regard to cases now completed in England and Wales and the number of bail applications refused, respectively;

(2) how many persons were remanded in custody before trial for offences connected with terrorism in 1986.

Mr. Mellor: The only information which is readily available relates to prisoners who are now in prison custody in category A and does not cover prisoners who have been released or downgraded.

Five such prisoners were first received in custody in 1986. The case of one of them has now been completed. He spent a total of 186 days on remand; our records show that he did not make any applications for bail.

Northern Ireland

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the number of deaths which have occurred in Great Britain in 1986 connected with the present civil unrest in Northern Ireland; and what information he has as to how many of those deaths were caused by action taken by the police, and each of the known paramilitary groups.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: In 1986 no homicides were recorded as attributed to acts of terrorism connected with Northern Ireland.

Prisoners (Transfer)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners were transferred from (a) England and Wales to Northern Ireland and (b) Northern Ireland to England and Wales in 1986; and under which section of the Criminal Justice Act 1961 such transfer was carried out.

Mr. Mellor: Three prisoners were transferred from England and Wales to Nothern Ireland in 1986; two of these transfers were made under section 26 of the Criminal Justice Act 1961 (permanent transfer) and one under section 27 (temporary transfer). Two prisoners were transferred under section 27 from Northern Ireland to England and Wales.

Fire and Civil Defence Authorities

Mr. Favell asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce legislation to limit the number of committees and sub-committees of the fire and civil defence authorities serving the former metropolitan counties and the amount expended on servicing such committees and sub-committees.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Such legislative controls have existed since 1 April 1986, and will continue to operate until 31 March 1989, by virtue of the Fire and Civil Defence Authorities (Establishment, Support Services and Management Schemes) Regulations 1985, made under section 85 of the Local Government Act 1985. These regulations require the fire and civil defence authorities for the first three years of their existence to submit for the Secretary of State's approval, inter alia, a management scheme including details of the authority's organisation. The Secretary of State may approve a scheme either as submitted or, after consultation with the authority in question, subject to such modifications or alterations as he may require. The exercise by the Secretary of State of the precept limitation controls, to which the fire and civil defence authorities are automatically subject in their first three years by virtue of section 68 of the Local Government Act 1985, reflects an assessment, taking into account the advice of Her Majesty's inspectorate of fire services, of what constitutes effective, efficient and economic practice over the whole of fire and civil defence authorities' expenditure.

Special Hospitals

Mr. Cunliffe asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce legislation to take powers to prevent the release from special hospitals of persons with previous convictions for violence.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Under the Mental Health Act 1983, persons who are the subject of special restrictions can be discharged from special or other hospitals only with the consent of my right hon. Friend or on the direction of a mental health review tribunal.

Mr. Cunliffe asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people, subject to a hospital order as a result of violent offences, have been released on licence from a special hospital and subsequently have been convicted of similar offences in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The only readily available information relates to all persons detained in special hospitals in England and Wales under part V of the Mental Health Act 1959 and Criminal Procedure (Insanity) Act 1964 subject to special restrictions on discharge, who were conditionally discharged in the years 1974-79. Of the 157 such persons (not including those who died or were repatriated) 17 were convicted of a 'grave' offence within five years of discharge ('grave' offences cover mainly homicide, serious wounding, rape, buggery, robbery, aggravated burglary and arson).

Burglary (Greater London)

Mr. David Young asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give the latest figures for the number of unsolved burglaries in the latest year for which figures are available in the Metropolitan area of Greater London.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The estimated number of offences of burglary recorded by the Metropolitan police in 1985 but not cleared up was 139,000. Since an offence may be recorded and cleared up in different years, it is not possible to give an exact figure. Numbers of notifiable offences recorded and cleared up in each offence category are published annually in the report of the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis (appendix 4ii of the issue for 1985, Cmnd. 9790).

Departmental Staff

Mr. Michael Marshall asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average number of days training per year given to professional information technology staff within his Department who are no longer trainees in the most recent years for which figures are available.

Mr. Hurd: In 1985 and 1986 staff in the Home Office in the automatic data processing functional specialism received an average of about six days formal training per year. This excludes initial training.

Mr. Michael Marshall asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many data processing staff are in post within his Department; and how many of them are trainees.

Mr. Hurd: At 12 February 1987, there were 380 Home Office staff in post in the automatic data processing functional specialism at executive officer level and above; four were trainees undergoing initial training. These figures exclude staff in the former grades of data processor and senior data processor.

Greater London

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list the total number of written communications between his Department and local authorities in the Greater London area in (a) 1979-80 and (b) 1986-87, to date;

(2) if he will list the additional functions and responsibilities undertaken by his Department of a temporary or permanent kind as a result of the abolition of the Greater London council, stating the total estimated cost to public funds in 1986-87 and the total number of officials involved;

(3) if he will list all regional and sub-regional outposts of his Department responsible for functions or services within the Greater London area, stating function and responsibilities of such outposts and giving the total cost of such offices to public funds in 1986-87 and the total number of officials involved;

(4) if he will list all functions and responsibilities currently undertaken by any division and organisation within his Department which is concerned with local authority services solely within the Greater London area, stating the total estimated cost to public funds in 1986-87 and the total number of officials involved;

(5) if he will list the action he has taken since the abolition of the Greater London council to ensure that the functions and responsibilities of his Department and its related non-departmental public bodies dealing with the Greater London area are co-ordinated with each other.

Mr. Hurd: I will reply as soon as possible.

Television and Radio Broadcasting

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are his responsibilities with regard to television and radio broadcasting.

Mr. Hurd: I am responsible for the Government's policies on the provision of broadcasting and cable television services within the United Kingdom. I have responsibilities for appointments to the broadcasting and cable authorities; for licensing the broadcasting authorities under the terms of the Wireless Telegraphy Act 1949; and for setting the level of the independent television levy and the broadcast receiving licence fee. I have certain reserve powers concerning programmes and advertisements carried on radio or television.

BBC Scotland (Police Raid)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Metropolitan Police Commissioner about the date on which the Metropolitan police first contacted Strathclyde police about the proposed search of BBC premises in Glasgow.

Mr. Hurd: I understand that the Metropolitan police first contacted Strathclyde police on this matter on 29 January.

Road Traffic Offences

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether there have been any prosecutions of persons for acting in contravention of, or failing to comply with, section 6 of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984.

Mr. Hurd: Such prosecutions are not recorded separately in the information available to me.

Prisoners (Mental Illness)

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has any plans to institute research into the incidence of mental illness amongst the prison population of England and Wales.

Mr. Mellor: Yes. The Department is in discussion with the institute of psychiatry, university of London, about a study into the incidence of mental disorder amongst the sentenced prison population and the services required.

Prisoners (Psychiatric Treatment)

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners who are currently serving a sentence in a jail in England and Wales have previously been an in-patient at a psychiatric establishment.

Mr. Mellor: The information requested is not available centrally.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners currently serving a prison sentence are receiving psychiatric treatment.

Mr. Mellor: Information in the form requested is not collected centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Regina v. Allen

Mr. Gregory asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress he has made in considering legislation to reverse the House of Lords judgment in Regina v. Allen in relation to the non-payment of bills for accommodation and catering services.

Mr. Mellor: We are not at present persuaded that there is a need for legislation.

News International, Wapping

Mr. Dennis Canavan asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the total cost to date of giving police protection to the News International plant at Wapping; and if he will give separate figures for the cost of the operation on the night of 24 January.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [pursuant to his reply, 2 February 1987, c. 476]: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that the additional cost to the Metropolitan police of policing the News International dispute at Wapping, up to and including 31 January 1987, is estimated at £5·7 million. The estimate of the additional cost of the operation on 24 January 1987 is £56,000.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Financial Products (Salesmen)

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if it remains his policy that the self-regulatory organisations created under the Financial Services Act are the most appropriate agencies for the purpose of licensing of salesmen of financial products; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: Recognised self-regulating organisations are an important part of the regulatory framework which is being set up by the Financial Services Act. It is in the first instance for applicants for recognition to decide whether to include in their rules a system of licensing of salesmen employed by their members. It will then be for the Secretary of State or designated agency to decide whether the rules as a whole provide an adequate level of investor protection.

Banks and Building Societies (Polarisation)

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received from banks and building societies about their inclusion in the concept of polarisation as defined in the Financial Services Act in relation to the sale of insurance and related products; and what discussions he has had with the Securities and Investment Board on this matter.

Mr. Howard: I have received a copy of the paper the British Bankers Association has sent the Director General of Fair Trading expressing the banks' concerns on this subject. I have also received representations from others supporting polarisation and am considering the matter. I have had no discussions with the Securities and Investments Board on this subject since the Financial Services Act was passed.

Heavy Vehicles

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing, for each category of heavy vehicles imported from Germany, its average landed value in each year since 1983 and in the latest month for which figures are available together with the corresponding rates of exchange between sterling and the German mark.

Mr. Alan Clark: I will reply to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Rolls-Royce plc

Mr. Millan asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will state the amount of any loans still to be repaid by Rolls-Royce plc to Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. Pattie: There are no amounts owing by Rolls-Royce plc on loans advanced to it by Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. Millan asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will state the amounts of equity capital invested by Her Majesty's Government in Rolls-Royce plc in each year since 1971; and if he will convert each of the figures into current value equivalents at today's prices.

Mr. Pattie: Following is the information:

	1986[1] Prices £ million	Actual £ million
1971	145	30
1973	124	[2]30
1975	220	77
1976	93	38
1977	45	21
1978	14	7
1979	54	31
1980	138	94
1981	170	130
1982	60	50

[1] Converted into 1986 prices using the Retail Price Index.
[2] Includes £10 million originally paid by Her Majesty's Government as part of a loan but later coverted to equity.

Mr. Millan asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will state the dividends received by Her Majesty's Government from Rolls-Royce plc in each year since 1971 in respect of the equity capital invested by Her Majesty's Government in the company.

Mr. Pattie: No dividends have been received by Her Majesty's Government in respect of equity invested in Rolls-Royce plc.

Mr. Millan asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will state the amount of public money provided by Her Majesty's Government to Rolls-Royce plc in each year since 1971 in respect of contributions towards aero-engine programmes, and the receipts by Her Majesty's Government in each of those years in respect of such programmes.

Mr. Pattie: Following is the information on launch-aided aero-engine programmes.

	£ million
1971-72	—
1972-73	4·20
1973-74	6·90
1974-75	9·90
1975-76	10·10
1976-77	13·00
1977-78	6·00
1978-79	34·10
1979-80	77·90
1980-81	67·10
1981-82	92·90
1982-83	53·50
1983-84	74·60
1984-85	20·00
1985-86	22·68
1986-87	27·32

In addition, £143·4 million was provided for the fully funded RB211-22B programme in which the Government took all receipts for the first 555 engines, totalling £330 million.

Six of the aero-engine programmes for which launch aid has been provided are either still in production or under development and are therefore expected to yield a levy on sales for a number of years to come.

Excluding the 22B programme, the total levies on sales received by Her Majesty's Government for all launch-aided engine programmes up to 31 December 1986 was £120·6 million. An annual breakdown is not readily available.

Helicopter Industry

Dr. Hampson asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the future of the United Kingdom helicopter industry; and what measures he is considering to strengthen its technological and strategic position.

Mr. Pattie: Westland plc is the United Kingdom's only helicopter manufacturer. The company recently announced pre-tax profits of £26·4 million for the year ended 30 September 1986, of which £8·9 million was attributable to its helicopter business. My Department is providing launch aid to Westland for the development of the commercial versions of the EH101 helicopter. The company also receives funding from the Department for a number of technological research projects.

Multi-fibre Arrangement

Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make use of article 24 of the new multi-fibre arrangement protocol to bring under quota restraint garments made predominantly from ramie.

Mr. Alan Clark: The European Commission has been informed of my concern at the high level of imports this year from certain third countries of garments made predominantly of ramie. We have provided the Commission and other member states with the provisional import figures obtained for the first 20 days of the year. Other member states have been invited urgently to provide similar details of ramie imports so that the Community can decide what action, including the possibility of consultations under article 24 of the protocol, to take. The United Kingdom has emphasised the need for the Community to act quickly if this is justified.

Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the number of garments made from more than 50 per cent. by weight of ramie fibre, contained within Category 5 (jumpers, pullovers and cardigans) of the multi-fibre arrangement, for which import licences have been received since 31 December 1986.

Mr. Alan Clark: There is no import licensing requirement for pullovers made predominantly from ramie, but special surveillance measures have been in force since 1 January 1987. Provisional import figures reveal that in the first 20 days of January, 240,000 of these pullovers originating in China, Hong Kong, South Korea and Taiwan (the only countries for which figures are at present available) were imported into the United Kingdom.

Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish in the Official Report details of the special import surveillance arrangements he has made in relation to certain garments made predominantly from ramie.

Mr. Alan Clark: In order to monitor effectively imports of certain garments made predominantly from ramie, five new Nimexe headings were created on 1 January this year for pullovers, shirts and blouses. With the co-operation of Her Majesty's Customs, my Department has been monitoring the levels of the most sensitive of these imports from Hong Kong, South Korea, Taiwan and China under an import surveillance arrangement which provides provisional import figures at 10-day intervals. In view of the significant quantity identified, arrangements are now being made for imports under the remaining Nimexe headings to be similarly closely monitored and for Macao to be added to the list of originating countries.

British National Space Centre

Mr. Michael Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received regarding the provisions submitted to him by the British national space centre; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Pattie: There have been several expressions of interest from industry and others, including my hon. Friend, in the proposals I have received from the British National Space Centre. These proposals represent a major long-term commitment and they are being carefully considered. I hope to be able to make a statement on them in the near future.

Consumer Credit Act

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he intends to exempt loans of less than £15,000 for housing purposes from building societies from the restrictions of the Consumer Credit Act.

Mr. Howard: All building society loans secured on first mortgage for house purchase, repair and improvement are already exempt from the requirements of the Consumer Credit Act. Other secured loans by building societies and other lenders will come within the scope of the Act. I consider it right in principle that the protection of the Act should be available to consumers who pledge their home as security in credit agreements.

I am aware of the view of some building societies that the need to comply with the Consumer Credit Act, to which other commercial lenders have been subject since May 1985, in respect of repair loans to owner-occupiers will make it difficult for them to participate in certain local schemes for property renovation. I am considering whether any further limited exemption from the requirements of the Act may be appropriate, but I would not be prepared to make any changes that would significantly weaken the protection available to borrowers or distort competition between the main commercial lenders.

Exports

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a further statement about the recent trend of export trade.

Mr. Alan Clark: Non-oil exports were at record levels in both value and volume last year. By the end of 1986 the volume of non-oil exports was over 10 per cent. higher than a year earlier and is forecast to rise further this year.

Manchester Ship Canal Company

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will set up an immediate departmental inquiry into the procedures and commercial practices involved in the takeover bid for the Manchester Ship Canal Company; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: The practices in question do not appear to be within the scope of any of my right hon Friend's investigatory powers under the Companies Act, but they can certainly be considered within the framework of the review of various aspects of takeover regulation which he announced on 28 January.

Soya

Mr. Loyden asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the figures for the import into the United Kingdom of (a) soya beans and (b) soya meal for the months of December 1986 and January 1987.

Mr. Alan Clark: In December 1986, 63,656 metric tonnes of soya beans (value £9 million) and 106,670 metric tonnes of soya meal (value £36,000) were imported into the United Kingdom.

Figures for January 1987 are not yet available.

British Shipbuilders and British Steel

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will estimate how many persons were employed in each region and in Scotland and Wales by (a) British Shipbuilders and (b) British Steel in June 1979; and how many are now employed.

Mr. Giles Shaw [pursuant to his reply, 12 February 1987]: A direct comparison is not possible between 1979 and 1986, because of the privatisation programme of both corporations. The information contained in the table therefore also refers to those companies privatised since 1979.

Region	British Shipbuilders			British Steel Corporation

[1] Where current employment not known, composite figures include employment within the yard at the time of sale by British Shipbuilders. A similar breakdown is not available for the British Steel Corporation but it is estimated that about 20,000 employees have been transferred, primarily on the formation of joint venture companies between BSC and the private sector.

Science and Technology Grants

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will specify the number of claims made for various science and technology grants to his Department during each year since 1979; and which of these claims were received from small companies.

Mr. Pattie [pursuant to his reply, 13 February 1987]: The number of applications under the principal schemes for project support under the Science and Technology Act 1965 are as follows. Statistics relating to size of firms are not readily available, but also shown are applications with eligible project costs below £100,000. These are generally accepted only from small firms.

Number of Applications

	Total	Number[1]
1979-80	823	436

Orbital Slots

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when Her Majesty's Government last filed an orbital slot with the International Telecommunications Union.

Mr. Butcher [pursuant to his reply, 13 February 1987]: On 21 January 1987.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will place in the Library examples of data filed with the International Telecommunications Union in connection with orbital slots.

Mr. Butcher [pursuant to his reply, 13 February 1987]: I have placed in the Library copies of the information sent on 21 January 1987 in respect of the Inmarsat AOR Central IA and IIA satellites.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Museum Charges

89. Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received on the proposed implementation of entrance charges to the natural history museum, the geological museum and the zoological museum at Tring.

90. Mr. Eric Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received on the proposed implementation of entrance charges to the natural history museum, the geological museum and the zoological museum at Tring.

91. Mr. Bidwell asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received on the proposed implementation of entrance charges to the natural history museum, the geological museum and the zoological museum at Tring.

Mr. Walden: I refer the hon. Members to my reply to the hon. Member for Fulham (Mr. Raynsford) on 6 February at column 846.

GCSE (Staffordshire)

Mr. Lawrence asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what allocation has been made to Staffordshire county council for the implementation of the general certificate of secondary education.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Government have directly provided for the following expenditure in Staffordshire towards the introduction of GCSE:

	1986-87 £	1987-88 £
On books and equipment	438,900	234,700
On in-service training	159,490	332,000

Youth Service

Mr. Lawler asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether there is any intention to develop a specific category within his Department's education support current programme to cover the needs of the Youth Service.

Mr. Dunn: My right hon. Friend's reply of 20 January to my hon. Friend the Member for Salisbury (Mr. Key) at column 513-14 referred to the new activities to be supported in the 1987-88 programme. The allocations for one of these, the promotion of social responsibility in young people, include several projects which are to be run by, or in conjunction with the youth service. In addition, the youth service is included within the area of responsibility of the co-ordinators employed by local education authorities to stimulate action aimed at the prevention of drug misuse, which was first supported in the 1986-87 ESG programme.

Capital Allocations

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) what reports and information were available to his Department in considering the 1987-88 capital allocations for local education authorities; what information was available on (a) the age, suitability and condition of each authority's school accommodation, (b) the age, suitability and condition of each authority's other educational accommodation, (c) the extent to which each authority had removed surplus places, (d) the capital receipts likely to be available to each authority and (e) the extent to which each authority had made provision to implement the Education Act 1981 concerning children with special needs, and the further requirement for such provision; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what criteria were used in determining the 1987-88 capital allocations for local education authorities; to what extent consideration was given to (a) the age, suitability and condition of each authority's school accommodation, (b) the age, suitability and condition of each authority's other educational accommodation, (c) the extent to which each authority had removed surplus places, (d) the capital receipts likely to be available to each authority and (e) the extent to which each authority had made provision to implement the Education Act 1981 concerning children with special needs, and the further requirement for such provision; and if he will make a statement;

Mr. Dunn: The Department does not collect comprehensive information in categories (a) to (e). Every year, all local education authorities send to the Department details of their capital expenditure plans for the following financial year. Individual local education authorities' allocations of prescribed capital expenditure on schools for 1987-88 were calculated, on the basis of the information thus supplied, by giving priority to committed expenditure (up to a level previously notified to the authority), expenditure on projects required to meet basic need, and expenditure required in connection with the removal of surplus school places. What remained was allocated by means of a formula based on information supplied by LEAs about the incidence of substandard school accommodation and on each authority's planned expenditure in other categories relating to schools. For further and higher education, priority was given to committed expenditure (on the same basis as for schools), tertiary projects arising from statutory proposals to remove surplus places, and the provision of computers and technical equipment. This general approach, which has been in use for a number of years, was devised after discussions with the local authority associations.

Saltby Church of England School

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what allocation he has granted to Leicestershire county council for 1987-88 for minor works for aided schools; and whether this is intended to cover necessary works at Saltby Church of England primary school.

Mr. Dunn: My right hon. Friend approved for minor works at voluntary aided and special agreement schools an allocation of £88,000 for 1987-88 and a provisional indication of £22,000 for 1988-89. It is for the local education authority, in consultation with the voluntary bodies in its area, to determine how the allocation should be spent.

Schools

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information is available to his Department on whether capital expenditure for improvements has been either planned or undertaken at those schools inspected by Her Majesty's inspectors since 1979, where the report of inspection judged the quality of lessons to be restricted by poor accommodation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: Individual authorities provide information of this type from time to time in correspondence with the Department; but no central record is kept of such data.

School Closures

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what action he is taking to support parental preferences for small rural schools to remain open; and if he will make a statement on his policy in this regard.

Mr. Dunn: My right hon. Friend has a statutory duty to consider proposals for the closure of small rural schools on their merits. In doing so he takes account inter alia of expressed parental preference for schools of this kind. Small isolated schools may have difficulty in sustaining a broad and balanced curriculum: my right hon. Friend is currently supporting pilot projects in 14 LEAs under the rural schools educational support grants programme, aimed at identifying ways of widening and enriching the curriculum.

Sex Education

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he is satisfied that local education authorities are taking all such steps as are reasonably practicable to ensure that sex education in schools is given with proper regard to moral considerations; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend expects all parties to fulfil their new responsibilities and duties under the Education (No. 2) Act 1986, including the requirement for any sex education offered by schools to encourage pupils "to have due regard to moral considerations and the value of family life".
He intends to issue shortly a circular on sex education at school which will include guidance on the implementation of the new legislative provisions.

Overseas Development

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will now seek to include courses in awareness on overseas development in modern studies courses in secondary schools.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Government believe that there should be room in the secondary curriculum for elements which need not or should not be taught as separate subjects. Some awareness of economic matters and of overseas development, for example, which many secondary schools already include in the curriculum, can arise naturally in the course of studying subjects such as geography and economics.

UGC Review

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he expects to publish a response to the review of the University Grants Committee, Cmnd. 81; what consultations or discussions he expects to hold on this report; when he expects to complete his consideration of this report; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friend's reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Nottingham, East (Mr. Knowles) on 10 February 1987 at column 172.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL FOR SCOTLAND

BBC Scotland (Police Raid)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland if the Lord Advocate will call for a report from the office of the procurator fiscal in Glasgow about the progress of inquiries in connection with the police search of BBC premises in Glasgow on 31 January and 1 February; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: The Crown Office is being advised of the progress of the procurator fiscal's inquiries. Once the procurator fiscal is in a position to submit a formal report to the Lord Advocate, he will do so.

To date, 211 articles have been examined and returned to the BBC.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland if he will list all the occasions since 1979 on which the Lord Advocate, the Crown Office or procurators fiscal have sought advice from outside Her Majesty's Government in cases involving alleged breaches of the Official Secrets Acts in relation to (a) their assessment of the extent of any damage to national security for the purposes of determining the need for and scope of police inquiries and possible search warrants and (b) their subsequent decision as to whether to bring a prosecution; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: Any request for advice from outside Her Majesty's Government would be confidential; but it is not the Lord Advocate's practice to seek such advice.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland to what extent (a) the Lord Advocate and (b) the local procurator fiscal are being kept informed about progress with the police inquiries in Scotland into alleged breaches of the Official Secrets Acts in relation to project Zircon; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: The procurator fiscal is being kept informed from time to time about progress with the police inquiries in Scotland into alleged breaches of the Official Secrets Acts in relation to project Zircon and the Lord Advocate is being kept informed by the procurator fiscal of these matters. A full report will be prepared and submitted by the police to the procurator fiscal in due course.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland, pursuant to the answer of 11 February, what is the Lord Advocate's practice with regard to (a) informing as opposed to consulting other Ministers about applications for search warrants in relation to alleged offences under the Official Secrets Acts and (b) keeping other Ministers informed about the progress of police inquiries into such alleged offences; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: Whether and to what extent the Lord Advocate would (a) inform as opposed to consulting other Ministers about applications for search warrants in relation to alleged offences under the Official Secrets Acts and (b) keep other Ministers informed about the progress of police inquiries into such alleged offences would depend on the circumstances of the particular case.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland why the Lord Advocate did not seek to obtain an interim interdict or an interdict in perpetuity in relation to the publication of material in Scotland concerning the proposed BBC programme about Project Zircon, as soon as he became aware of the likelihood that an article on the subject by Mr. Duncan Campbell was to be published in the New Statesman of 23 January; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate was not aware and had no grounds for believing that there was a threat or likelihood of publication of this material by the New Statesman.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 11 February, Official Report, column 308, by what means the procurator fiscal knew the attitude of the BBC to the requirement of due legal process in relation to requests by the police to search the corporation's Glasgow premises; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: I refer the hon. Member to the statement by my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary, which is reported in the Official Report for 3 February 1987 at column 825, and to my answer to the hon. Member's written question on 9 February 1987, at column 9.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland to what extent his consideration of the public interest in assessing the need for, and scope of, a search warrant requested by the police differs from that which he applied in deciding whether to bring prosecutions in cases involving breaches of the Official Secrets Act; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: In cases of alleged breaches of the Official Secrets Acts, as in many other types of case, consideration requires to be given to the public interest by the Lord Advocate in deciding whether to direct the carrying out of a criminal investigation and thereafter, where that investigation has produced a legal sufficiency of evidence, whether there should be a prosecution. An application for a search warrant by a procurator fiscal at the request of the police in the course of a criminal investigation is part of the evidence-gathering process in such an investigation.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 11 February, Official Report, column 308, what precise steps the Lord Advocate took to satisfy himself of the adequacy and scope of search warrants in the course of criminal investigations by the police into alleged breaches of the Official Secrets Act in relation to Project Zircon; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: I refer the hon. Member to my noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate's answers in another place on 4 February 1987 Official Report, columns 199-205 to which I have nothing to add.

WALES

Planning Appeals

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report for each year since 1979 (a) the total number of planning appeals made to his Department, (b) the number of appeals withdrawn, (c) the number of appeals upheld and (d) the number of appeals rejected.

Mr. Mark Robinson: For each year since 1979 the total numbers of planning appeals made to the Department, withdrawn, upheld and rejected are as follows:

Year	Received	Withdrawn	Upheld	Rejected
1979	844	181	164	363

Mental Hospitals

Mr. Gould asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give details of long-stay mental hospitals currently approved for closure, or listed in strategic plans as proposed for closure before 1995, or indicated by health authorities as possibilities for closure outside the strategic planning period, listing the present number of in-patients in each case.

Mr. Mark Robinson: There is no regional strategic plan for Wales. The information by district is as follows. Although the strategic plans for Clwyd and Gwent have been approved, the separate consultation procedures linked to the closure of hospitals have not yet been carried out.

District Health Authority	Mental illness or handicap hospitals proposed for closure in strategic plan (before 1995)	Status of strategic plan	Mental illness or handicap hospitals where District Health Authority has indicated a possibility of closure (after 1995)	Number of in-patients at December 1986

Hospital and Health Services

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give the capital spent on hospital and community health services for each year since 1974-75 to the latest available date giving in each case the amount (a) in cash terms and (b) deflated by the gross domestic product deflator and (i) in gross terms and (ii) in net terms after deducting proceeds from land sales.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The information requested is set out in the following table:

Gross Capital Expenditure on Hospital and Community Health Services

NHS (Staff)

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to receive the report of the review of grading structure of secretarial staff and clerical workers in the National Health Service which is being carried out by the administrative and clerical Whitley council.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Negotiations on a revised grading structure for administrative and clerical staff are taking place within the Whitley council. It is too early to say when an outcome might be expected.

Darren Colliery

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to announce his decision on the planning appeal relating to the tip removal on the former Darren colliery site at Trebanos.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Certain matters arising on this case have been referred back to the parties for further consideration. Until these matters have been resolved it will not be possible for the inspector to issue his decision.

Garngoch Colliery

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to announce his decision following a public inquiry at the Lliw Valley borough council offices on 7 October 1986 regarding planning matters relating to the site at Garngoch colliery.

Mr. Mark Robinson: My right hon. Friend will issue his decision on this appeal as soon as possible. It is taking longer than usual because of the need to consider complex legal issues raised at the inquiry.

Rights of Way

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report a list of outstanding cases that await his decision in relation to the implementation of the review of public rights of way under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 in West Glamorgan.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: There are no outstanding cases.

Hazard Signals (M4)

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report (i) the nature of the hazard necessitating the switching on of the advisory 50 miles per hour speed limit signals on the evening of 5 February between junctions 36 and 37 on the westbound carriageway of the M4 motorway, (ii) the time that the signals were activated, (iii) the time that the hazard was removed and (iv) the time that the signals were switched off.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Operation of these signs is a matter for the appropriate police force, in this case the South Wales police. I am informed that an advisory 50 mph speed limit was displayed between junctions 36 and 37 of the M4 at 15.30 on 5 February because of restricted visibility due to poor weather conditions. An accident involving several vehicles occurred in the westbound carriageway at 17.48 and this was not cleared until 21.44. Weather conditions improved sufficiently by 22.39 to allow the advisory speed limit to be lifted.

Photographic Museum

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if the working party examining the establishment of a Welsh national photographic museum is considering in its deliberations the site at the Lliw Valley borough council offices at Penllergaer.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Yes.

River Dee Crossing

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will estimate the additional capacity of traffic there would be by widening the A494(T) where it crosses the River Dee at Queensferry; and what is the additional capacity that would be made available by the construction of the local or outer link as defined in the report on the north-east Clwyd traffic study.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Adding a third lane to the existing road at Queensferry would increase the capacity from 45,000 vehicles per day to around 65,000. Provision of a local link would create additional capacity of around 18,000 vehicles per day; and of an outer link additional capacity of around 45,000.

School Books

Mr. Geraint Howells asked the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the level of expenditure on school books in Wales for each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Local authorities recorded expenditure on text books, library books, educational equipment, stationery and materials in nursery, primary, secondary and special education over the last 10 years is shown in the following table. Reliable information on text books and library books is not separately available.

Year	£'000

Milk Quota

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales what proportion of the milk quota which has changed hands in South Wales has changed hands through grass letting.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: This information is not available.

Derelict Land

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list all the projects funded by derelict land grants in (a) Wales and (b) Mid Glamorgan in the last three years.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The information is as follows:

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many derelict land grants have been paid in respect of schemes in (a) Wales and (b) Mid Glamorgan in each of the past three years; how much grant was paid; and what was the value of the schemes.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The information is given in the following table:

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list current applications for derelict land grants in (a) Wales, (b) Mid Glamorgan, (c) West Glamorgan, (d) Gwent and (e) Clwyd.

Mr. Mark Robinson: I will write to the hon. Gentleman and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Doctors' Surgeries

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales if doctors' surgeries improvement grants are available in Wales to carry out improvements to the accessibility of surgeries for disabled people; and what guidance has been issued to the family practitioner committees on the subject.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Yes; guidance is contained in the statement of fees and allowances payable under the NHS general medical services issued to all family practitioner committees and family doctors in Wales.

Disabled People

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many physically disabled people under 35 years of age currently attend local authority day centres in Wales.

Mr. Mark Robinson: At the 31 March 1986, the number of physically disabled people under 65 years of age attending local authority day centres in Wales was 685. Information on the number of under 35-year-olds is not available centrally.

Doctors' Lists

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has on the size of general practitioners' patients lists in (a) Clwyd and (b) Rhyl; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The average size of general practitioners' patients' lists is 1,892 in Clwyd and 2,559 in Rhyl.

Legislation

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many separate items of subordinate legislation affecting Wales were created in each parliamentary session since 1979; of these, how many were made by his Department, and how many were made jointly with other departments; and if he will list the items, indicating those which were debated on the Floor of the House or in Committee.

Mr. Wyn Roberts [pursuant to the reply, 9 February 1987, c. 91.]: The annual HMSO publication "Lists of Statutory Instruments" contains a list of the general and local statutory instruments (both printed and unprinted) registered in that year arranged under subject headings. Copies are available in the Library of the House. To provide information in the form and detail requested by the hon. Gentleman could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

SCOTLAND

Torness

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if, pursuant to his replies to the hon. Member for East Lothian on 10 December 1986, Official Report, columns 173-4, he will now place a full copy of the "Interim Emergency Manual" for Torness nuclear power station in the Library.

Mr. Lang: I refer the hon. Member to my replies of 9 December, Official Report column 136. The interim emergency manual by its nature is subject to revision as commissioning proceeds. Its contents will in due course be incorporated in the emergency plan for Torness nuclear power station. The South of Scotland electricity board has already undertaken to place a copy of the completed emergency Plan in the Library, and also give it wider circulation, when it has been approved by Her Majesty's nuclear installations inspectorate.

Paramilitaries

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many persons have been (a) killed and (b) injured in Scotland in 1986 as a result of paramilitary activity; and if he will break down the figures specifying whether the paramilitaries were (i) from Western Europe, (ii) from Northern Ireland, (iii) from the Republic of Ireland, (iv) from other parts of the world and (v) of unknown origin.

Mr. Lang: From available information, there were no such deaths or injuries in Scotland during 1986.

Prisoners (Northern Ireland)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many prisoners were transferred from (a) Scotland to Northern Ireland and (b) Northern Ireland to Scotland in 1986; and under which section of the Criminal Justice Act 1961 such transfers were carried out.

Mr. Lang: In 1986 three prisoners were transferred permanently from Scotland to Northern Ireland under section 26(1) of the Criminal Justice Act 1961, and one prisoner was transferred temporarily, for a period of 15 days, from Northern Ireland to Scotland under section 27(1) of the Criminal Justice Act 1961.

Hospital and Community Health Services

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the capital spend on hospital and community health services for each year since 1974-75 to the latest available date, giving in each case the amount (a) in cash terms and (b) deflated by the gross domestic product deflator and (i) in gross terms and (ii) in net terms after deducting proceeds from land sales.

Mr. John MacKay: The information requested is as follows:

£ million

	Capital Expenditure (Gross)		Capital Expenditure (Net)
	Cash	Adjusted by the GDP Deflator	Cash	Adjusted by the GDP Deflator
1974-75	30·2	102·1	30·0	101·5

Community Programme (Fraud)

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) prosecutions and (b) convictions there have been in Scotland since 1981 for offences relating to the fraudulent misuse or misappropriation of moneys advanced by the Manpower Services Commission in connection with the community programme.

Mr. Lang: I understand from the Manpower Services Commission that according to their central records which date back only to 1984, there is no record of a case in Scotland resulting in prosecution or conviction.

BBC Scotland (Police Raid)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 11 February, if the Strathclyde police officers who accompanied him to the premises of BBC Scotland on 30 January told him that the police operation to be held there the following day was connected to the disclosure of information about the Zircon satellite.

Mr. Rifkind: No. The police officers were solely concerned to make me aware that the police operation, of which my Department had been informed earlier in the day, would not take place until the Saturday. At this time I was not aware of the communication from the police to my Department.

Northern College Board of Governors

Mr. Kennedy asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the composition of the new Northern college board of governors, showing the proportion of members who will sit in a specifically representative capacity of staff or students; if he will provide comparable figures for the previous boards at (a) Aberdeen and (b) Dundee colleges; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: Following a consultation exercise last year, it is intended to alter the composition of the governing bodies of all the colleges of education from 1 April. The tables provide the detailed information requested.

Future composition of Northern College of Education Governing Body

Scottish Development Agency

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many new projects applied for Scottish Development Agency funding in each year since 1979; and how many were successful.

Mr. Rifkind: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing the level of funding of the Scottish Development Agency by his Department in each year since 1979-80 expressed in (a) cash terms, (b) real terms based on constant 1980-81 prices and (c) real terms based on constant 1986-87 prices.

Mr. Rifkind: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Cash Limits

Mr. Corrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether it is proposed to change the cash limit on any departmental vote for which he is responsible.

Mr. Rifkind: Yes. Following expected savings on a number of services the cash limit for class XVI, 2 (agricultural services and fisheries, Scotland) is being reduced by £1,000,000 from £77,843,000 to £76,843,000. This reduction will partly offset increased expenditure of £4,158,000 on class XVI, 1 (agricultural support, Scotland) which is not subject to a cash limit and for which a Supplementary Estimate will be presented to Parliament very shortly.

Severe Weather Payments

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps are being taken to ensure that all claims made for severe weather payments will be processed in such a way as to ensure that all those eligible for benefit receive it.

Mr. Major: I have been asked to reply.

The exceptionally cold weather claim forms have been designed to allow ease of completion whilst at the same time providing the information needed to decide entitlement and make payments quickly. Cases of doubt are referred back to the claimant for additional information before a decision is made.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Lebanon

Mr. Lawrence asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British subjects are currently known to be in Lebanon; and what advice he is giving to them about staying there.

Mr. Eggar: There are about 1,700 British nationals currently in Lebanon, of whom the vast majority are dual nationals. Consular advice to British nationals resident in all areas of Lebanon is kept constantly under review. At present, our advice is that they should observe a high level of caution and consider whether they have compelling reasons to remain in the country. Those in west Beirut have been repeatedly urged to leave.

Miss Yasmin Chothia

Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects to be in a position to reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Coventry, South-East concerning Miss Yasmin Chothia.

Mr. Eggar: A reply was sent to the hon. Member on 12 February.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library a copy of the recent letter sent by the Chairman of the Falkland Islands Council to his Department, acquiescing in Her Majesty's Government's discussions with Argentina over Falkland Islands' sovereignty.

Mr. Eggar: No such letter has been received.

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish the contents of each letter he has received since 1 January 1987 from the Falkland Islands Legislative Council or any of its members; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: No such letters have been received.

Namibia

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will suspend all contact with the South-West Africa People's Organisation until such time as it has provided full information in respect of the persons executed by the People's Liberation Army of Namibia in 1985-86.

Mrs. Chalker: All reports of alleged human rights abuses relating to Namibia, whether by the South-West Africa People's Organisation or by South African forces, are causes of concern to us. We shall nevertheless continue to talk to all parties to the UN plan, including the South-West Africa People's Organisation and the South African Government, with the aim of promoting internationally accepted independence for Namibia.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he or any official of his Department has received any representations or has made representations concerning Vilho Komomeya, Iipumbu Shongolo, Aaron Seibeb, Bennie Pwetrus, Theresia Basson, Ben Motinga, Hans Claasen, Joel Toromba, Uunona Kamarona, Jackson Hamupembe, Shilongo Iilya Shilongo, Theophillus Shoopala, all Namibian refugees held in detention by the South-West Africa People's Organisation.

Mrs. Chalker: We have received representations about some of the Namibians in question from the Namibian Parents Committee and the International Society for Human Rights. We have expressed our concern to the South West Africa People's Organisation about allegations of human rights abuses in Namibian refugee camps.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make representations to the South-West Africa People's Organisation about its use of torture and other forms of inhuman conduct against young children abducted from Namibia.

Mrs. Chalker: We are concerned at all violations of human rights, and have expressed to representatives of the South-West Africa People's Organisation our concern at the various allegations of human rights abuses in Namibia refugee camps.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the current level of opposition within Namibia to the transitional Government of national unity; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: We believe that the level of opposition to, or support for, any political organisation in Namibia can be established accurately only through the free and fair elections provided for under the United Nations plan for Namibian independence.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will continue to fund indirectly the weekly Namibian newspaper.

Mrs. Chalker: We do not give funds to the Namibian, and we are not aware of any indirect funding of the newspaper from official sources.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) whether he plans any changes in Her Majesty's Government's policy towards Namibia in the light of the torture and execution of Lukas Stefanus, Victor Nkandi, Eric Biwa, Henry John Bonzaanier, Tauno Hatuikulipi, Latatutu Hatuikulipi, Peter Nanyemba, Ben Boois and Beny Petrus by the South-West Africa People's Organisation;

(2) whether he plans any changes in Her Majesty's Government's policy towards Namibia in the light of the illegal detention, without trial, of four leading members of the central committee of the South-West Africa People's Organisation, SWAPO of South-West Africa/Namibia.

Mrs. Chalker: Our policy on Namibia is well known and unchanged. We remain fully committed to the independence of the territory on the basis of the peaceful implementation of UN Security Council resolution 435.

Angola

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Government of Angola about the conditions of detention and the death of Ceila Mbunambana in Angola.

Mrs. Chalker: We are concerned about allegations of possible human rights abuses wherever they occur. We have as yet no knowledge of this particular case. If my hon. Friend can provide further information we will be in a better position to comment.

Mr. J. Rajiah

Mr. Hunter asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) further to his answer of 21 November, Official Report, column 381-2, what subsequent representation he has made to, or what dealings he has had with, Spanish authorities concerning the shooting by the Spanish police of Mr. J. Rajiah, the late constituent of the hon. Member for Basingstoke;

(2) what information has been received by the British embassy in Madrid about the availability and willingness of Spanish witnesses to the shooting of Mr. J. Rajiah, the late constituent of the hon. Member for Basingstoke, to attend the inquest in the United Kingdom;

(3) if he will make immediate representations to Spanish authorities requesting that Spanish witnesses to the shooting of Mr. J. Rajiah, the late constituent of the hon. Member for Basingstoke, and other Spanish people whose testimony may be relevant, be encouraged to attend the inquest due to be held in the United Kingdom towards the end of February.

Mr. Eggar: Mr. Rajiah was a Sri Lankan citizen. Our initial action in expressing concern to the Spanish authorities was taken in the interests of speed (as Sri Lanka is not represented in Madrid).

The matter is before the High Court in Seville; and Her Majesty's Consul in Seville will be seeing its president next week to ask whether he can agree to our request for a copy of the police report, and other documents. Any further approaches to the Spanish authorities should be taken by the Sri Lankans.

The attendance at an inquest in this country is entirely a matter for the coroner. Even if Mr. Rajiah had been a British national, it would not be appropriate to make representations to the Spanish authorities about the attendance of witnesses. This would be a matter for the Spanish legal representative appointed to represent the interests of the Rajiah family.

No information has been received about the attendance of witnesses.

Zircon Project

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether officials from his Department have held discussions with officials from (a) the Federal Republic of Germany and (b) the United States regarding collaboration on the Zircon project.

Mr. Renton: We do not intend to depart from the practice of successive Governments, which has been not to comment on matters of intelligence and security.

Turks and Caicos Islands

Mr. Haynes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects to make an announcement on the restoration of democracy in the Turks and Caicos Islands; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: We are currently studying the report of the Turks and Caicos Islands constitutional commission and its recommendations for the island's future.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Remands

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give the average period between remand and trial for prisoners refused bail and charged with scheduled offences in Northern Ireland in 1986.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many prisoners charged with scheduled offences in the latest calendar year for which figures are available were remanded in custody prior to trial for periods between (a) zero to three months, (b) three to six months, (c) six to nine months, (d) nine to 12 months, (e) 12 to 18 months and (f) over 18 months for scheduled and non-scheduled offences, respectively.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many prisoners were remanded in custody prior to trial for scheduled and non-scheduled offences, respectively, in 1986.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of prisoners on custodial remand for scheduled and non-scheduled offences, respectively, were (a) given a non-custodial sentence, (b) given a custodial sentence, and (c) found not guilty or not proceeded against in 1986.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the average number of days that prisoners spent on custodial remand for scheduled, non-scheduled offences and both together, in 1986.

Mr. Scott: For persons who were tried in 1986 and who were in custody at the time of their trial, the average time spent on custodial remand was 216 days for persons charged with scheduled offences and 45 days for persons charged with non-scheduled offences.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons were remanded in custody before trial for scheduled, non-scheduled offences and both together in 1986.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Evidence (Accomplices)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people have been convicted in the current year either on their own admission of guilt or following a plea of not guilty on the basis of evidence on behalf of the Crown given by alleged accomplices in cases concerning scheduled offences in Northern Ireland; how many suspects arrested on the basis of such evidence have been released as a result of the retraction of evidence given by accomplices; how many people are presently awaiting trial as a result of evidence obtained from alleged accomplices; and how many people have been found not guilty, or not guilty on appeal, on the basis of such evidence.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Emergency Provisions

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many persons were detained under the Emergency Provisions (Northern Ireland) Act 1978; and, of those persons, how many were charged with scheduled offences and how many were charged with non-scheduled offences in 1986;

(2) how many persons were detained under Emergency Provisions (Northern Ireland) Acts 1973 and 1978 in the second half of 1986.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Terrorism

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if he will publish in the Official Report the number of persons who were initially detained under other acts and were subsequently charged under the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Acts in 1986;

(2) how many persons detained under the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Acts were charged with (a) offences under the Acts and (b) offences under other Acts (excluding common law offences) in 1986.

Mr. Scott: In 1986, five people detained in Northern Ireland under the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1984 were charged with offences under that Act; 330 were charged with offences under other Acts. Three people were charged with an offence under the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1984 having first been detained in Northern Ireland under another Act.

Security

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the security statistics for the second half of 1986 are now available, together with details of persons charged with terrorist-type activities and convictions for scheduled offences for the year.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Prisons

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give the number of prisoners in Northern Ireland's gaols as at 31 December 1986, detailing the numbers by sex, in prison and in young offenders centres separately.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Firearms

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if he will publish a table in the Official Report to show how many firearms, by type, namely, handguns, rifles, shotguns or fully automatic weapons, were seized by the security forces in Northern Ireland in 1986; and for each type, how many were legally held weapons stolen by terrorist organisations from (i) civilians, (ii) the Royal Ulster Constabulary, (iii) the Royal Ulster Constabulary Reserve, (iv) the Ulster Special Constabulary, (v) the Ulster Defence Regiment and (vi) the regular Army;

(2) if he will detail the number of arms found in 1986 under the headings of (a) machine guns, (b) rifles, (c) shotguns, (d) pistols/revolvers and (e) others.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Plastic Bullets

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many formal complaints have been made about incidents of police use of plastic baton rounds in 1986; in how many cases the complaint has been upheld; and in how many cases disciplinary action has been taken against the officers involved;

(2) how many plastic bullets were fired in Northern Ireland in the second half of 1986; in what circumstances and in what location the bullets were fired; and how many persons were injured as a result.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many attacks on Royal Ulster Constabulary personnel took place in each month of 1986, showing whether the attack was on (a) a foot patrol or (b) a mobile patrol and (c) the total attacked while on duty each month together with details of the type of attack namely: (i) physical assault, (ii) stone throwing, (iii) petrol bomb, (iv) explosion, (v) shooting and the number of persons made amenable.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Prison Population

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the size of the present prison population in Northern Ireland divided into terrorist offenders and other offenders categorised by age and by sex in the following groups: under 18 years old, 18 to 25 years, 25 to 30 years, 40 to 50 years, 50 to 60 years and over 60 years, giving a breakdown of the length of sentence being served by each age group under the following headings: (i) up to three months, (ii) over three months and up to six months, (iii) over six months and under 12 months, (iv) over 12 months and under 18 months, (v) over 18 months and up to four years, (vi) over four years and up to eight years, (vii) over eight years and (viii) life, together with a breakdown, divided into terrorist offenders and other offenders under the same sentence headings of the numbers as a percentage of the total prison population.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Strip Searches

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many strip searches were made of female prisoners in Her Majesty's prison, Maghabary, in January 1987; if he will give the number of persons involved and the number of times each person was searched; whether any prison contraband, smuggled item or illegal correspondence was discovered in any search, indicating which items; in how many cases prisoners refused to be searched and had to be restrained while the search was being concluded; and if he will indicate the reasons for the search, namely making an appearance in court, and in which court, on remand, attending trial, inter-prison visit or other reasons.

Mr. Scott: During January 1987, 47 searches were carried out on 27 prisoners; nine prisoners were searched once, 16 were searched twice and two prisoners were searched on three occasions. No prohibited article was found during these searches and no prisoner refused to be searched. The searches were carried out in the following circumstances:

	Number
First admission on remand/awaiting trial	5
First admission on sentence/final discharge	22
Attending Lisburn Remand Court	1
Attending Belfast Remand Court	4
Attending Antrim Remand Court	1
Bail Court appearances	5
Going on or returning from home leave	6
Inter prison visits	2
Visits to outside hospital	1

Teachers (Recognition)

Mr. Mallon asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many teachers convicted of offences, but not sentenced to prison as a result, have had their recognition withdrawn by his Department over the past three years.

Dr. Mawhinney: None.

Security Forces (Offences)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give details for 1986 of the number of members of the Ulster Defence Regiment, the Royal Ulster Constabulary, their respective reserves, and the British Army, who have been charged with offences and who have been convicted of offences, giving details of custodial sentences imposed, and separately for charges and convictions concerning murder, attempted murder, membership of illegal organisations, conspiracy to cause explosions, withholding information concerning terrorist activities, possession of explosives, possession of explosives with intent to cause bodily harm, possession of firearms, possession of firearms with intent to cause bodily harm and other offences classified as scheduled offences.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

ENERGY

North-West Leicestershire Coalfield

6. Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Energy what discussions he has held with the chairman of the Coal Board concerning the development of new pits in the north-west Leicestershire coalfield.

Mr. David Hunt: My right hon. Friend and I have regular meetings with the chairman of British Coal to discuss all aspects of the coal industry.

Energy Efficiency

13. Mr. Evans asked the Secretary of State for Energy what representations he has received from local authorities concerning his plans for spending on energy efficiency in 1987-88.

Mr. David Hunt: The Energy Efficiency Office has undertaken a programme of initiatives to help local authorities take cost-effective action on energy efficiency, and continues to offer a range of support and advice. I have received no specific representations from local authorities on my spending plans, though the energy efficiency office has regular discussions with local authorities and their representative groups.

Nuclear Power (North-West)

16. Mr. Favell asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the importance of nuclear power for employment in the north-west.

Mr. Goodlad: The nuclear industry is one of the region's biggest industrial employers. It is also amongst the region's biggest industrial investors and trainers. It makes a major contribution to the local economy.

Helium Gas-Cooled Reactor

18. Mr. Geraint Howells asked the Secretary of State for Energy what research has been carried out by the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority into the helium gas-cooled reactor; and at what cost in public expenditure.

Mr. Goodlad: The United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority carried out Research and Development in support of helium gas-cooled reactors, including their hosting of the multi-lateral DRAGON project, from 1954 until 1974 when it was decided not to build a commercial reactor of this design. The total cost of the AEA's work is estimated at £43 million. The AEA has continued to maintain a technical understanding of developments conducted in other countries.

Neighbourhood Energy Action Groups (Essex)

20. Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list the neighbourhood energy action groups operating in Essex.

Mr. David Hunt: The following 10 community insulation projects are operating in Essex:

Braintree Neighbourhood Energy Project
Brentwood DC Community Programme
Chelmsford Neighbourhood Energy Project
Epping Forest Neighbourhood Energy Project
Harlow Energy Action
NACRO Grays Energy Conservation Team
NACRO (Southend) Community Programme
Tendring Neighbourhood Energy Project
Tower Radio Homes Insulation Project
Uttlesford Neighbourhood Energy Project

Pit Visits

21. Dr. Michael Clark asked the Secretary of State for Energy how many pit visits have been made by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Wirral, West (Mr. Hunt) since September 1984; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: Since September 1984 I have made 30 visits to British Coal pits and other operations. I have also visited five pits and two opencast sites overseas.

CBI (Energy Committee)

23. Mr. Hannam asked the Secretary of State for Energy what discussions he has had recently with representatives of the Confederation of British Industries energy committee.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: My hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Energy met the energy policy committee of the Confederation of British Industries last December.

Home Insulation

24. Mr. Raynsford asked the Secretary of State for Energy, pursuant to the answer of 1 December, Official Report, columns 455-6, what is his estimate of the proportion of the 12·5 million homes inadequately insulated against draughts which are occupied by householders in receipt of state benefits; and what assessment he has made of the numbers of those who are unlikely to be able to meet the cost of draught-proofing without financial assistance.

Mr. David Hunt: About a third of the homes that are inadequately insulated against draughts are likely to be occupied by households in receipt of state benefits. It is not possible to estimate how many such households would be unable to meet the cost of draughtproofing without financial assistance.

Mr. Lord asked the Secretary of State for Energy what new measures he plans to take to increase the number of houses which are properly insulated.

Mr. David Hunt: As well as supporting the continuing expansion of the community insulation projects, which have already insulated over 300,000 homes, my Department continues actively to promote the cost-effective energy efficiency measures which all householders should take to benefit from reduced fuel bills.

British Coal Enterprise Ltd

25. Mr. Patchett asked the Secretary of State for Energy how many jobs have been created in the Barnsley, East constituency by British Coal Enterprise Ltd.

Mr. David Hunt: I regret that information is not available in the form requested. Total job opportunities created in Yorkshire by end-January 1987 were 2,375.

34. Mr. Ashby asked the Secretary of State for Energy how many jobs have been created by British Coal Enterprise Ltd. at the latest available date.

Mr. David Hunt: British Coal enterprise continues to make good progress. The £22·1 million committed by the company is now supporting 1,000 individual projects with a combined capital investment of £145 million, it has helped create nearly 14,000 new job opportunities.

Tidal Power

26. Mr. Stevens asked the Secretary of State for Energy what support his Department is giving to research and development of tidal power (a) this financial year and (b) in 1987-88.

Mr. David Hunt: In July last year my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced the launch of a major new phase in the United Kingdom's tidal programme, costing £5½ million. This includes advanced investigation into a Severn barrage on a line near to Cardiff and Weston costing £4·2 million, shared equally between the Department, CEGB and the Severn Tidal Power Group: studies into a Mersey Barrage proposed by the Mersey Barrage Company towards which the Department is contributing up to £400,000; and generic studies funded by the Department, including environmental issues, construction techniques and the potential of smaller sites around the United Kingdom. Work on the programme is spread over a number of years; budget provision this year is £0·3 million.

Power Generation

27. Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Energy whether he will publish his Department's most recent assessments of the cost of generating power by (a) nuclear, (b) coal, (c) wind, (d) tidal barrage and (e) wave means.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: My right hon. Friend is considering the assessments made by Sir Frank Layfield in his report on Sizewell B. It would be inappropriate for me to comment further at this stage.

Budget Payment Schemes

28. Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for Energy what information he has had as to what proportion of gas and electricity consumers make use of budget payments schemes.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: The electricity and gas industries each promote a range of budget schemes designed to even out bills and thus to help consumers plan payments and to avoid building up debts. I am advised that about 14 per cent. of domestic electricity consumers and about 22 per cent. of domestic gas consumers take advantage of such schemes.

Disconnections

29. Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Energy, if he will review the criteria whereby customers are disconnected for inability to pay their fuel bills.

Mr. Goodlad: No. The code of practice on disconnection is being operated satisfactorily by the electricity and gas industries.

Electricity Demand

30. Mr. Wrigglesworth asked the Secretary of State for Energy when he last met the chairman of the Central Electricity Generating Board; and if he discussed with him projections of energy demand into the 1990s.

Mr. Goodlad: I meet the chairman regularly and we discuss a wide range of issues. Information on demand forecasts by the Electricity Council was provided in my answer to the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Ashdown) on 12 December 1986 at column 242.

Sizewell B

31. Mr. Barron asked the Secretary of State for Energy if the design of the proposed Sizewell pressurised water reactor is now complete; and if his Department has made a final assessment of its safety.

Mr. Goodlad: In addition to the consent of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State the Central Electricity Generating Board requires a licence from the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate before it can begin to build the station. The inspectorate will satisfy itself about the safety of the design before it issues any licence. My right hon. Friend is considering Sir Frank Layfield's report and it would be inappropriate for me to comment on any of the matters covered by the report before he takes his decision on the CEGB's application to construct Sizewell B.

Mr. Roy Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Energy whether the computer programmes to control the Sizewell B reactor during an emergency shutdown were submitted to Sir Frank Layfield.

Mr. Goodlad: Evidence was taken at the inquiry on the systems which would control the reactor following a fault. Detailed computer programmes were not submitted.

Layfield Report

32. Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the supplementary note accompanying the Layfield report, which included comments on the accident at Chernobyl.

Mr. Goodlad: There is no such note.

British Coal (Productivity)

33. Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Energy what is the most recent figure for productivity in British Coal; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: For the week ending 31 January, average deep mined revenue output per manshift was 3·54 tonnes. Productivity is now recovering after a seasonal dip associated with the Christmas and new year holiday period and the subsequent severe weather.

Coal Sales

35. Mr. Haynes asked the Secretary of State for Energy when he last discussed coal sales to the Central Electricity Generating Board with the chairman of British Coal.

Mr. David Hunt: My right hon. Friend and I have regular meetings with the chairman of British Coal to discuss all aspects of the coal industry.

Electricity Supplies (France)

36. Mr. Madel asked the Secretary of State for Energy what contribution was made, during the period of severe weather in January, to the maintenance of electricity power supply in the United Kingdom by the supply of electricity from France.

Mr. Goodlad: Imports through the electricity link with France during the period of severe weather made a useful contribution to secure and economic supplies of electricity in the United Kingdom. On 12 January, the day of peak demand, electricity was exported to France which was experiencing difficulties with its own supply system because of the weather.

Central Electricity Generating Board

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Energy when his Department last had discussions with the Central Electricity Generating Board on the subject of local liaison committees in relation to his policy of commitment to openness; what are the present terms of reference for such committees; what information is available to his Department on whether these committees are open to the public; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: The terms of reference and membership of the committees are described in the booklet "The CEGB and nuclear power: Questions and Answers"; a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. I understand that the CEGB is developing further organisational proposals to put to the committees.

Plutonium

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Energy how much plutonium has been produced in Central Electricity Generating Board reactors in each year since 1979.

Mr. Goodlad: Information on the allocation or use of plutonium produced in the Magnox reactors of the United Kingdom generating boards was given in lines (a) and (b) of the table provided in the replies to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, Central (Sir A. Fletcher) on 1 April 1982, column 169; the hon. Member for Broxtowe (Mr. Lester) on 27 July 1983, column 483 and the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Mr. Thomas) on 25 July 1985, column 545, on 23 July 1985, column 473 and 21 July 1986, column 10.

Radiation Monitoring

Mr. Roy Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Energy why Wales is not included in emergency radiation monitoring plans for Hinckley Point nuclear power station; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: Emergency environmental monitoring points up to 40 km from the station have been identified, including some in Wales. In the unlikely event of an accident at the station resulting in significant releases of radioactivity, existing arrangements for environmental monitoring by the CEGB and Government Departments could readily be extended.

Sellafield (FACET)

Mr. Frank Cook asked the Secretary of State for Energy (1) how much the new capital project known as FACET (facility for enhancement throughput of fuels and pins) for Sellafield will cost; how it was approved; and whether he will make a statement;

(2) how many fast reactor stations the new facility for Sellafield known as FACET (facility for enhancement throughput of fuels and pins) is expected to service; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: The facility for enhanced throughput for experimental fast reactor fuel (FACET) is a laboratory scale manufacturing plant being constructed by the UKAEA as part of the Research and Development programme on fast reactor fuel development. When complete in 1988, it will enable the UKAEA to manufacture experimental fuel of advanced designs for evaluation in the Prototype Fast Reactor at Dounreay. It will have the capability to manufacture up to eight sub-assemblies a year. The scheme is expected to cost £2·7 million and was approved under the programme letter arrangements that I described on 21 January 1986 at column 217-218.

Nuclear Power Stations

Mr. Roy Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if he is planning any initiatives to improve communication between the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate and the Central Electricity Generating Board;

(2) if he is planning any initiatives to review the division of responsibility between the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate and the Central Electricity Generating Board for the managing and programming of the licensing process for nuclear power stations; and what is his policy towards the identification of a single agency with overall control of the licensing process.

Mr. Goodlad: Matters concerning the management of the licensing process were considered by Sir Frank Layfield in his report on Sizewell B. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has a quasi-judicial role in the planning process and it would be inappropriate for me to comment on any issues raised in the Report.

Energy Managers

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Energy what further savings he estimates could be made by (a) local authorities and (b) industry through the appointment of full-time energy managers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: The Audit Commission advised local authorities that to achieve potential savings which they estimated at at least £135 million a year, central staff effort of about one person per £1 million energy spend would be cost-effective. The Commission has reported an encouraging response to this recommendation. Energy managers both full and part time have a vital role to play in achieving the further £1·4 billion of energy savings that could be achieved by British industry. It is not necessarily cost-effective for organisations of all sizes to appoint a full-time energy manager but all organisations should have a manager whose responsibilities include energy management.

Coal Imports

Mr. Orme asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will take steps to stop imports of coal from South Africa in line with Her Majesty's Government's support in the European Council for an embargo on such imports; what information he has as to subsequent action by France and Denmark; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: At a meeting of Foreign Ministers of the Twelve, on 15-16 September 1986, it was agreed to impose a ban on new investment, imports of gold coins and of iron and steel. No agreement was reached to ban coal imports. The action taken by France and Denmark pre-dated the European decision.

Energy Requirements

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Energy what are the latest estimates of British energy requirements by the year 2000 and 2010, respectively.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: In general my Department does not produce such estimates. However the eight projections presented to the Sizewell B public inquiry depict a wide range of possible future levels for United Kingdom energy requirements in these years.

Nuclear Installations Inspectorate

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Energy, further to his reply to the hon. Member for Yeovil on 19 December, Official Report, column 764, how many Nuclear Installation Inspectorate inspectors have been engaged full-time on each review at all times since March 1983; what other duties have been undertaken by inspectors working on these reviews; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad [pursuant to his reply, 19 January 1987, at c. 402-3]: I am advised by Her Majesty's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate of the Health and Safety Executive that none of its inspectors has worked exclusively on the Magnox long-term safety reviews.

The equivalent of about one man year per year was devoted to the reviews during 1983 and 1984 but this group effort has gradually increased to about six man years per year at the present time. Those inspectors concerned with the reviews have also been engaged generally in safety assessment work on the commissioning and operating of gas-cooled reactors.

CIVIL SERVICE

Official Forms

85. Sir David Price asked the Minister for the Civil Service whether he will ensure that on all official forms for use by the public adequate space is allowed for completion by members of the public with normal sized hand-writing.

Mr. Luce: Since 1982, standards of good practice have been available to all Departments and are reflected in departmental handbooks such as DHSS's "Good Forms Guide", and MOD's forms design worksheets. Departments are free to use their discretion in applying the recommended standards, but my Department continues to monitor, guide and encourage their efforts on this as on all other aspects of forms work.

Departmental Telephone Numbers

Mr. Maxwell-Hyslop asked the Minister for the Civil Service whether the 1987 edition of the Civil Service year book will give the currently correct telephone numbers, where these were altered in autumn 1986; and when the 1987 edition will be available.

Mr. Luce: The 1987 edition of the Civil Service year book was published recently and copies have been placed in the Library. The telephone numbers which were changed as a result of the introduction of the new exchange last autumn have been amended.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Parliamentary Papers (Availability)

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Lord Privy Seal if he will ensure that parliamentary papers and statements are made available in the Norman Shaw, North issue office at the same time as the main Vote Office; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Biffen: All parliamentary papers are made available in the Norman Shaw North issue office and the main Vote Office at the same time when there is no time embargo on the papers.

If papers and statements are held under a time embargo on a Minister's instruction, they are kept in a sealed packet in the main Vote Office. As soon as the papers are released, a supply is sent immediately to the Norman Shaw North issue office.

Norman Shaw, North Building (Photocopying Machines)

Mr. Frank Field asked the Lord Privy Seal if he will detail the current cost of photocopying machines in the Norman Shaw North building; and if he will break down this total into (a) rent and (b) other costs; and if he will state on how many days during the last year each of the machines was fully working during the entire working day.

Mr. Biffen: The current total monthly hire charge for photocopying machines provided for the use of hon. Members in the Norman Shaw North building, which includes maintenance and consumables other than paper, is £661·51 plus a sum dependent on the number of copies made on each machine. No other costs are separately identifiable.

For the 12-month period ending 31 January 1987 the number of days for each machine on which there is no record of repair or attention being required is as follows:

	Days
Lower Ground Floor	353
Ground Floor	350
First Floor	355
Second Floor	350
Fourth Floor
small machine	333
large machine	348

Parliamentary Pension Scheme

Mr. David Howell asked the Lord Privy Seal whether he proposes to bring forward any changes to the parliamentary pension scheme to enable right hon. and hon. Members to take advantage of personal portable pensions.

Mr. Biffen: I will be proposing amendments to the parliamentary pension scheme so that membership will no longer be compulsory for right hon. and hon. Members, in order to comply with the requirements of section 15 of the Social Security Act 1986. This will enable Members to participate in personal pension arrangements, if they so wish, instead of the parliamentary scheme.

I expect to bring forward these amendments in time for them to take effect when section 15 of the Social Security Act 1986 comes into force.

THE ARTS

Museums (Visits)

39. Mr. David Young asked the Minister for the Arts what plans he has to promote visits to museums by school pupils and students.

67. Mr. George Howarth asked the Minister for the Arts what plans he has to promote visits to museums by school pupils and students.

Mr. Luce: Museums have an important educational contribution to make. The national museums and galleries promote educational visits by providing special facilities literature and exhibits. The advent of the GCSE examination, with its increased emphasis on practical and field work, presents museums with an exciting challenge which they are seeking actively to meet.

Arts Council Education Department

42. Mr. Sedgemore asked the Minister for the Arts whether he has met the chairman of the Arts Council to discuss the role of the Arts Council's education department in the development of arts policy.

Mr. Luce: Not specifically, but the chairman keeps me fully informed about the council's policies. I have visited the education unit and was able to discuss the subject with the staff there.

Library Authorities (Funding)

43. Mr. Hayes asked the Minister for the Arts whether library authorities are making full use of additional sources of public funding available.

Mr. Luce: Depending on their circumstances, library authorities may be eligible for funding from the Manpower Services Commission, the urban programme, the European Community or the Home Office. The evidence is that most authorities pursue these possibilities energetically.

Public Library Service

44. Mr. Frank Cook asked the Minister for the Arts when he last met the Library Association to discuss the future of the Public Library Service.

53. Mr. Barron asked the Minister for the Arts when he last met the Library Association to discuss the future of the Public Library Service.

Mr. Luce: I last met a delegation from the Library Association on 13 January 1986. I have since met and corresponded with individual officers of the Association on a number of occasions.

North-West

45. Mr. Pike asked the Minister for the Arts what plans he has for developing arts provision in the north-west.

Mr. Eastham asked the Minister for the Arts what plans he has for developing arts provision in the north-west.

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Minister for the Arts what plans he has for developing arts provision in the north-west.

Mr. Luce: The Arts Council gives some £2 million per annum to the Regional Arts Association and over £3 million per annum direct funding to major bodies. These are substantial contributions to development.

52. Mr. Stott asked the Minister for the Arts whether he will pay an official visit to the Drumcroon arts centre in Wigan to discuss the role of North-West Arts in promoting arts education.

Mr. Luce: I am to visit the north-west in the spring and, if the timetable permits, I hope to visit the Drumcroon arts centre. I expect to discuss arts policy issued with North-West Arts during my visit.

Charitable Giving

46. Mr. Alan Howarth asked the Minister for the Arts what is his assessment of the benefit to the Arts resulting from the tax concessions on charitable giving made in the Finance Act 1986.

Mr. Luce: I believe that there is great scope for the arts to take advantage of the concessions in the Finace Act 1986 relating to payroll giving by employees and one-off donations by companies for charitable purposes. It is too early yet to estimate the actual benefits.

Leadmill, Sheffield

47. Mr. Michie asked the Minister for the Arts whether he will pay an official visist to the Leadmill in Sheffield to discuss the development of young musicians.

Mr. Luce: I expect to visit the Leadmill at the end of this month, and to see what is being done there to help young musicians.

Arts Marketing Scheme

48. Mr. Patrick Thompson asked the Minister for the Arts by what date applications are due for his arts marketing scheme.

Mr. Luce: Applications must reach the Office of Arts and Libraries by 30 April 1987.

Employment

49. Mr. Fatchett asked the Minister for the Arts whether he will undertake a study of the impact of the arts on employment.

70. Mr. Blair asked the Minister for the Arts whether he will undertake a study of the impact of the arts on employment.

71. Ms. Richardson asked the Minister for the Arts whether he will undertake a study of the impact of the arts on employment.

75. Mrs. Beckett asked the Minister for the Arts whether he will undertake a study of the impact of the arts on employment.

Mr. Luce: I would refer the hon. Members to my reply earlier today to the question from the hon. Member for Sheffield, Central (Mr. Caborn).

Merseyside

50. Mr. Loyden asked the Minister for the Arts whether he will undertake a study of the impact of the arts on the economy of Merseyside.

61. Mr. Wareing asked the Minister for the Arts whether he will undertake a study of the economic impact of the arts on Merseyside.

Mr. Luce: The Policy Studies Institute is carrying out a study of the economic importance of the arts, including a regional study of Merseyside. The Merseyside work has already been completed and the findings will be published, together with those of the larger study, later in the year.

Association of Metropolitan Authorities

51. Mr. Allen McKay asked the Minister for the Arts when he last met the Association of Metropolitan Authorities to discuss arts policy.

82. Mr. Straw asked the Minister for the Arts when he last met with Association of Metropolitan Authorities to discuss arts policy.

Mr. Luce: I met the Association of Metropolitan Authorities on 17 November 1986, and hope to meet it again in March.

National Collections

54. Sir David Price asked the Minister for the Arts what steps he has taken to ensure that the buildings which house the national collections are adequate for the task.

Mr. Luce: The Government have made a deliberate shift of emphasis, within the sums made available for the national collections, towards the maintenance and improvement of the museum and gallery buildings. The allocation that I recently announced for 1987-88 represents an increase in real terms of more than 30 per cent. over the allocation in 1979-80. The Government also encourage, and greatly welcome, donations from the private sector towards the refurbishment and expansion of national museum and gallery buildings.

I announced in July of last year that, from 1988-89, the national museums and galleries for which I am responsible will no longer be tied to the Property Services Agency but will become responsible for their own buildings and will be funded accordingly. This change has been welcomed by all the institutions concerned and I am pleased by the way they are working towards taking on these new responsibilities.

Sherman Theatre, Cardiff

55. Mr. Ron Davies asked the Minister for the Arts what representations he has received about the future of the Sherman theatre, Cardiff.

Mr. Luce: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member from Gower (Mr. Wardell).

Regional Orchestras

57. Mr. Stan Thorne asked the Minister for the Arts if he has any plans to increase financial support for regional orchestras.

Mr. Luce: Funding of regional orchestras is a matter for the Arts Council. I understand that it has not yet announced the 1987-88 allocations.

Regional Arts Strategies

58. Mr. Dixon asked the Minister for the Arts what discussions he has had with regional art associations about the role that arts centres can play in regional arts strategies.

60. Mr. Jim Callaghan asked the Minister for the Arts what discussions he has had with regional art associations about the role that arts centres can play in regional arts strategies.

68. Mr. Redmond asked the Minister for the Arts what discussions he has had with regional art associations about the role that arts centres can play in regional arts strategies.

73. Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Minister for the Arts what discussions he has had with regional art associations about the role that arts centres can play in regional arts strategies.

78. Mr. Seán Hughes asked the Minister for the Arts what discussions he has had with regional art associations about the role that arts centres can play in regional arts strategies.

Mr. Luce: I have now visited a number of regional arts associations and have discussed the role of arts centres with them.

Local Authority Theatres

59. Mr. Hayward asked the Minister for the Arts, whether he will encourage fuller partnership between local authority owned theatres and the commercial sector.

Mr. Luce: It is not for me to tell local authorities how to run their affairs, but I am keenly interested in any ideas for the efficient management of arts enterprises. I know of successful examples of such partnerships, and I should like there to be more.

Works of Art (Storage)

62. Mr. Heathcoat-Amory asked the Minister for the Arts if he has an inventory of objects and works of art in storage in the national collections.

Mr. Luce: The cataloguing of collections is carried out by the individual museums and galleries and inventories are not held centrally. I encourage the national museums and galleries to maintain full inventories of their collections wherever practicable. The increasing use of computerised records greatly facilitates this task.

Sponsorship

63. Mr. Freud asked the Minister for the Arts what discussions he has had with the tobacco industry in respect of arts sponsorship.

Mr. Luce: None; I regard it as a matter for the arts organisations to decide what sponsorship to accept.

Scottish Arts Council

64. Dr. Godman asked the Minister for the Arts, when he last met the chairman of the Scottish Arts Council to discuss the future of the arts in Scotland.

77. Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Minister for the Arts when he last met the Scottish Arts Council to discuss the future of the arts in Scotland.

Mr. Luce: I last met the chairman of the Scottish Arts Council on 13 August 1986 when I visited the Edinburgh festival.

News International

65. Mr. Greenway asked the Minister for the Arts, pursuant to his reply of 26 January, Official Report, column 76, if he will place in the Library a copy of his letter to the Audit Commission regarding the legal costs of Ealing, Camden and Hammersmith and Fulham councils concerning their ban on The Times, The Sun and other News International publications; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: I have placed in the Library a copy of my letter to the Audit Commission of 24 November 1986.

Economic Impact

66. Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts whether he will undertake a study of the economic impact of the arts.

72. Mr. Robert Sheldon asked the Minister for the Arts whether he will undertake a study of the economic impact of the arts.

76. Dr. McDonald asked the Minister for the Arts whether he will undertake a study of the economic impact of the arts.

Mr. Luce: The Policy Studies Institute is currently carrying out a study of the economic importance of the arts, funded from a variety of sources including the Gulbenkian Foundation and my office. The results will be published later this year.

Films

69. Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Minister for the Arts when he last visited the British Film Institute to discuss the role of films in Her Majesty's Government's policy for the arts.

Mr. Luce: I visited the British Film Institute on 5 December 1985, and discussed film policy. I also hope to attend a meeting of the governors of the BFI in the summer.

Sponsorship

74. Mr. Gerald Bowden asked the Minister for the Arts what is his latest estimate of new money for the arts arising from the operation of the business sponsorship incentive scheme.

Mr. Luce: This scheme continues to be highly successful. I announced the latest list of 48 awards on 26 January, bringing the total of new money for the arts under the scheme to £11·12 million. 400 businesses have sponsored the arts for the first time.

Young Musicians

79. Mr. Crowther asked the Minister for the Arts what steps he intends to take to encourage young musicians.

Mr. Luce: The education of young musicians is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Science, but the Arts Council funds a number of bursaries and traineeships for practising professional musicians. I gave a reception for young artists of every kind on 6 January, and I was very pleased to meet a number of young singers and players on that occasion.

Acceptances in Lieu

80. Mr. Rowe asked the Minister for the Arts if he has any plans to increase the publicity given to acceptance-in-lieu arrangements.

Mr. Luce: Replies to written parliamentary questions publicise individual acceptances and decisions on allocations as and when they occur; six-monthly summaries are also given. A new leaflet is also in preparation which will describe the present arrangements and supplement the information already available.

Loans (Indemnity)

81. Mr. Hannam asked the Minister for the Arts if he has any plans to change the arrangements for indemnity for loans by local authority museums and galleries.

Mr. Luce: Not at present. Indemnities for loans by local authority museums and galleries are granted under the National Heritage Act 1980. Guidelines on the scheme, which is administered by the Museums and Galleries Commission, were issued by the Office of Arts and Libraries in March 1985.

Area Museum Councils

83. Mrs. Renée Short asked the Minister for the Arts why the grants due to the area museum councils for 1985-86 were paid late.

Mr. Corbett asked the Minister for the Arts for what reasons grant aid has not been paid to area museum councils for more than 12 months; and when it is expected that payment will now be made.

Mr. Luce: I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Birmingham, Hodge Hill (Mr. Davis) on 13 February 1987.

Mr. Corbett asked the Minister for the Arts whether he will list, by each area museum council, the amount of grant last paid, grant outstanding for 1985-86 and grant due for 1986-87; and whether that has yet been paid.

Mr. Luce: The amount of grant allocated to the seven English area museum councils in 1985-86 and 1986-87, and the payments made to date, are as follows:

	1986-87		1985-86
AMC	Allocation	Payments	Allocation	Payments	Outstanding
North	209,850	209,850	208,100	190,758·37	17,341·63
North West	407,900	407,900	414,000	379,500·00	34,500·00
Yorkshire and Humberside	420,200	420,200	424,800	389,400·00	35,400·00
West Midlands	225,900	225,900	222,750	204,187·50	18,562·50
East Midlands	149,050	149,050	136,750	125,354·13	11,395·87
South West	316,950	316,950	319,950	293,287·50	26,662·50
South East	548,750	548,750	467,650	428,679·13	38,920·87

I have made arrangements to pay a proportion of the outstanding payments at once, and the balance on 1 April of this year.

Public Libraries (Political Material)

Mr. Cartwright asked the Minister for the Arts what consultations he is having with representatives of library interests in discharge of his functions under section 1 of the Public Libraries and Museums Act 1964, to ensure that the Government's proposed code of practice under section 4 of the Local Government Act 1986 does not inhibit the provision of a comprehensive service of political manifestos and other politically related material by public libraries.

Mr. Luce: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Association of County Councils

Mr. Skinner asked the Minister for the Arts when he last met the Association of County Councils to discuss the impact of arts policy on local communities.

Mr. Luce: I have not met the Association of County Councils, but shall be happy to do so if it would like. I have of course discussed arts policy with members and officials of various county councils.

Greater London Council

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts if he will list the additional functions and responsibilities undertaken by his Department of a temporary or permanent kind as a result of the abolition of the Greater London Council, stating the total estimated cost to public funds in 1986-87 and the total number of officials involved.

Mr. Luce: None, apart from attendance at meetings of the South Bank board by an official from my office, at an estimated staff time cost of £310 in 1986-87.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Commodity Prices

Mr. Deakins asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the annual change in common agricultural policy guarantee prices for cereals, beef and milk between 1980-81 and the current marketing year.

Mr. Gummer: The information requested was included in a note giving details of the "Common Agricultural Policy prices settlement 1986-87", a copy of which was deposited in the Library of the House in May 1986.

Agricultural Land

Mr. Colvin asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will ensure that the proposals contained in all the policy documents referred to in his statement to the House on agricultural land on Monday 9 February are published in a single comprehensive Green Paper, in order to ensure the widest possible awareness of all the issues involved.

Mr. Jopling: The Government intend to issue together next month a comprehensive set of documents on their policies for agriculture and rural development.

Mr. Colvin asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, when he intends to publish the findings of his Department's alternative land use and a rural environment study.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The Government's conclusions were set out in the statements which my right hon. Friends the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Secretary of State for the Environment made to the House last week.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if farm buildings ancillary to farming operations which are changed to other uses in consequence of his statement of 9 February will be subject to local authority rating; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: I have been asked to reply.

The present exemption from rating relates only to those buildings (other than dwellings) which are occupied together with agricultural land and are used solely in connection with agricultural operations on that land. Where there is a change of use and a building is no longer used in this way it will be rated normally.

Beef

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will take steps to encourage the export of poor quality beef becoming available when the EEC milk package is implemented.

Mr. Gummer: Export refunds are payable on beef exported to a wide range of third countries. As it is not eligible for payment of the beef variable premium, cow beef continues to be exempt from clawback. The 6 per cent. devaluation of the green pound agreed in December has helped the competitive position of all United Kingdom beef exports.

Quantity Measurement

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has had any discussions with his partners in the European Economic Community on the introduction of national standard committees for quantity measurement through the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: No.

Milk (Inspection Charges)

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from milk producers in respect of the proposed public health inspection charges; and how he intends to respond.

Mr. Gummer: Detailed proposals for regulations on charges for work in connection with milk and dairies regulations were issued to interested organisations for comments on 4 December. A number have responded including the National Farmers' Union, the Farmers' Union of Wales and the Milk Marketing Board. We have also received representations from, and on behalf of, a number of individual milk producers including a petition from members of the Isle of Wight branch of the NFU. We have been considering the final form of the regulations in the light of these comments and representations and expect to lay the statutory instrument before Parliament very shortly.

CAP

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received questioning the objectives of the European Economic Community, through the common agricultural policy, of continuing to aim for European self-sufficiency in foodstuffs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The objectives of the Common Agricultural Policy, which are set out in Article 39 of the Treaty of Rome, make no reference to self-sufficiency. I frequently receive representations from a wide range of sources on CAP matters.

Surplus Butter

Mr. Beith asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has any plans to make surplus butter available at reduced cost to retirement pensioners not in receipt of non-contributory social security benefit.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Improvement Scheme Applications

Mr. John asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how many agriculture improvement scheme applications have been approved since the commencement of the scheme;

(2) how many agriculture improvement scheme applications have been rejected since the commencement of the scheme;

(3) how many rejected agriculture improvement scheme applications were connected with (a) the ADAS drainage design service and (b) independent applicants;

(4) how many agricultural improvement scheme applications have included land drainage operations as part or whole of the plan.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Field Drainage Design Service

Mr. John asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what income was generated by ADAS from the field drainage design service from October 1985 to October 1986;

(2) what proportion of income generated by ADAS from the field drainage design service derives from agricultural clients.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Greater London

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the action he has taken since the abolition of the Greater London council to ensure that the functions and responsibilities of his Department and its related non-departmental public bodies dealing with the Greater London area are co-ordinated with each other.

Mr. Jopling: My Department and its related non-departmental public bodies consult on matters of mutual concern.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the additional functions and responsibilities undertaken by his Department of a temporary or permanent kind as a result of the abolition of the Greater London council, stating the total estimated cost to public funds in 1986-87 and the total number of officials involved.

Mr. Jopling: There has been no change in the work of my Department following the abolition of the Greater London council.

Food Aid

Mr. John asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those commodities available in the United Kingdom for distribution under the European Economic Community food aid scheme which are not being distributed; and if he will give the reasons therefor.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Low-input Farming

Mr. John asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish the results of the experiments on low-input farming conducted at Boxworth experimental husbandry farm; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Botulism

Mr. Hickmet asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will make botulism a notifiable disease when contracted (a) by horses or (b) by other livestock; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will seek to obtain the articles about botulism in horses and other livestock by the veterinary surgeon Mr. Ricketts of Newmarket and published in recent months in the Veterinary Recorder and elsewhere; and if he will make a statement.

(3) if he has any information as to why Westway and Sons has withdrawn 4,000 bales of Horse Hage and offered to buy back Horse Hage supplied to horse owners; and if he will reconsider his decision not to advise the feed merchant and horseowners about this matter;

(4) what representations he has received concerning the supply in Devon and Cornwall of Horse Hage fodder by Westway and Sons; what information he has received that such fodder is or may be a cause of botulism in horses; what action he has taken as a result; and if he will make a statement;

(5) further to his reply of Thursday 12 February 1987, what information he has as to how much time both horses which were destroyed spent stabled at Widecombe-in-the-Moor;

(6) if, in the light of information supplied to him by the hon. Member for Glanford and Scunthorpe, he has anything to add to his answer of 12 February on another horse alleged to have eaten the same fodder as the horses which died;

(7) further to his reply of 12 February 1987, whether any horses have died as a result of contracting botulism which have not been recorded by his Department's laboratories;

(8) what has been the incidence of botulism amongst livestock since the introduction of big bale silage; what is the difference between the big bale silage and Horse Hage; and if he will make a statement;

(9) if his Department's veterinary investigation service will make investigations into whether the cause of death on 1 December 1986 of the horse Gamble, stabled at Ponsworthy in Devon, was botulism.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Forestry

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what consideration he has given to the report by the Comptroller and Auditor General on forestry and the implications of expanding tree planting; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: I have been asked to reply.

I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Solihull (Mr. Taylor) on 11 February 1987 at columns 299-300.

Suckler Cow Premium

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Devon, North, Official Report, 29 January, column 338, if he is now in a position to announce the rate at which the suckler cow premium will be paid; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 9 February 1987, c. 42]: We shall announce the rate of suckler cow premium for this year as soon as a decision has been taken.

Green Pound

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he proposes to request the European Economic Community for a further reduction in the green pound at an early date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 9 February 1987, c. 42]: We are considering what action to take on the level of the green pound in the context of the forthcoming price-fixing.

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will indicate the percentage gap in the green pound in a comparison between the United Kingdom and the Republic of Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 9 February 1987, c. 42]: Agricultural prices, set in ecu are converted into national currencies using green rates (the green pound in the case of the United Kingdom and the green punt in the case of the Republic of Ireland). For each member state's currency, the difference between the green rates and the market rate against the ecu (the real monetary gap) is expressed as a percentage of the former.

The real monetary gaps applying in the United Kingdom and the Republic of Ireland in the week beginning 9 February 1987 are as follows:

Sector	United Kingdom	Republic of Ireland
	Per cent.	Per cent.
Beef	−26·005	−5·777
Milk	−32·462	−5·777
Pigmeat	−28·732	−5·777
Cereals Sugar	−34·286	−10·546

Beef

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any plans to make adjustments on the exports of cull beef which could assist the farming industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 9 February 1987, c. 42]: When reforms of the milk regime were agreed in December, the Council of Agriculture Ministers recognised that consequent cow cullings would put pressure on the beef market. The Commission has accordingly allocated 435 mecu to provide for suitable market management measures to be adopted over the next two years.

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will ensure that any surplus beef which may be produced following the period of the EEC milk package does not go into intervention; and what plans he has for the disposal of the surplus.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 11 February 1987, c. 287]: Beef from cull cows from the dairy herd is not eligible for intervention. It can meet the needs of a range of market requirements including processing and some export outlets.

Pork

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the imbalance of imports of pork in cash terms from the Dutch producers as against the price which can be obtained in the market by United Kingdom producers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 9 February 1987, c. 42]: Imports of fresh pork into the United Kingdom from the Netherlands are prohibited for animal health reasons.

Quotas

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any plans to introduce quotas for other agricultural products; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 11 February 1987, c. 288]: Quotas are inflexible. They inhibit enterprise and the rational development of the industry. We have no plans to promote them.

Milk Quotas

Mr. McLoughlin asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farms in the United Kingdom have milk quotas (a) over 2 million litres, (b) between 1,999,999 litres and 750,000 litres, (c) between 749,999 litres and 500,000 litres, (d) between 499,999 litres and 300,000 litres, (e) between 299,999 litres and 200,000 litres and (f) under 200,000 litres, respectively.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 12 February 1987]: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Grey Seals

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) whether his Department accepts the conclusions of the Natural Environment Research Council report, "Interactions between Grey Seals and United Nations Fisheries", published in 1984; what research is currently being carried out on interactions between grey seals and fisheries by his Department; and if he will make a statement;

(2) by whom, and where, research projects funded by his Department on (a) the ecology of the grey seal or (b) interactions between grey seals and commercial fisheries, are being carried out; and over what period of time in each case.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 9 February 1987, c. 41]: The report suggests a cautionary approach to the interpretation of the findings because of the complex nature of the questions addressed, with consequent difficulty in arriving at firm conclusions. My Department accepts the report as contributing to the fund of knowledge in this area. As part of the MAFF and DAFS joint external research funding arrangements my Department contributes to the seals research programme of the Sea Mammal Research Unit. This continuing programme covers ecology and fisheries interaction. In addition my Department is funding a survey conducted by Hull university to investigage the scale and cost of seal predation in the fixed net fishery off the north-east coast of England. This is being conducted in two stages, the first stage in relation to the cod fishery has been concluded and a report is in preparation and the second stage concerning the salmon fishery is expected to begin in July this year.

DEFENCE

DROPS

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list the visits specifically to discuss the demountable rack off-loading pick-up system made to each of the companies he has listed as being involved in his Department's demountable rack off-loading pick-up system programme between 1975 and 1982 by the following Ministry of Defence senior officers involved in DROPS (a) VCGS, (b) QMG, (c) VQMG, (d) DGTM, (e) D of Q (Org & Dev) and (f) DAP(A); and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will list the visits specifically to discuss DROPS made to the companies he has listed as being involved in his Department's programme between 1975 and 1982 by his Department's trials and concepts officers working on DROPS between 1975 and 1982; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he can provide an estimate for the number of visits made by representatives of the companies he has listed as having been involved in DROPS between 1975 and 1982 to any of his Department's establishments to discuss DROPS in each of the years 1975 to 1982; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: This information cannot be provided since there is no record of all such visits between 1975 and 1982.

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence if any member of his Department's procurement executive visited any of the companies involved in DROPS in order to discuss DROPS prior to formal tasking of MOD(PE) in 1982; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Staff of the procurement executive are required to maintain constant contact with firms in the motor vehicle and associated industries in the normal course of their work. Detailed records recording every visit and conversation which occurred in 1982 in this way are not available. There is, however, a record of a visit paid by the then project manager for B vehicle procurement to Boughton's in the spring of 1982, which advised it of the forthcoming competition.

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will say which of those companies he has identified as having been involved in his Department's DROPS researches between 1975 and 1982 participated, except as exhibitors of Boughton's DROPS equipment, in any of the British Army equipment exhibitions held between 1975 and 1982 or in any of his Department's overseas exhibitions held between 1975 and 1982; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Of the companies listed in my reply of 16 December, only Foden and the Boughton Group participated in exhibitions sponsored by the Ministry of Defence during the period mentioned.

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will say which of those companies he has identified as being involved in his Department's DROPS research between 1975 and 1982 provided in that period any equipment on free loan to his Department over any protracted period; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There is no record of any equipment having been provided on free loan for any protracted period between 1975 and 1982 by any of the companies referred to as part of the Department's consideration of bulk load handling concepts.

NATO-Warsaw Pact (Conventional Forces)

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has as to the view of other North Atlantic Treaty Organisation countries of the correct way to assess the imbalance of conventional forces between the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation and the Warsaw Pact.

Mr. Stanley: NATO published a booklet entitled "Force Comparisons" in 1984 which describes the methodology for counting force levels and equipment. The United States publication "Soviet Military Power 1986" and the 1985 FRG White Paper "The Situation and Development of the Federal Armed Forces" follow this procedure, which is also the basis for our own comparisons of NATO and Warsaw Pact forces described in annex A to "The Statement on the Defence Estimates 1986" (Cmnd. 9763-I).

Chief Fire Officer, South Yorkshire

Mr. Redmond asked the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his reply of Monday 2 February, Official Report, column 516, if he will list the dates that he has met the chief fire officer of South Yorkshire in London or his South Yorkshire headquarters in the past three years.

Mr. Stanley: My right hon. Friend has not had any meetings with the chief fire officer of South Yorkshire since he has been Secretary of State for Defence, nor so far as we are aware did his predecessor my right hon. Friend the Member for Henley (Mr. Heseltine).

Bofors Gun

Mr. O'Neill asked the Secretary of State for Defence which Royal Navy vessels are currently fitted with the Bofors light gun.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The following classes of Royal Navy vessels are either fitted with or are fitted to receive the Bofors 40/60 gun:

Frigates/Destroyers
- Type 22 Batches 1 and 2
- Leander Batch 1

Mine Warfare Forces
- ABDIEL
- TON Class MSC/MHC
- HUNT Class MHSC
- RIVER Class MSF

Amphibious Forces
- LPD

Patrol Forces
- CASTLE Class OPV
- ISLAND Class OPV
- BIRD Class

Mr. O'Neill asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many new light guns have been ordered by the Royal Navy as replacements for the Bofors gun.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: To date 25 30mm replacement small calibre guns have been ordered by the Royal Navy.

Tigerfish Torpedo

Mr. O'Neill asked the Secretary of State for Defence what steps were taken by his Department to improve the management of the Tigerfish torpedo project.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We brought the management of the Tigerfish torpedo weapon system under the unified control of a single MOD authority and a single system contractor.

Spearfish Torpedo

Mr. O'Neill asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he plans to make changes in the management of the Spearfish project.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No, I do not plan to make any changes to the management of the Spearfish project.

Mr. O'Neill asked the Secretary of State for Defence what problems there have been with the procurement of Spearfish.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There have been some problems in the development of Spearfish, but these have not been any greater than we would have expected in such a complex and difficult period. I cannot go into technical details for reasons of national security and commercial sensitivity.

Mr. O'Neill asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many departments at his Department are responsible for managing the Spearfish project.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: One department in my Ministry is responsible for managing the Spearfish project.

Mr. O'Neill asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the Spearfish torpedo to enter Royal Navy service.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I expect the Spearfish torpedo to enter service by 1989.

Pilots

Mr. O'Neill asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the ratio of pilots currently engaged in flying duties to aircraft in the Fleet Air Arm.

Mr. Freeman: Approximately 1·6:1.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the ratio of pilots currently engaged in flying duties to aircraft in the Royal Air Force.

Mr. Freeman: Approximately 1·7:1.

Self-propelled Howitzer

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for a replacement 155mm self-propelled howitzer.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Further to my statement to the House on 13 January at column 230, a request for quotations has been issued to three United Kingdom and one United States firms to seek a replacement for the 105mm Abbot gun. National armament directors will continue to explore the possibilities of continued collaboration for requirements in the longer term.

Experimental Aircraft

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department plans to provide further funding for the experimental aircraft project.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is intended that any further funding of the experimental aircraft programme by the Ministry of Defence should be through the collaborative European fighter aircraft programme. We are currently discussing with our EFA partners how EAP should be used in this context.

ALARM

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what delays there have been with the air-launched anti-radiation missile;

(2) when he expects the air-launched anti-radiation missile to enter Royal Air Force service.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There have been delays as a result of the difficulties experienced with the rocket motor in the development stage of the project. The Department is studying with the prime contractor, British Aerospace, the implications for the programme.

Defence Projects

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Defence if, pursuant to his answer of 4 February, Official Report, column 716, about notification of defence projects, the National Audit Office was informed before 7 October 1986 of each defence project since 1983 which would have been included in the major project statement to the Public Accounts Committee but for considerations of national security, where the project was expected to exceed £250 million.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Yes.

Procurement Policy

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence what was his Department's total procurement expenditure in each year since 1979; and how much was spent in the following regions in England: (a) West Yorkshire and Humberside, (b) the east midlands, (c) the west midlands, (d) East Anglia, (e) the south-west, (f) the south-east and (g) the north-west and in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Ministry's equipment procurement expenditure in each financial year since 1979-80 is as follows:

	£ million
1979-80	4,017
1980-81	5,324
1981-82	6,121
1982-83	6,815
1983-84	7,504
1984-85	8,573
1985-86	8,979

Estimates of equipment expenditure by region are only available from 1983-84. Figures, to the nearest £0·1 billion, for the areas specified are as follows:

£ billion

	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86
Yorkshire and Humberside[1]	0·1	0·2	0·2
East Midlands	0·3	0·3	0·3
West Midlands	0·2	0·3	0·3
East Anglia	0·2	0·2	0·2
South West	0·9	0·8	0·9
South East	3·2	3·5	3·8
North West	1·0	1·1	1·0
Scotland	0·4	0·4	0·4
Wales	0·1	0·1	0·2
Northern Ireland	0·1	—	0·1

— less than £50 million.
[1] Figures for West Yorkshire and Humberside are not available.

Orbital Slots

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the answer on 9 February, Official Report, column 106, why he will not list all orbital slots filed by his Department at the International Telecommunications Union.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I am now advised that it is possible to provide the information requested by the hon. Gentleman and I regret that this was not done in response to his earlier question. The Department of Trade and Industry, which is responsible for requesting orbital slots for British satellites from the International Telecommuncations Union, has filed the following slots on behalf of the Ministry of Defence: 1 deg. West, 6 deg. East, 53 deg. East and 33 deg. West.

Blackburn ROF

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for Defence which companies have paid visits to the Blackburn Royal Ordnance factory with a view to its purchase; and on what dates.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The information requested is as follows:

	Dates
Trafalgar House	14 January 1987
British Aerospace	15 January 1987
GKN	29 January 1987
Ferranti	4 February 1987

RAF Mount Batten

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will outline the practical advantages in training which led to his decision to establish a tri-service defence training establishment at Royal Air Force Mount Batten; and what facilities and skills will be available which are unavailable under the current arrangements.

Mr. Freeman: Experience in the Royal Navy has shown that there are advantages in co-locating the schools responsible for aircrew survival training, aircrew survival equipment and aviation medicine, because strong links exist between these types of training and common problems can then be addressed more easily. Aircrew equipment fitter training can be improved by providing trainees with opportunities to see the equipment actually in use. The RAF also recognise these advantages which are further enhanced by the formation of a joint services training establishment, since there is also considerable commonality between the training tasks of the two services. The essential requirements for this joint training establishment include a sea survival area, a land survival area and facilities such as a swimming pool and decompression chambers. The sea survival area in Plymouth Sound is excellent for training purposes at all states of tide and weather is clear of shipping lanes and free from pollution. The surrounding countryside provides most suitable terrain for land survival training. Facilities such as the swimming pool and decompression chambers will be purpose built and dedicated to survival training whereas existing facilities are sometimes shared and some are in poor condition and in need of renewal. The facilities and skills available at Mount Batten will not be different in kind from those available under the current arrangements, but they will be modern and more effective and efficient because of their co-location. All three services are satisfied that the quality of training will be improved by the formation of the joint establishment.

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Defence what will be the anticipated cost to public funds of establishing the proposed tri-service defence training establishment at RAF Mount Batten; and what annual saving he anticipates from closing each of the existing units which will be merged to form the new establishment.

Mr. Freeman: The capital cost of establishing the proposed tri-service training establishment at RAF Mount Batten is approximately £8 million. The rationalisation will, however, enable the Department to sell some surplus land. When receipts from these sales are taken into account the net expenditure is expected to be about £1 million. Savings in iperating costs are expected to be £780,000 a year once the new establishment is formed.

Royal Ordnance Factories

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list in the Official Report the total number of employees, and the total number of redundancies declared by the Royal Ordnance Factories, and the Royal Ordnance Factories plc. for each calendar year since 1973 to date for each Royal Ordnance factory and for the United Kingdom as a whole.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Information in the form requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost and effort, but the following may be helpful:

	Average number of employees	Number of redundancies declared[1]
9 months to 31 March 1975	18,550	13
Year to 31 March 1976	20,556	nil
Year to 31 March 1977	22,535	nil
Year to 31 March 1978	23,169	nil
Year to 31 March 1979	23,235	509
Year to 31 March 1980	22,084	122
Year to 31 March 1981	21,672	1,018
Year to 31 March 1982	20,208	461
Year to 31 March 1983	18,859	91

[1] Redundancy figures are those declared in a calendar year.

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for Defence in what way he intends to consult Parliament before a final decision on the sale of Royal Ordnance Factories plc. is made.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Parliament has given approval to the Government's policy of moving Royal Ordnance plc. to the private sector and has been kept informed of progress. The necessary decisions needed to achieve the Government's objective will be announced in due course, and will no doubt be the subject of appropriate comment and questions.

Ulster Defence Regiment

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the Ulster Defence Regiment, and its Reserve, in 1986 have been found to be members of illegal paramilitary organisations or, separately, legal paramilitary organisations such as the Ulster Defence Association or the Third Force.

Mr. Stanley: I shall answer shortly.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give details of the manpower strength of the Ulster Defence Regiment, and its Reserve, as between full-time, part-time, male and female, operatives as at 31 December 1986.

Mr. Stanley: The figures requested are as follows:

	Full-time	Part-time	Total
Male officers	86	183	269
Female officers	11	9	20
Servicemen	2,482	3,034	5,516
Servicewomen	205	525	730

There is no UDR Reserve.

Northern Ireland

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will state the manpower strength of the British Army in Northern Ireland giving details of the number of personnel in the following categories: (a) Ulster Defence Regiment, (b) Regular British Army and (c) British Territorial Army as at 31 December 1986.

Mr. Stanley: The figures requested are as follows:

	Number
Ulster Defence Regiment	6,535
Regular Army	9,920
Territorial Army	3,719

The figures for the Ulster Defence Regiment include both full-time and part-time soldiers. Soldiers of the Territorial Army are not used in support of the RUC in counter-terrorist operations.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Departmental Initiatives (Women)

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list those initiatives of his Department which have been of benefit to women, since 1979, the cost or estimated cost of these initiatives, and the proportion of the total budget of his Department this represents.

Mrs. Currie: Our policies on health, personal social services and social security are designed to benefit both men and women. Spending on the National Health Service in England alone has increased by nearly 26 per cent. since 1978-79 in real terms. There are more doctors and nurses in hospitals and the community. Hospitals are dealing with many more in-patient cases, out-patient cases and day cases than ever before.

There have been many specific initiatives of benefit particularly to women. The maternity services advisory committee, established in 1981, produced three reports on aspects of maternity care, which have been distributed widely within the Health Service and to interested professional and lay organisations. The committee's advice is taken into account when authorities plan, monitor and review their maternity services. The Asian mother and baby project was launched in 1984 and involved the appointment of link workers to overcome linguistic and cultural barriers and so improve antenatal care for women from the Indian sub-continent.

Health authorities have been required to install computerised call and recall schemes, so that women can receive personal invitations to attend for cervical smear tests, by April 1988 at the latest; and to ensure that laboratories avoid backlogs of cervical smears, which should not regularly exceed one month's work. In 1985 Professor Sir Patrick Forrest was invited to consider the case for introducing breast cancer screening by mammography. Professor Forrest's final report has been received and sent for printing. It will be published and the Government will announce their response shortly.

Particular attention has been paid to women smokers. In 1985 £½ million was made available to the Health Education Council for a television campaign to discourage smoking among women. The HEC has also recently produced a new booklet on women and smoking. The latest voluntary agreement on tobacco advertising and promotion prohibits cigarette advertising in magazines where a third or more of the readers are young women, and one of the six new health warnings draws attention to the damage smoking during pregnancy can do to an unborn baby. Although there is considerable work still to be done, smoking amongst women has fallen from 37 per cent. in 1978 to 32 per cent. in 1984.

The Health Education Council, which is largely funded by Government, produces a range of publications aimed specifically at women. The Pregnancy Book, first published in 1984, received a particularly warm welcome. The Government expect that the new health education authority will continue and develop this work.

In addition, the Department provides funds for a number of voluntary organisations which focus particularly on the needs of women, including the Women's National Cancer Control Campaign and Women's Health Concern. Other organisations which receive departmental support, such as the Association of Carers, will also benefit many women. In October 1986 I was given special responsibility for women's health matters. In the social security field there have also been many developments of specific benefit to women. Since November 1983, there has been equal treatment for women in claiming supplementary benefit and family income supplement. Since September 1985 there has been equal treatment between men and women in virtually all aspects of child dependency and adult dependency increases payable with benefits to those below pension age.

The 1987 Hospital In-Patients Amendment Regulations provide for the equal treatment of women receiving benefits in hospital.

From April 1987 maternity allowance and maternity pay will be combined to become statutory maternity pay and will be paid by the employer. Women who do not qualify for SMP may, however, still receive maternity allowance under new conditions designed to target help more precisely to those with recent work records. SMP will also be available in addition to national insurance widow's benefits, and to any women who pay the married woman's reduced rate national insurance contribution which does not at present bring entitlement to maternity allowance. These new arrangements give pregnant women a greater choice about when to give up work without affecting benefit entitlement.

The Social Security Act 1986 made invalid care allowance payable to married women on the same basis as to single women and men. In November 1984, the severe disablement allowance was introduced to replace non-contributory invalidity pension and housewives' non-contributory invalidity pension. SDA is available to men and women regardless of marital status and therefore does away with the need for the household duties test.

The residual effects of the married woman's half test were abolished from December 1984, enabling over 30,000 women to receive a pension for the first time. These initiatives are only a small proportion of those which have been of benefit to women. It would not be possible to list them all in detail, or to calculate their cost, either as a single figure or as a proportion of the Department's total budget.

Abortions

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list in the Official Report the numbers of abortions carried out (a) on the National Health Service and (b) in the private sector; broken down by estimated time span since conception, for the 10 years up to the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Newton: I regret that the exact information requested can be produced only at disproportionate cost. However the hon. Member may find the figures in the table useful.

Notifications of abortions carried out under the Abortion Act 1967 to resident and non-resident women—numbers: category of premises (residents only) and gestation in completed weeks. England and Wales 1976-1985

Gestation weeks	Total	Under 9	9-12	13-16	17-23	24 and over	Unknown

From 1976 to 1980 gestation is calculated as the number of completed weeks between last menstrual period and date of operation. In March 1981 a new notification form was introduced which seeks a direct statement of gestation and the basis on which it is derived.

Not stated and unknown gestation is included in Total.

Psychiatric Patients (Guidelines)

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether there are any guidelines on conjugal visits in (a) National Health Service psychiatric in-patient facilities, (b) regional secure units and (c) special hospitals.

Mrs. Currie: No. The provision of such facilities in psychiatric hospitals and regional secure units would be at local discretion. The special hospitals are provided for patients with a propensity to violent and dangerous behaviour, and conjugal visits would not normally be appropriate.

Residential Homes

Mr. Neil Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people in private and voluntary residential and nursing homes in the United Kingdom are having their fees wholly or partly paid by supplementary benefit board and lodging payments; what is the annual cost of such support; and if he will break down the figures by region, by client type, elderly, mentally ill, mentally handicapped and physically handicapped and into residential and nursing homes, respectively.

Mr. Major: In December 1984, the latest available date, 42,000[1] residents of private and voluntary residential care and nursing homes in Great Britain were receiving supplementary benefit to help with their fees at an estimated annual cost of £200 million. These figures cannot be broken down by region, client group or type of home.

The only available information on the number of claimants by social security region and client group is that obtained from a special survey of residents claiming benefit during April to July 1985. The information is contained in a Department of Health and Social Security document "Supplementary Benefit Board and Lodging Allowances, Results of a Special Statistical Exercise (29 April — 29 July 1985)", a copy of which is in the Library.

A special statistical exercise conducted in Northern Ireland in December 1986 indicated that 1,648 people in private and voluntary residential and nursing homes were receiving supplementary benefit towards their fees at an annual cost of about £10·6 million. The numbers in different types of home were as follows:

Home type	Residential home	Nursing home
Elderly	860	390
Mental disorder	27	97
Mental handicap	57	17
Physical disability	61	33
Drug or alcohol dependence	18	—
Terminal illness	—	54
Others	13	21
Totals	1,036	612

Note:

Information relating to the cost by home type is not available.

General Practitioners (Computers)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement about his Department's refusal to finance the computer-based advice systems for general practitioners being established by Dr. Roger Brittan and colleagues at the University of Warwick.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Hospital Closures

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he last upheld the objection of a community health council to the closure of a hospital since 1979; and if he will list those occasions by year and region.

Mrs. Currie: Most proposed closures or changes of use of hospitals are agreed locally with the support of the community health council. Where a proposal is referred to my right hon. Friend he considers all the circumstances, the views of the local community health council and other comments received, in reaching a decision. The table lists those proposals for the closure of whole hospitals, which have been referred to Ministers in this Department since 1979, and have not been accepted.

Hospital and Community Health Services

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the capital spend on hospital and community health services for each year since 1974-75 to the latest available date, giving in each case the amount (a) in cash terms and (b) deflated by the gross domestic product deflator and (i) in gross terms and (ii) in net terms after deducting proceeds from land sales.

Mr. Newton: The information requested is shown in the table.

Hospital Beds

Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many (a) acute, (b) geriatric and (c) psychiatric beds there were in Leeds area health authority in 1979; and what are the latest available figures for Leeds eastern district health authority and Leeds western district health authority.

Mrs. Currie: The information requested is given in the table. In Leeds between 1979 and 1985 the number of in-patient cases treated increased by 21·0 per cent. from 76,896 to 93,013 in acute specialties, by 47·7 per cent. from 4,335 to 6,401 in the specialty of geriatric medicine and 38·4 per cent. from 2,229 to 3,085 in psychiatric specialties.

Patient Statistics

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give, for the latest available year, for East Hertfordshire health authority (a) the expenditure on contractual arrangements for patient care, (b) the number of deaths and discharges of patients treated under contractual arrangements and (c) the number of beds they occupied on a given date, breaking these figures down into the categories of (i) medical, (ii) surgical, (iii) pre-convalescent and post-operative, (iv) convalescent, (v) geriatric, (vi) diseases of the chest, (vii) maternity, (viii) mental illness, (ix) mental handicap, (x) rehabilitation, (xi) terminal care and (xii) others, giving details, if applicable.

Mrs. Currie: I regret that this information is not available centrally. The hon. Member may wish to approach the chairman of the East Hertfordshire health authority who may be able to provide the information requested.

Principal General Medical Practitioners

Mr. Stan Thorne asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will state the number of unrestricted principals analysed by practice structure for England, the Mersey region and Liverpool for the years 1957, 1960, 1970, 1980 and 1985;

(2) if he will state the number of unrestricted principals analysed by age groups for England, the Mersey region and Liverpool for 1957, 1960, 1970, 1980 and 1985.

Mr. Newton: Information for England, Mersey regional health authority, and Liverpool family practitioner committee is given in the tables. No comparable data are readily available for Mersey Region or Liverpool prior to the health service re-organisation in 1974.

North Western Regional Health Authority

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) pursuant to his answer, Official Report, column 139, 9 February, if he will list in detail those of the auditor's criticisms of the development experiment of computer systems by the North Western regional health authority which have not been met by the authority's response;

(2) in respect of which specific point he has asked the North Western regional health authority to reconsider its responses in relation to tendering and contract procedure; and when this request was made;

(3) in respect of the development and procurement of computer systems by the North Western regional health authority, whether the auditor's report has been published and what other documents relating to this matter have been made available to the public; and if he will arrange for all such documents including the auditor's report to be placed in the Library.

Mrs. Currie: The auditor's report and the regional health authority's response were considered in public session at the authority's meeting on 27 May 1986, and I am arranging for copies to be placed in the Library. The Department's comments on this response were contained in a letter sent to the authority on 19 September 1986, to which it has assured us that it will be replying very shortly. I will let the hon. Member have a further reply when these matters have been resolved.

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish any guidelines given to the North Western regional health authority for priorities in allocating the extra £1·2 million made available.

Mr. Newton: North Western regional health authority, in common with other recipients of this special funding, is expected to allocate the sum made available in 1987-88 to ease the process of planned changes and for projects which will release resources for the future.

The special fund is transitional, for two years only, and all projects should therefore be of limited duration. The fund may be used for revenue or capital projects.

Guidelines on this special fund were issued to regions on 19 January, 1987 and a copy is in the Library.

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the £1·2 million extra funding for the North Western, regional health authority.

Mr. Newton: The £15 million special fund made available in 1987-88 to regions receiving lowest growth rates under RAWP is intended to help those regions cope with the transitional costs of improving services both for priority groups and outside the main cities, without damaging inner city services or medical teaching. The £1·2 million extra funding for North Western regional health authority is from this special fund.

Acute Beds

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what, pursuant to his answer of 19 January, Official Report, column 448, was the source of the figure on the number of acute beds in the Blackburn, Hyndburn, and Ribble Valley health authority in 1979 and 1985; and when the information was obtained.

Mrs. Currie: The figures were supplied to the Department by the North Western regional health authority. The date the 1979 figures were received has not been recorded. The 1985 figures were received in the first week of July 1986.

Nuclear Installations (Cancer)

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when the Committee on Medical Aspect of Radiation last met to consider allegations of higher than average leukaemia and lymphatic cancer levels among under 25-year-olds living near the atomic weapons research establishment Aldermaston and royal ordnance factory, Burghfield; when it will next meet and from which sources it is calling for statistical, epidemiological and other expert research; and how much original research it is carrying out.

Mrs. Currie: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services following the statistical study on cancer incidence and mortality in the vicinity of nuclear installations in England and Wales 1959-1980 carried out by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys, if he will publish in the Official Report (a) a list of nuclear installations surveyed indicating the approximate area around each in which cancer incidence and mortality was studied and (b) in each case: (i) the number of cancers and (ii) the number of deaths for each year specifying: (1) the type of cancer, (2) the age of the person who has contracted the cancer or died and (3) the expected cancer/death rate in each category.

Mr. Newton: The purpose of the investigation was to assemble and publish data as a basis for identifying any prima facie excesses of cancer which might merit further investigation; the study does not itself test casual connections.

The study examined cancer registrations and deaths from cancer around 15 nuclear installations at 14 locations (identified in the table). For cancer registrations data were available for each year 1961-80, and for mortality 1959-80. Sixteen sites of malignancy and some broader aggregations (25 groups of malignancy in all) were considered. The pre-1974 local authority districts adjacent to each nuclear installation were grouped into four distance zones. The data were examined for five-year age-bands (18 groups in all), and for both sexes. Comparison statistics were available for control districts, matched on urban/rural location in the region(s) in which the installation was sited. This work produced a vast amount of raw data (over 12 million separate counts of cancer registrations and deaths). All this information will be available in the report or on microfiche.

Work on this material used various aggregations to explore the trends in patterns of cancer over the time period stated, and also over time since start-up of the installations, and over the distance zones, in comparison with expected values based on standard rates, and in comparison with the control locations. The main thrust of the examination was to seek for patterns of results that distinguished individual chance positives from any set of results indicating possible environmental associations.

To answer the question by presenting data for the 14 locations, for four distance zones, for the 16 main sites of malignancy, for 18 age-groups, for each of the years involved for cancer registrations and cancer deaths, giving observed numbers and expected numbers, would produce a table with over a million numbers in it.

A table has therefore been produced, using myeloid leukaemia as a malignancy of particular interest (as used in the Official Report, 15 April 1986 at column 371-372) to illustrate the type of data available. The data have been set out for the 14 locations around the installations, but pooling the material for all distance zones, the total time-span, both sexes, and in three broad age-groups. The numbers of cancer registrations and deaths are given, together with a ratio of these observed numbers to the expected figures based on regional rates, excluding the population in conurbations.

Such figures need careful statistical interpretation. There are, moreover, problems, discussed in the report, about the reliability of some of the data. The authors consider that the conclusions should be based not on these or any other particular figures but on the overall results of the whole study. Interpretation of the figures and decisions on any further work will have to be considered when the full report is available, and in the light of advice from the committee on medical aspects of radiation in the environment.

Number of deaths (1959-1980) from, and newly diagnosed cases (1961-1980) of, myeloid leukaemia by age group (obs), and ratio of observed to expected numbers for specified nuclear installations.

Hospital Complaints Procedure Act

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he intends to implement the Hospital Complaints Procedure Act.

Mrs. Currie: We have undertaken extensive consultation on proposed new arrangements for hospital complaints procedures and received a substantial response. We hope to complete our deliberations on the comments received shortly. Arrangements to issue the directions will be made as soon as possible.

Severe Weather Payments

Mr. John Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make it his policy to pay the £5 heating supplement to pensioners who live in communities which are in a high rainfall, wind or high altitude areas, and where weather conditions are worse than average.

Mr. Major: Having recently changed the temperature criterion to 0 deg. Celsius we have no plans for further changes to the arrangements for single payments in periods of exceptionally cold weather.

Allowances

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people were in receipt of (a) attendance allowance and (b) mobility allowance in Wales for the latest date for which such figures are available.

Mr. Major: The latest available figures for Wales are that there were an estimated 44,000 recipients of attendance allowance (at 31 March 1986) and 40,600 recipients of mobility allowance (at 6 February 1987).

Pension Schemes

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will take steps to ensure that the profits that accumulate in a pension fund, held for the benefit of employees, can only be used for the direct benefit of those employees, and not appropriated for other uses by the company or by the trustees in charge of the pension scheme.

Mr. Major: Trust law already requires the trustees of pension schemes to act in the members' best interests. The powers to tax pension fund surpluses which last year's Finance Act gives to my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer provides a powerful incentive for schemes to use surpluses to reduce contributions or enhance benefits.

Liable Relative Officers

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will place in the Library a copy of the instructions issued to liable relative officers.

Mr. Lyell: It would not be in the public interest to do so. The supplementary benefits handbook does contain general information about the action taken by liable relative officers.

Family Forum

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will state the terms of reference of the Family Trust; what information he has about the proportion of its annual expenditure accounted for by his Department's grant under section 64 of the Health Services and Public Health Act 1968; what assessment he has made of its activities during 1986 for the purposes of evaluating the cost-effectiveness of his Department's grant; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: I assume that my hon. Friend is referring to Family Forum.

Family Forum aims to:

> increase the understanding of families and family structure, their development and needs, by drawing together the experience and expertise of national member organisations and other in conferences, consultations and working groups;
> achieve the same across the country, through individuals, representatives of local branches of national members and other contacts by identifying and discussing family issues which affect them locally; > through the work of its committees, working groups and national and local meetings, publish findings and make recommendations to policy makers on matters relating to family life and welfare; thereby contributing to an increase in the knowledge, wellbeing, confidence, competence and independence of families.

In 1985-86, the latest year for which audited accounts are available, the grant of £34,500 paid to Family Forum under section 64 of the Health Services and Public Health Act 1968 amounted to some two thirds of its expenditure.

Officials have kept in touch with the activities of Family Forum and we are currently considering an application for a further three year grant, to run from 1 April 1987.

Royal Liverpool Hospital

Mr. Loyden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what plans there are to reduce further the number of beds at the Royal Liverpool hospital;

(2) if there are any plans to close a surgical ward at the Royal Liverpool teaching hospital; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if there are any plans to make surgical wards into five-day wards at the Royal Liverpool hospital; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: The provision of local health services is a matter for individual health authorities. The hon. Member may therefore wish to contact the chairman of the Liverpool health authority.

Mr. Loyden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what plans he has to seek to reduce the waiting list for patients awaiting treatment at the Royal Liverpool hospital.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Fluoridation

Mr. Terry Davis asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he published the draft guidelines on the fluoridation of water supplies; and when he placed a copy in the Library.

Mrs. Currie: A draft circular giving guidance to health authorities on the implementation of fluoridation schemes was sent to all regional general managers for consultation on 29 January. A copy of the final document will be placed in the Library when it is issued.

Blood Products

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what is his Department's assessment of the total cost to date attributable to heat-treating imported blood products; if he will list the hospitals where these costs have been incurred giving in each case the costs incurred; how much of the total costs have been met by (a) district health authorities, (b) regional health authorities and (c) special allocations from his Department;

(2) what was the original completion date proposed for the blood products laboratory at Elstree; what is the completion date now; when Britain will be self sufficient in blood products; and what are the reasons for the development slipping behind schedule.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Meningitis

Mr. Aspinwall asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps are being taken to discover the continuing high incidence of bacterial and viral meningitis in certain localities; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Aspinwall asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many cases of meningitis have been reported in England in each year since 1970; how many were in (i) county of Avon, (ii) county of Gloucester, (iii) Frenchay health authority, (iv) Bristol and Weston district health authority and (v) Bath and West Wiltshire health authority.

Mrs. Currie: Notifications of meningitis are made in respect of local authority areas, not district health authorities. The table shows the readily available information on the number of notifications of acute meningitis, and, of these, the numbers specified as meningococcal meningitis, from 1970 to 1986.

[1] Provisional

Mr. Aspinwall asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what facilities have been provided for the treatment of meningitis in the county of Gloucester;

(2) what facilities have been provided for the treatment of meningitis in the Frenchay health authority;

(3) what facilities have been provided for the treatment of meningitis in the Bristol and Weston district health authority;

(4) what facilities have been provided for the treatment of meningitis in the county of Avon.

Mrs. Currie: Facilities for the treatment of meningitis are available at all the principal general hospitals in these areas.

Mr. Aspinwall asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many cases of meningitis recorded in England have resulted in death in each year since 1970; how many were in (i) county of Avon, (ii) county of Gloucester, (iii) Frenchay health authority, (iv) Bristol and Weston district health authority and (v) Bath and West Wiltshire health authority;

(2) what progress has been made in the use of the anti-meningitis vaccine at present being manufactured.

Mrs. Currie: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

AIDS

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will list the 10 health authorities which have experienced the most demand on their services from AIDS patients; and if he will give for each the total revenue expenditure in 1982-83 and 1985-86 and the revenue budget for 1986-87 and 1987-88;

(2) what account has been and will be taken of AIDS in determining the size and distribution of joint finance;

(3) what evidence there is from other countries of AIDS victims developing a dangerously infectious state such as would justify use of the Public Health (Infectious Diseases) Regulations 1985;

(4) how many health authorities have drawn up action plans on AIDS; if he will list them; and if he will place the action plans in the Library;

(5) what is his Department's estimate of the total sums spent (a) by Government and (b) by all sources on AIDS research in: (i) the United Kingdom, (ii) the United States of America and (iii) France;

(6) when he expects to decide whether to extend the practice of handing out free syringes to drug addicts; if he will list the hospitals where the trial is being conducted; and how he will assess the impact of the practice on the spread of AIDS;

(7) on what grounds HIV infection has not been made a notifiable disease;

(8) when his Department first became aware of the threat to haemophiliacs from imported factor VIII in relation to (a) hepatitis and (b) HIV virus;

(9) when heat-treatment of imported factor VIII was initiated; and when all haemophiliacs were first able to obtain access to safe factor VIII;

(10) what financial support has been made available by his Department to the Terrence Higgins trust;

(11) what consultation took place with the Terrence Higgins Trust before its telephone number was put on the AIDS leaflet;

(12) what is his Department's total grant sought by and given to the Terrence Higgins Trust in each year since the Trust's formation;

(13) whether he will now provide extra funding for sexually transmitted diseases clinics in response to AIDS.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what guidelines have been issued to nursing staff regarding the treatment of AIDS sufferers; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make a statement about the circumstances in which two nurses carrying the AIDS virus have been reinstated following their earlier dismissal; what is the general practice with regard to the employment of nurses carrying the AIDS virus; how many such cases are currently known to him; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member and my hon. Friend have replies as soon as possible.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether prevalence testing for AIDS has been conducted by the National Health Service in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Newton: I am not aware of any such testing for HIV infection by health authorities.

Mr. Aspinwall asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many haemophiliac patients are being treated for AIDS in (i) the Bristol and Weston district health authority, (ii) Frenchay health authority and (iii) Bath and West Wiltshire health authority.

Mr. Newton: According to the latest reports to the communicable disease surveillance centre, there are only seven live cases of haemophiliac patients with AIDS in the United Kingdom. It would not be right to identify which districts they ae being treated in since this might enable individuals to be identified in breach of medical confidentiality.

Maternity Payments

Dame Judith Hart asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Clydesdale claimed maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Clydesdale are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Clydesdale constituency is covered by the Department's offices at Ayr, Hamilton, Lanark, Wishaw, Cumnock and Dumfries although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The numbers of claims received for maternity grant in each of the six local offices during the calendar year 1986 were as follows:

	Number
Ayr	1,381
Hamilton	1,868
Lanark	297
Wishaw	792
Cumnock	431
Dumfries	1,357

It is not possible to predict how many women in Clydesdale will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Dame Judith Hart asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Clydesdale received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Clydesdale are expected to received statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested. But in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, the following number of claims to maternity allowance were made at the Department's offices which cover the constituency although the boundaries are not conterminous:

	Number
Ayr	881
Lanark	187
Cumnock	272
Hamilton	1,239
Wishaw	465
Dumfries	932

It is not possible to predict how many women in Clydesdale will qualify for statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance from April 1987. However, it is estimated that in total some 230,000 women will qualify for statutory maternity pay and 84,000 for maternity allowance in 1987-88.

Mr. Dormand asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in the Easington constituency claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in the Easington constituency are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Easington constituency is covered by the Department's offices at Peterlee and Seaham although their boundaries are not conterminious with the constituency. The number of claims received for maternity grant in each of the two local offices during the calendar year 1986 were as follows:

	Number
Peterlee	667
Seaham	366

It is not possible to predict how many women in the Easington constituency will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mr. Dormand asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in the Easington constituency received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in the Easington constituency are expected to receive statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested. But in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 720 claims to maternity allowance were made at Peterlee and 230 claims at Seaham, the Department's offices which cover the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

It is not possible to predict how many women in Easington will qualify for statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance from April 1987. However, it is estimated that in total some 230,000 women will qualify for statutory maternity pay and 84,000 for maternity allowance in 1987-88.

Mr. Woodall asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in the Hemsworth constituency claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in the Hemsworth constituency are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Hemsworth constituency is covered by the Department's offices at Hemsworth and Pontefract although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The numbers of claims received for maternity grant in each of the two local offices during the calendar year 1986 were as follows:

	Number
Hemsworth	703
Pontefract	958

It is not possible to predict how many women in the Hemsworth constituency will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mr. Woodall asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in the Keighley constituency received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Keighley are expected to receive statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested. But in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, the following number of claims to maternity allowance were made at the Department's offices which cover the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous:

	Number
Keighley	1,105
Skipton	327

It is not possible to predict how many women in Keighley will qualify for statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance from April 1987. However, it is estimated that in total some 230,000 women will qualify for statutory maternity pay and 84,000 for maternity allowance in 1987-88.

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many Welsh women claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of Welsh women who claimed the maternity grant is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. It is not possible to predict how many women in Wales will qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Cunliffe asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in the Leigh constituency claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Leigh constituency is covered by the Department's offices at Leigh and Wigan although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The numbers of claims received for maternity grant in each of the two local offices during the calendar year 1986 were as follows:

	Number
Leigh	1,462
Wigan	2,633

Mr. Cunliffe asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in the Leigh constituency received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested. But in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year of which figures are available, 1,040 claims to maternity allowance were made at Leigh and 1,900 claims at Wigan, the Department's offices which cover the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

Mr. Douglas asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Dunfermline, West claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested. The Dunfermline, West constituency is covered by the Department's office at Dunfermline although its boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The number of claims received for maternity grant at Dunfermline local office during the 1986 calendar year was 1,226.

Mr. Douglas asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Dunfermline, West received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested. But in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 949 claims to maternity allowance were made at Dunfermline, the Department's office which covers the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

Mr. James Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Scotland claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Motherwell, North constituency are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: In the 1986 calendar year the number of claims for maternity grant in Scotland was 59,419. It is not possible to predict how many women in Motherwell, North constituency will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Copeland claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested. The Copeland constituency is covered by the Department's offices at Barrow in Furness and Whitehaven although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The number of claims received for maternity grant in each of the two local offices during the calendar year 1986 were as follows:

	Number
Barrow in Furness	1,551
Whitehaven	868

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Burnley and Pendle constituencies claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Burnley and Pendle are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: The Burnley and Pendle constituencies are covered by the Department's office at Burnley. The number of claims received for maternity grant at Burnley local office during the calendar year 1986 was 2,999. It is not possible to predict how many women in Burnley and Pendle will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in north-west Leicestershire claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in north-west Leicestershire are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund annually after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested. The north-west Leicestershire constituency is covered by the Department's office at Loughborough although its boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The number of claims received for maternity grant at Loughborough local office during the calendar year 1986 was 2,094. It is not possible to predict how many women in north-west Leicestershire will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Faversham claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Faversham are expected to qualify for maternity payment from the social fund annually after April 1987.

Mr. Major: The Faversham constituency is covered by the Department's office at Sittingbourne. The number of claims received for maternity grant at Sittingbourne local office during the calendar year 1986 was 1,593. It is not possible to predict how many women in Faversham will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in the Rossendale and Darwen constituency claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested. The Rossendale and Darwen constituency is covered by the Department's offices at Rossendale and Blackburn although their boundaries are no conterminous with the constituency. The numbers of claims received for maternity grant in each of the two local offices during the calendar year 1986 were as follows:

	Number
Rossendale	907
Blackburn	2,346

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in the Rossendale and Darwen constituency received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested. But in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 623 claims to maternity allowance were made at Rossendale and 1,498 claims at Blackburn, the Department's offices which cover the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

Benefits

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps he is taking, in the light of the result of a test case involving a former British Shipbuilders worker in Southampton, in September 1986, to ensure that unemployment benefit is paid to former Scott Lithgow workers by the Greenock and Port Glasgow offices of his Department during the first 13 weeks of their redundancy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Employment my hon. Friend the Member for Pendle (Mr. Lee) to the hon. Member for South Shields (Dr. Clark) on 24 November 1986 at column 57.

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the benefits and allowances to which a married man with eight children under 11 years is entitled if his gross weekly earnings are (a) £90, (b) £120 and (c) £180 and he is paying average rent and rates (i) if he is working and (ii) if he is unemployed and showing the total net weekly spending power in each case.

Mr. Major: The information requested is given in the table.

Benefits, Allowances and total net weekly spending power at various earnings for a married man with eight children under 11 years and a non-working wife

Gross Weekly Earnings	90·00	120·00	180·00
Family Income Supplement	43·15	30·10	—
Child Benefit	56·80	56·80	56·80
Rent Rebate	15·51	11·19	2·52
Rate Rebate	6·09	4·64	0·75
Free School Meals	9·00	9·00	9·00
Free Welfare Milk	6·72	6·72	—
Total Income Support	179·25	177·23	165·05

Families with the age and size specified are extremely rare — out of a total of almost 7 million families with children in the country as a whole they are likely to number fewer than 100. If the head of the family was unemployed and claiming supplementary benefit, total income support would total £147·92 per week.

The phenomenon whereby net income can fall as gross earnings rise and income-related benefits are withdrawn will not occur after April 1988 when family credit replaces family income supplement under the terms of the 1986 Social Security Act.

Notes:

1. Assumptions are the same as used in the Department's tax/benefit model tables at July 1986. A copy is available in the Library.
2. The local authority rent for such a family is calculated at £19·60, general rates £8·15, water rates £1·60 per week.

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people in (a) Dundee and (b) Tayside are in receipt of supplementary benefit; and if he will break down the figures showing the number of recipients who are pensioners, one-parent families and unemployed in each case.

Mr. Lyell: I regret that information cannot be given in the precise form requested. Dundee is covered by the Department's local offices at Dundee East and Dundee West but their boundaries are not conterminous with those of Dundee. Tayside region includes areas covered by these two offices together with areas covered by the Department's local offices at Arbroath and Perth but their boundaries are not conterminous with those of Tayside.

Information about the number of pensioners, unemployed people and others under pension age receiving supplementary benefit from the local offices covering Dundee and Tayside on 10 December 1986—the latest available figures—are shown in the table.

Separate figures for one parent families receiving supplementary benefit are not available.

	Dundee	Tayside
Pensioners	6,038	11,242
Unemployed	9,478	15,501
Others under pension age	7,111	11,474
Totals	22,627	38,217

Source: 100 per cent. count of cases in action.

Mr. Terry Davis asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has any plans to stop single payments for repairs to owner occupiers in receipt of supplementary benefit.

Mr. Major: No, we have no plans to amend the single payments regulations in relation to single payments for repairs to owner-occupied property.

Written Answers to Questions

Tuesday 17 February 1987

PRIME MINISTER

Moodiesburn

Q66. Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Prime Minister if she will pay an official visit to Moodiesburn, Lanarkshire.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Wales

Q95. Mr. Wigley asked the Prime Minister when she next proposes to pay an official visit to Wales.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Age Addition

Q105. Sir David Price asked the Prime Minister whether she will consider increasing the age addition for those aged 80 years and over.

The Prime Minister: I have no plans to do so. However, from April 1988 a higher level of help will be available to pensioners aged 80 and over who are on low incomes through an automatic higher-rate premium in the new income support scheme.

EC Budget

Q118. Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Prime Minister what arrangements have been made for the European Council to consider the EEC budget; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: As I informed my hon. Friend on 10 February, at column 159, the agenda for the next European Council has not yet been fixed.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Prime Minister if she will make it the policy of Her Majesty's Government that no commitment will be made on behalf of the United Kingdom in the present Parliament which would have the effect of increasing the United Kingdom contribution to the European Economic Community budget now or in the future above the amount payable under the present formula; and if she will publish in the Official Report the percentage increase in the United Kingdom contribution in each of the past three years and the expected increase in the current year compared with the percentage increase in public expenditure at central and local level in the United Kingdom.

The Prime Minister: Yes. I have made it clear that there is no question of the Government putting any increase in the Community's own resources ceiling to the present Parliament.

The net financial obligations on the United Kingdom resulting from successive Community budgets on a calendar year basis are shown in table 3.3.1 in the public expenditure White Paper (Cmnd. 56-II) and the net payments to the European Community budget on a financial year basis in table 3.3. The percentage changes in the net payments to the European Community budget, after taking account of the effects of refunds or abatements, shown in table 3.3, are:

	Percentage
1984-85	+18
1985-86	−12
1986-87	+27
1987-88	−16

The comparable figures for central and local government expenditure are given in table 2.3. The percentage increases are:

	central government	local government
1984-85	+8	+ 5
1985-86	+7	+ 1
1986-87	+6	+10
1987-88	+3	+ 4

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Prime Minister whether she will publish in the Official Report a list of the economic benefits which the United Kingdom obtained from membership of the European Economic Community in 1986, together with details of the United Kingdom's net contribution to the European Economic Community budget.

The Prime Minister: The Government's assessment of the economic benefits which the United Kingdom obtains from membership of the European Community is contained in their evidence to the Treasury and Civil Service Sub-committee inquiry into the financial and economic consequences of United Kingdom membership of the European Communities (House of Commons 57-II, Session 1984-85).

A final outturn figure for the United Kingdom's net contribution to the EC budget in 1986 is not yet available. A preliminary estimate of £326 million was published last October in the White Paper on the 1986 Community budget (Cmnd. 9907).

BBC Scotland (Police Raid)

Q152. Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister whether it was with her authority that Mr. Bernard Ingham and the No. 10 Downing street Private Office were in touch with the Strathclyde police in relation to the seizure of documents at BBC Scotland on 1 February.

The Prime Minister: Ministers have made clear repeatedly in the House that the Government did not intervene in the application for a warrant to search the premises of the BBC in Glasgow. The hon. Gentleman's allegation is totally unfounded. At no time has any member of the No. 10 staff been in touch with the Strathclyde police about the matter.

Moscow

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Prime Minister whether she will now publish the itinerary of her impending visit to Moscow.

The Prime Minister: The arrangements for my visit are under discussion.

Engagements

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 17 February.

Mr. Greenway asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 17 February.

Mr. Greg Knight asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 17 February.

Mr. Pike asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 17 February.

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others, including one with the President of the Congo. I attended a service of thanksgiving for the life and work of Sir Edward Youde, former Governor of Hong Kong. In addition to my duties in this House I shall be having further meetings later today. This evening I hope to have an audience of Her Majesty the Queen.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Committee of Public Accounts (Recommendations)

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will list those recommendations of the Committee of Public Accounts since 1983 affecting his Department which have been implemented.

Mr. Butcher: I refer the hon. Member to the Treasury minutes published in response to the relevant PAC reports (Cmnd. 9178, 9325, 9368, 9546, 9696, 9743, 9755, 9776 and 9917). The Committee, on which the hon. Member serves, monitors departmental progress with accepted recommendations.

Anti-dumping Duties

Mr. Faulds asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is Her Majesty's Government's policy on the draft regulation under consideration by the European Commission which would extend European anti-dumping duties to cover all the components of products subject to anti-dumping duties.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Government sympathise with the objective of ensuring that anti-dumping action is not undermined by imports of components; but, equally, we attach great importance to encouraging genuine inward investment. We are examining the draft regulation from that standpoint.

Industrial Aid

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about grants available to foreign companies undertaking developments in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Giles Shaw: There is no discrimination in the provision of grants between British and foreign-owned companies undertaking developments in the United Kingdom. The main grants which may be available to qualifying projects are national and regional selective assistance, regional development grants, and support for innovation.

British Shipbuilders

Mr. Forth asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the external financing limit for British Shipbuilders for 1986-87.

Mr. Giles Shaw: In the debate on the British Shipbuilders (Borrowing Powers) Bill on 8 December I announced that British Shipbuilders external finance limit for 1986-87 would be revised formally once we were clearer about how some of the major uncertainties arising from the corporation's clients were to be resolved. In the meantime, I announced a firm limit of £155 million on the financing needs of the continuing businesses in areas the corporation could control.

The position on the major uncertainties is now such as to allow a new EFL of £244 million to be set, which means an increase of £114 million over the existing RFL of £130 million. The largest element of this increase is a cash requirement of £41 million in 1986-87 as a direct result of the receivership of International Transport Management Limited. As I told the House on 8 December, BS has advised that it expects to be able to recover some of these costs in due course.

Provision for this additional funding in the form of public dividend capital is subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate. The increase in the EFL will be charged to the reserve net of some offsetting savings on existing programmes.

Oil

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will publish in the Official Report, a table showing imports and exports of (a) crude oil and (b) petroleum products in terms of weight and value for the United Kingdom and such information as is available to him about the United States of America, Japan, Germany, France, Italy, Holland and Belgium for 1972, 1979, 1985 and to the latest available date in 1986.

Mr. Alan Clark: I shall reply to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Vehicle Imports

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what steps are taken to ensure that complete cars imported by General Motors from their plants in Germany are not being sold at less than the fair market value in their country of origin;

(2) whether he will impose an anti-dumping duty on imports of commercial vehicles from MAN of Germany; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: I shall reply to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Tobacco

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any evidence that imports of tobacco products from West Germany are being sold here at less than the fair market value in the country of origin after taking into account insurance and freight charges; and if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the volume and value of United Kingdom imports of tobacco products from, and exports to, West Germany in 1970, 1979 and each year from 1983 respectively.

Mr. Alan Clark: The United Kingdom cigarette manufacturing industry has presented evidence that manufacturers in the Federal Republic of Germany (including West Berlin) have adopted marginal costing policies in respect of imports of tobacco products into the United Kingdom. I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Stalybridge and Hyde (Mr. Pendry) on 3 February, at column 559. The following is the information requested:

	Imports[1]		Exports[2]

Trackway (Patent Violation)

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has evidence of the unlawful marketing by the Singapore Government in Malaysia and Thailand of trackway in breach of a British patent held by Laird (Anglesey) Ltd.

Mr. Pattie: My Department has no such evidence. However, the allegation that unauthorised production is taking place in Singapore is under investigation by the licensing branch of the Ministry of Defence.

Guinness plc

Mr. Sedgemore asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will call for the assistance of the fraud squad of the Metropolitan and City police forces to help in the Guinness investigation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: The Guinness investigation is proceeding with all possible expedition and there is close liaison with the Crown Prosecution Service, which is being advised by leading counsel. It is for the Director of Public Prosecutions to decide whether and when to institute police inquiries.

Mr. Sedgemore asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has received any representations concerning the conduct of members of the firm of stockbrokers Cazenove in the Guinness affair.

Mr. Howard: The Guinness investigation is proceeding expeditiously. My right hon. Friend has received no specific representations about the conduct of members of Cazenoves in the affairs or membership of Guinness plc.

Mr. Sedgemore asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if his inspectors have sought information on the conduct of members of the firm of stockbrokers Cazenove from the takeover panel of the Stock Exchange in relation to Guinness plc.

Mr. Howard: It would not be in the public interest to give detailed information about the investigation.

Mr. Sedgemore asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the inspectors dealing with the Guinness inquiry have submitted to him or to the police any papers or reports concerning the commission of possible criminal offences arising out of their inquiry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: The Guinness investigation is proceeding with all possible expedition and it would not be in the public interest to give detailed information concerning the inspectors' investigation while it is in progress.

Regional Policy

Mr. Robert Atkins asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the outcome of the administrative review of regional policy.

Mr. Giles Shaw: As my predecessor informed the House, we have been reviewing the operation of our regional industrial policy instruments. The terms of reference were to review the administrative aspects of regional development grants and regional selective assistance with a view to ensuring that the schemes operate with maximum ease, economy and effectiveness from the standpoint both of Departments and applicants. The review was not concerned with the fundamentals of regional policy, nor with the assisted areas map. In the interests of maintaining stability in regional incentives, we have concluded despite a number of representations that it is too early for changes to be made in the map.

We have been particularly concerned to look at the operation of RDG II which replaced RDG I in November 1984. The new scheme is radically different from the old in that it provides for grant to be calculated by reference either to capital expenditure or to new jobs created and is now available to various service activities as well as manufacturing. Other changes were introduced to improve the cost-effectiveness of RDG in assisting job creation in the development areas. We therefore commissioned a survey by consultants PIEDA into industry's early reactions to the new scheme. This found that RDG II has been generally well received by the business community. Despite its inevitably increased complexity compared with RDG I, the main concepts and rules appear to be understood and the scheme is an important factor in companies' investment decisions. Since November 1984, 12,000 projects have been approved which, if carried out as planned, would qualify for £360 million of grant. £130 million has been paid to date for projects creating 45,000 jobs. It is particularly encouraging that a high proportion of these projects are being carried out by firms with fewer than 200 employees: over 80 per cent. of the total grant has been paid to firms in this category. The grant offices have played a critical role in helping companies understand the new grant and most companies were very complimentary of the help received. A copy of PIEDA's report is being placed in the Library.

It is clear that the decision to administer the RDG 11 scheme from the same offices dealing with RSA has helped in responding to local needs. These arrangements enable the offices to coordinate their delivery of the assistance schemes to applicants and, in England, to liaise effectively with the regional organisations of the Department of the Environment and the Department of Employment, which have their own schemes of financial assistance in pursuit of separate but related policy objectives.

Experience has shown that there is scope for action to ease the administration of the scheme and this will be done, consistent with safeguarding the proper expenditure of taxpayers' money. But, given the encouraging progress to date and the need for stability in regional incentives, we have concluded that no change is called for in the main elements of RDG 11.

Relatively few changes were made in regional selective assistance in 1984. The scheme continues to be an effective and flexible instrument for aiding the creation and safeguarding of jobs throughout the assisted areas. Nevertheless, it is clear that the procedures and information requirements can be daunting to small firms. For grants of up to £25,000 a simplified application form will therefore be introduced and there will also be some simplification of the procedures involved in the determination of eligibility for assistance and the amount of grant.

The Government will continue to look for ways of improving the operation of the incentive schemes so as to maintain a vigorous regional industrial policy which brings good value for money to the taxpayer.

Heavy Vehicles

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing, for each category of heavy vehicles imported from Germany its average landed value in each year since 1983 and in the latest month for which figures are available together with the corresponding rates of exchange between sterling and the German mark.

Mr. Alan Clark [pursuant to his reply 16 February 1987]: The information is as follows:

Imports of heavy vehicles from Federal Republic of Germany
Value £000s
Average values of imports (cif)

	1983	1984	1985	October 1986

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

St. Helena

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects to place an order for a replacement vessel for the St. Helena service.

Mr. Chris Patten: We are pressing ahead with the necessary design and procurement work as rapidly as possible. The order will be placed by the St. Helena Government as soon as this work is completed.

Committee of Public Accounts (Recommendations)

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will list the recommendations of the Committee of Public Accounts since 1983 relating to overseas development matters and affecting his Department which have been implemented.

Mr. Chris Patten: I refer the hon. Member to the Treasury minute published in response to the relevant Public Accounts Committee report (Cmnd. 9696 and HC 517). The Committee, on which the hon. Member serves, monitors departmental progress with accepted recommendations.

EMPLOYMENT

YTS

63. Mr. James Hamilton asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on the progress of the educational content of the YTS.

Mr. Trippier: Off-the-job training-education in YTS is a programme of learning which takes place outside the day-to-day pressures of the workplace; all two-year YTS programmes must include a minimum of 20 weeks off-the-job training-education.

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General how many and what percentage of YTS trainees have contracts of employment.

Mr. Trippier: I regret that the information is not readily available in the form requested and could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost. However, around 5 per cent. of young people joining YTS between April and December 1985 had contracts of employment at the time their training began.

Review of Vocational Qualifications

64. Mr. Lofthouse asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on the progress of the review of vocational qualifications and its implementation.

Mr. Trippier: The Government endorsed the main recommendations of the review in their White Paper "Working Together—Education and Training" (Cmnd. 9823) and established the National Council for Vocational Qualifications on 1 October last year in order to oversee their implementation. The national council is currently developing the design criteria for the national vocational qualification and expects to make its first accreditations in the summer in accordance with the timetable set by the White Paper.

Job Training Scheme

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General if he will show for each pilot job training scheme area by male-female, by age group (18 to 25 years and 25 years plus) the number of entrants per week and the cumulative total of filled places per week for each week since the programme started.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The following table shows for each of the pilot areas from the start of the programme the number of entrants per week and the weekly cumulative totals of trainees in training. The information on breakdown by sex and age group is not available in the form requested, but the second table gives a percentage breakdown for entrants in each area up to 6 February.

Labour Statistics

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General, from the 1984 and 1985 labour force surveys, if he will publish a table for each region of Great Britain and Greater London, by male-female, and claimant status, the numbers of people not in the labour force who had not looked for a job in the four-week reference period, but were available to start work within two weeks, and declared that they would take a job if one were available; and how many people not in the labour force who had not looked for a job in the four-week reference period, were available to start work within two weeks.

Mr. Lee: The available information is given in the table. It is not possible to provide a reliable analysis of the regional figures by claimant status.

In some cases the figures may appear not to add because of rounding.

Mr. Murphy asked the Paymaster General what is the current percentage of employment in the Welwyn, Hatfield constituency; and what are the comparable figures for (a) Hertfordshire and (b) the country as a whole.

Mr. Lee: Current figures are not available. The latest comparable information comes from the 1981 census of population and is shown in the following table:

Persons in Employment as a percentage of all those aged 16 and over

	Per cent.
Welwyn, Hatfield parliamentary constituency	62·2
Hertfordshire	61·1
Great Britain	55·0

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General if he will publish figures for each year since 1957 of (a) the number of employees in employment, (b) the number self-employed, (c) the unemployment rate and (d) the number available for work.

Mr. Lee: For the period June 1959 to March 1986, the latest estimates of employees in employment, the self-employed and the size of the working population in Great Britain are to be found on page 4 of historical supplement No. 1 to the February 1987 Employment Gazette. A copy is in the Library.

Employment estimates for June and September 1986 (the latest date for which figures are available) are as follows:

	June	September
Employees in employment	21,074,000	21,169,000
Self-employed	2,665,000	2,696,000
Working population	27,164,000	27,386,000

Comparable figures are not available for 1957 and 1958.

The following table gives unemployment rates for Great Britain for June of each year from 1957 expressed as a percentage of the working population. Figures for years from 1957 to 1971 relate to unemployed registrants, and for 1971 to date to unemployed claimants. Comparisons over such a long period are difficult to make because of changes in the method of collection and compilation of the data.

Committee of Public Accounts (Recommendations)

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Paymaster General whether he will list those recommendations of the Committee of Public Accounts since 1983 affecting his Department which have been implemented.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I refer the hon. Member to the Treasury minutes published in response to the relevant Public Accounts Committee reports (Cmnd. 9178, 9743, 9776 and 9808). The Committee, on which the hon. Member serves, monitors departmental progress with accepted recommendations.

Professional and Executive Recruitment

Mr. Lawler asked the Paymaster General what proportion of the executive recruitment market is handled by Professional and Executive Recruitment: and what plans the Government have for its future.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The nature of the market for the wide range of executive recruitment consultancy services is such that it is not possible to calculate a figure for the market share of Professional and Executive Recruitment. We have no present plans to change the basis of operation of the service, but its future is kept under review.

EXPO 88

Mr. Sayeed asked the Paymaster General whether the British Tourist Authority is intending to fund any special promotion of British tourism during the six months of the EXPO 88 Leisure in the Age of Technology exhibition.

Mr. Trippier: The British Tourist Authority is already discussing with the travel trade and the national and regional tourist boards the opportunities which EXPO 88 might offer for promoting British tourism. I expect to review the BTA's initial conclusions with the authority's chairman in the near future.

Wages

Mr. Favell asked the Paymaster General what is the average weekly wage of under 21-year-olds in (a) the public sector and (b) the private sector.

Mr. Trippier: The information requested is not available. Figures for full-time adult employees in the private and public sector for April 1986 are published in table 1 of the 1986 "New Earnings Survey", report part A, a copy of which is available in the Library.

Cancer Screening

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Paymaster General (1) what steps his Department is taking to encourage employers to provide cervical cancer testing facilities at the place of work; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will seek information from the baking industry and the Bakers, Food and Allied Workers Union about the agreement reached on provision of cervical cancer testing facilities at the place of work or for paid release for off-site testing.

Mr. Trippier: The provision of cervical cancer testing facilities is in general a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Services. I appreciate that the work place provides an excellent forum for carrying out activities, such as cervical cancer screening, aimed at preventing disease in the general population. The Health and Safety Commission encourages employers to use the work place for such preventative purposes and I fully support the commission in this.

Primarily, however, the provision of work place screening facilities is a matter for agreement between employers and their employees. I have seen the agreement reached recently within the National Joint Committee of the Baking Industry in England and Wales, on which the baking industry employers and the Bakers, Food and Allied Workers' Union are represented. I understand that this agreement provides for work place testing by the National Health Service where this can be arranged. Where not, women employees are allowed full time off with pay to attend off-site testing centres. Other industries may wish to consider adopting schemes on these lines.

Construction Industry Training Board

Mr. Latham asked the Paymaster General what is the current level of cash reserves of the Construction Industry Training Board; what was the amount of (a) levy collected and (b) grants paid out in the last financial year; and what are the equivalent projected figures for the current financial year.

Mr. Trippier: As at 31 March 1986 the level of cash reserves of the Construction Industry Training Board was £58·6 million. The projected level of cash reserves at 31 March 1987 is £65 million. The amount of levy collected in the 1985-86 financial year was £47·4 million and £30·6 million was paid out in grants (including industry support for YTS trainees). The projected figures for the current financial year are £50·9 million for levy and £40 million for grants.

Non-statutory Training Organisations

Mr. Latham asked the Paymaster General what representations were made to the Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Rossendale and Darwen (Mr. Trippier), when he attended the Confederation of British Industry's conference on non-statutory training organisations, regarding the relationship between the Manpower Services Commission and non-statutory training organisations; and what action has been taken in the light of those representations.

Mr. Trippier: I attended the CBI's conference for non-statutory training organisations on 3 November 1986 and was impressed by the commitment to training shown by those present. The discussion showed that NSTOs greatly value the assistance of the Manpower Services Commission and that the MSC's statement on the ideal outcomes of the effective NSTO provides helpful guidance.

Mr. Latham asked the Paymaster General what is the current level of (a) financial support and (b) practical advice offered by the Manpower Services Commission to non-statutory training organisations; and what are the specific figures for the Pre-cast Concrete Training Industry Association.

Mr. Trippier: Most of the money non-statutory training organisations receive from MSC is for training grants claimed by employers under the national priority skills scheme. The current value of these grants in the current financial year to date is £6·6 million. Grants received in the current financial year by the Pre-Cast Concrete Training Industry Association total £4,800. MSC staff provide advice to all NSTOs, including the Pre-Cast Concrete Training Industry Association, on a wide range of training matters.

Mr. Latham asked the Paymaster General whether he will make a statement on the achievements to date of non-statutory training organisations since the abolition of 16 statutory training boards in 1982; what is the number of such organisations known to his Department; and what proportion of firms they cover for the industries which they serve.

Mr. Trippier: Non-statutory training organisations have made good progress since 1982 in securing sound training arrangements across their sectors. NSTOs have a vital role in identifying and meeting current and future skill requirements and assisting their sectors to meet them. I look forward to receiving their action plans for setting and maintainance of standards of competence in response to para 5.23 of the White Paper "Working Together — Education and Training" (Cmnd. 9823). There are 102 NSTOs recognised by the Manpower Services Commission. Information on the proportion of firms NSTOs cover is not readily available.

Job Training Scheme

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Paymaster General what is his policy with regard to the role of further education in the proposed job training scheme.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Training programmes under new JTS will consist of a planned mix of directed training and practical experience. Colleges of further education will be able to contribute to the scheme either as managing agents, or by offering directed training to other managing agents.

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Paymaster General what are the implications for equal opportunities of the eligibility rules for the new job training scheme.

Mr. Kenneth Clark [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987]: The eligibility rules of the new job training scheme will be fully constant with our commitment to equal opportunities.

Employment, Training and Enterprise Measures

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Paymaster General, pursuant to his reply of 5 February to the hon. Member for Leicester, East (Mr. Bruinvels), Official Report, column 764, if he will disaggregate the figure of 6½ million people who have benefited from the employment, training and enterprise measures run by his Department and the Manpower Services Commission since May 1979, indicating so far as is possible how many people have benefited from each measure in each year since that date.

Mr. Lee: The breakdown of the number of people on each scheme in each year since May 1979 is as follows:

	1979-80	1980-81	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86	1986-87[1]

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

South Africa

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he is taking to uphold the United Nations ban on arms sales to South Africa; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: Our policy on the United Nations arms embargo against South Africa remains unchanged: we fully implement the embargo.

Namibia

Mr. Cabora asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps Her Majesty's Government are intending to take to secure the implementation of United Nations Security Council resolution 435 on the independence of Namibia.

Mrs. Chalker: We shall continue to press for the early and unconditional implementation of United Nations Security Council resolution 435. We consider that its peaceful implementation can only be secured through negotiation, and shall accordingly continue to support the mediating efforts of the United States Government and the United Nations Secretary General.

Afghanistan

Mr. Sackville asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy towards relations with Afghanistan in the light of the Amnesty International report on that country, a copy of which has been sent to him.

Mr. Eggar: We do not have normal Government-to-Government dealings with the regime in Kabul which is clearly unacceptable to the majority of Afghan people. As I told my hon. Friend the Member for Ynys Môn (Mr. Best) on 13 February, we are deeply concerned at the horrifying evidence of denial of human rights in Afghanistan described in the Amnesty International report on torture.

Committee of Public Accounts (Recommendations)

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will list those recommendations of the Committee of Public Accounts since 1983 affecting his Department which have been implemented.

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. Member to the Treasury minutes published in response to the relevant PAC reports (Cmnd. 9178 and 9452 and 9638). The Committee, on which the hon. Member serves, monitors departmental progress with accepted recommendations.

Visas (Appeals)

Mr. Lawler asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion of those refused an application for a temporary visa in India, Pakistan and Bangladesh have lodged an appeal to the independent appellate authorities.

Mr. Eggar: From 15 October until the end of December the figures available show that a little over 10 per cent. of those refused short-term visas in India, Pakistan and Bangladesh have so far lodged appeals at our missions in the subcontinent.

Lebanon

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on steps taken by Her Majesty's Government with respect to relieving conditions in the Palestinian camps in the Lebanon.

Mr. Renton: We have urged all parties concerned to end the fighting and to facilitate humanitarian relief work. We are ready to provide help through the international agencies involved immediately it becomes possible to take more substantial supplies into the camps.

Visa Office, Lagos

Mr. Anderson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to meet the problems caused by the decision of the Nigerian Government to close the British visa office in Lagos; how many applicants he estimates to be affected by the decision; how much notice he was given of the decision; and what were the reasons given for it.

Mr. Eggar: Discussions are continuing with the Nigerian Government to seek solutions to a number of practical problems involving traffic and security at our new visa office in Lagos which the Nigerian Ministry of External Affairs raised with us on 11 February. Pending the outcome of these discussions, the new office is closed. In the meantime, only an emergency visa service for exceptional compassionate cases can be maintained. In the first week of the visa regime, we received 1,153 applications in Lagos. The Deputy High Commission in Kaduna continues to operate normal visa services.

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the problems facing visa applicants seeking access to the British High Commission in Lagos.

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Swansea, East (Mr. Anderson) earlier today.

TRANSPORT

Ports (Security)

Mr. Pendry asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to introduce security checks at ports in line with the procedures adopted by the Civil Aviation Authority.

Mr. Michael Spicer: My right hon. Friend has no statutory powers to direct port authorities and shipping companies on security matters, as he has in the case of airport authorities and airlines. My Department has, however, issued guidance to the shipping industry on the protection of shipping against terrorism and sabotage. In addition, the International Maritime Organisation has recently recommended to its member states certain measures to strengthen security at ports and on board ship, primarily in relation to passenger cruise ships. We fully support the IMO's initiative and in the light of its recommendations we are reviewing with port authorities and shipping companies the arrangements that they already operate.

Rail Closures

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy to refuse any application for closure of parts of the passenger rail system within the next financial year.

Mr. David Mitchell: My right hon. Friend set out his policy objectives for British Rail on 21 October 1986. They made it clear that the Government are not asking for a programme of major route closures. Any application for closure by BR is considered on its merits.

SCOTLAND

Criminal Procedure (Scotland) Act 1975

Mr. Allan Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received concerning the repeal of section 413 of the Criminal Procedure (Scotland) Act 1975; and what response he has given.

Mr. Rifkind: My Department issued a consultation document in August 1986 proposing that my present responsibility for children committed by the courts for residential training under section 413 of the 1975 Act should cease. Some respondents favoured repeal of section 413; others, including the Sheriffs Association, argued in favour of retaining a disposal for the courts in summary procedure which would allow the courts to commit children to residential care. I have concluded in favour of amending section 413. Amendments have been tabled to the Criminal Justice (Scotland) Bill, to be debated today in another place, which make revised provision under section 413 whereby a child prosecuted and found guilty of an offence may be ordered by a sheriff to be detained for up to one year in residential care in such place as the local authority may direct. The amendments also have the effect of withdrawing the power to commit young people under section 413 orders to penal establishments.

Mr. Allan Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he has any plans to meet the Scottish Association of Directors of Social Work to discuss section 413 of the Criminal Procedure (Scotland) Act 1975; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: I have at present no plans to do so. The association was consulted in August 1986 on proposals for amendments to section 413 which would transfer to local authorities my responsibilities for children committed to residential training in summary criminal proceedings. Amendment to this effect has been tabled to the Criminal Justice (Scotland) Bill in another place. Following passage of the Bill, my Department will consult with interested parties, including the association, on the timing and detailed implementation of the changes proposed.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish details of waiting lists for treatment at National Health Service hospitals in Scotland and by health board area in each year since 1983, including waiting lists for day care centres in each figure.

Mr. John MacKay: Information relating to day care centres is not available centrally. The numbers on hospital waiting lists at 31 March in each year since 1983 are as follows:

	1983	1984	1985	1986[1]
Scotland	96,921	85,471	79,413	81,250

Note: All data exclude joint user and contractual hospitals.

Fat Cattle

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the comparative price per kilo for fat cattle for the year 1986 and the latest price at the market sales in 1987; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: On average, Scottish certified cattle are currently being sold at several pence per kilo less than at the same time last year. Although this drop in price is partially offset by the recently increased beef variable premium, I share producers' hopes for an improvement in market prices.

Inverness Prison

Sir Russell Johnston asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the number of staff employed in Inverness prison in the various categories; how this compares with the approved complement; whether rostered posts include the five posts in the special unit; and what is the level of overtime required.

Mr. Lang: The numbers of staff employed in each category in Inverness prison and the corresponding approved complements are shown in the table:

Inverness prison

	Complement at 1 February 1987	Staff in post at 1 February 1987
Governors	2	2
Discipline	53	57
Caterers	2	2
Instructors	2	2
Works	7	6
Clerks	3	3
Typist	1	1
Total	72	75

Note:
The above staff in post figure includes two governor grades, 70 uniformed prison officer grades and three civilian grades.

The unit posts are not shown on the roster but two discipline senior officers (one for each of the early and late shifts) included in the complement to cover duties in the unit when the unit is occupied. The other posts in the unit are covered on overtime. Separate overtime figures for the unit are not available but during the period April to November 1986 the average weekly overtime per man at Inverness prison was 7·29 hours; this compares with an average of 7·54 hours per man for the Scottish prison service as a whole.

Chernobyl Radiation

Mr. Donald Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the highest levels of radiation found in each of the following sampled animals in Scotland since the Chernobyl incident (a) sheep, (b) cattle, (c) deer, (d) grouse, (e) salmon, (f) pheasant and (g) rabbit; and if he will also give the date and location of sampling.

Mr. Rifkind: The information for animals sampled by my Department is as follows:

	Highest Level (Becquerels per kilogram)	Date of Sampling	Location
(a) Sheep	4,218	9 July 1986	Dumfries and Galloway region
(b) Cattle	435	6 June 1986	Highland region
(c) Deer	2,281	9 December 1986	Dumfries and Galloway region
(d) Grouse	3,550	4 August 1986	Dumfries and Galloway region
(e) Salmon	121	16 September 1986	Dumfries and Galloway region
(f) Pheasant	295	19 December 1986	Dumfries and Galloway region
(g) Rabbit	830	28 August 1986	Dumfries and Galloway region

Paper Mill, Irvine

Mr. Pollock asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total number of jobs expected to be associated with the development by Kymmene-Stromberg of a new pulp and paper mill at Irvine.

Mr. Rifkind: The Kymmene-Stromberg paper mill at Irvine is expected to employ 480 people full time when the plant becomes fully operational in 1991.

In addition to direct employment at the paper mill, it is expected that 300 jobs will be required in harvesting and hauling timber for the mill with a further 100 jobs in other supporting service industries. The majority of these jobs will be in Highland and rural areas.

It is also estimated that up to 1,000 workers will be employed at peak during the construction of the mill over the next two years.

Caithness and Sutherland (Flow Country)

Mr. Corrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether the Forestry Commission has any plans to extend its present consultation arrangements with the Nature Conservancy Council over planting in the flow country of Caithness and Sutherland.

Mr. John MacKay: The Forestry Commission has decided to extend its consultation arrangements with the Nature Conservancy Council to cover all grant applications arising in the local authority districts of Caithness and Sutherland, including those still awaiting approval. This will allow time for the nature conservation interest in this unique area to be more clearly defined by the council.

Benefits

Mr. Bill Walker asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give details of the total number of individuals in receipt of housing benefit in Scotland in 1985 and 1986, respectively.

Mr. Lyell: I have been asked to reply.

The information is as follows:

Estimated numbers of housing benefit recipients in Scotland (Thousands)

	Rent Rebate	Rent Allowance	Rate Rebate
1985	571	64	779
1986	586	78	815

NATIONAL FINANCE

Value Added Tax

Mr. Alton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the proposed changes to the value added tax calculations on special schemes for retailers; and what impact this will make on mail order companies.

Mr. Brooke: The consultative paper "VAT: Small Business Review" contained 15 proposals, most of which are recognised as beneficial to small retailers. The proposal to abolish the standard method of reckoning gross takings would impact on those retailers, including mail order companies, which provide self-financed credit facilities. The Government are considering representations from the mail order industry which argue that this particular proposal is unjustified and would cost businesses in excess of £25 million a year.

EC Budget Council

Mr. Hirst asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the outcome of the latest meeting of the European Community Budget Council.

Mr. Brooke: The Budget Council met in Brussels on Thursday 12 and Friday 13 February for further discussion on the 1987 Community budget. I represented the United Kingdom.

The Council reached agreement by qualified majority on new proposals for the 1987 budget which provide for total expenditure of some 37·4 billion ecu in commitment appropriations and some 36·3 billion ecu in payment appropriations (£23·5 billion and £22·8 billion respectively.

All conversions are made at the 1987 budget exchange rate of 1·5939 ecu to the £.).

The proposals leave some 660 mecu of headroom inside the 1·4 per cent. VAT ceiling.

On agricultural guarantee expenditure, the Council's proposals continue to respect the budget discipline guideline limit. The Council has committed itself to reach decisions as soon as possible on Commission proposals for implementing the Agriculture Council's decisions on 16 December 1986 concerning the milk and beef sectors and on proposals which the Commission is to put forward shortly about covering the rest of the overrun of agricultural expenditure foreseen during the current year.

On non-obligatory expenditure, the Council agreed to accept the proposals for increases in individual lines voted by the European Parliament at its December plenary on the basis that these would be offset by negative reserves of 181·1 mecu (£114 million) for commitment appropriations and 88·9 mecu (£56 million) for payment appropriations. The Council's proposals assume that the Parliament will commit itself to making the necessary transfers and reductions in substantive budget lines in good time before the end of the year so as to extinguish the negative reserves and ensure that the budget totals for non-obligatory commitment and payment appropriations are respected. On payment appropriations, the Council's proposals continue to respect the maximum rate of increase. On commitment appropriations, the Council decided to exceed its November second reading proposals by some 5·2 mecu (£3 million) on the basis that the actual rate of increase over 1986 of 8·1499 per cent. when rounded to one decimal place would still be consistent with the 8·1 per cent. maximum rate. The Council also stated its intention to carry forward into 1987 some 22 mecu (£14 million) of associated non-obligatory commitment and payment appropriations not used in 1986.

I argued at the Council that, given the severe financial problems of the current year, the Community could not afford to increase substantive provision on individual payment appropriation lines even if the increases were offset by a negative payment reserve. While acknowledging that significant shortfalls of expenditure were virtually certain to occur on individual lines and could be used to extinguish the negative payments reserve, I argued that any such savings should be kept in hand in case they were needed to deal with the estimated deficit of over 800 mecu (£502 million) carried forward from 1986 or the large threatened overrun in agricultural guarantee expenditure. I argued also that it would be more prudent to make specific provision in the Financial Regulation to govern and limit the use of negative reserves before including them in the budget. On behalf of the United Kingdom, I voted against the Council's proposals on these grounds, even though the totals stick closely to budget discipline. The other Member states all voted in favour.

The Belgian presidency will present the Council's proposals to the Parliament's plenary in Strasbourg this week.

Exchange Rate (Fluctuations)

Mr. Chapman asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the outcome of consultations on the "Provisional Statement of Practice" issued by the Inland Revenue on the tax treatment of exchange rate fluctuations.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Following the issue of the provisional statement of practice [SP3/85 (provisional)] and the invitation to comment on its scope and content, the Inland Revenue received 28 responses from the major representative bodies and other interested parties. These have been carefully considered, and in the light of these comments the Inland Revenue are now, with my approval, issuing a full statement of practice to replace the provisional statement. This is intended as a general statement on the taxation of exchange rate fluctuations within existing law. I am placing a copy of it in the Library of the House.

We hope the new statement of practice will provide a useful and practical guide for traders and their advisers. However, this is an area of taxation which is widely recognised as highly technical and complex. We are anxious to see if a better solution can be found through legislation. Interested parties are invited to submit detailed representations to the Inland Revenue. We have certainly not ruled out the possibility of major legislative reform, but before committing itself, the Government would need to be satisified that a scheme could be devised which could be applied effectively in practice and reflect a broad measure of agreement without entailing an unacceptable cost to the Exchequer.

EC Economic and Finance Council

Mr. Chapman asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the latest meeting of the European Community's Economic and Finance Council.

Mr. Brooke: The Community's Economic and Finance Council met in Brussels on 9 February. I represented the United Kingdom.

The Council approved, by qualified majority, a Commission proposal on export credits, revising the details of the negotiating mandate on tied aid credits agreed by the Council in April 1986. The proposal, which the Commission is putting forward in OECD discussions, is intended to increase discipline in the use of tied aid credits, thereby reducing their distorting effect on international trade.

The Council had an exchange of views on the international monetary situation and on the economic situation in the Community. Discussion on the latter will continue at the Council's March meeting.

At my request, the Council also discussed the Commisison's proposal to delay reimbursement to the Member states of losses incurred on the disposal of butter stocks, which was considered substantively by the Council of Agriculture Ministers.

Gross Domestic Product

Mr. Forth asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has as to the rate of growth of gross domestic product over the last five years in (a) Italy and (b) the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lawson: The United Kingdom's economy has grown twice as fast as Italy's over the last five years. Real growth has been over 14 per cent.—double that of Italy, and faster than in any of the major industrialised countries except Japan.

The latest comparison by the OECD suggests that Britain's economy is about 14 per cent. larger than Italy's, and living standards per head are about 15 per cent. higher.

Even if GDP is compared at market exchange rates, without any allowance for differences in purchasing power, it is about 8 per cent. higher in the United Kingdom than in Italy, and about 9 per cent. higher per head of population.

The detailed figures for 1986 are as follows:

	Purchasing power of GDP		GDP at market exchange rates
	Level ($bn)	Per capita ($)	Level ($bn)	Per capita ($)
United Kingdom	645	11,400	545	9,600
Italy	565	9,900	505	8,800

Source: OECD/Eurostat estimates.

Incomes

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what evidence he has concerning the contribution by manufacturing industry to the increase in incomes over the past two years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: The latest information analysing total incomes by industry is that covering years up to 1985 contained in table 2.1 of the 1986 edition of "United Kingdom National Accounts" (the CSO Blue Book) which is available from the House of Commons Library.

Maintenance Payments

Mr. Favell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will state the cost of the revenue forgone of allowing court maintenance payments to children against tax during the last fiscal year.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Government Trading Funds

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report a table updating the reply of 20 November 1984, columns 97-98, on the financial performance of Government trading funds.

Mr. MacGregor: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report a table updating the reply of 25 October 1984, columsn 678-79, on the numbers of employees in Government trading funds; if he will additionally provide comparable information on the royal dockyards, Ordnance Survey and the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority.

Mr. MacGregor: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish an analysis of manpower reductions or changes in central Government trading funds for the years 1979-80 to 1985-86 using the same categories as in his Department's annual report on manpower reductions to the Treasury and Civil Service Committee.

Mr. MacGregor: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 25 October 1984 by my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Dover (Mr. Rees) at column 678.

Annual reports to the Treasury and Civil Service Select Committee on manpower reductions in the Civil Service for the years 1984-85 and 1985-86 were not published by the Select Committee but copies were placed in the Library of the House for the convenience of hon. Members.

Public Sector Finance

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report showing for the Royal Ordnance plc, the Royal Mint, Crown Suppliers, Her Majesty's Stationery Office, the royal dockyards, Ordnance Survey, and the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority for the years 1974-75 (a) the proportion of turnover accounted for by central Government, (b) the proportion of turnover accounted for by the United Kingdom public sector and (c) the proportion of turnover which is exported.

Mr. MacGregor: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Banking Regulation

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met the Governor of the Bank of England to discuss the Bank's role in the regulation of the banking system.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The Treasury and the Bank of England are in frequent touch about banking supervision issues. However, it is not the practice to disclose the matters discussed between my right hon. Friend the Chancellor and the Governor.

Civil Service (Payroll Giving Scheme)

Mr. Yeo asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps have been taken to enable Civil Service employees to donate money to charity under the payroll giving scheme when the scheme comes into effect on 1 April.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987]: I intend that a scheme will quickly be arranged once one or more suitable collection agencies are registered.

WALES

AIDS

Mr. Geraint Howells asked the Secretary of State for Wales what guidance his Department has given to education authorities in Wales about educating young people on the danger of AIDS; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The Welsh Office, together with the Department of Education and Science, issued to local education authorities and other appropriate bodies in June 1986 a booklet "Children at School and Problems Related to AIDS".

SOLICITOR-GENERAL FOR SCOTLAND

State Security

Mr. Bill Walker asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland why it was necessary to seek a warrant covering all six programmes in the British Broadcasting Corporation series, "The Secret Society"; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: The petition and crave for the warrant are linked back to highly classified information in the possession of the BBC referred to in the article in the New Statesman magazine of 23 January 1987. If the material sought had been readily and immediately available, the necessity for taking possession of material relating to all six programmes in the series, "The Secret Society", and for a sifting out operation which has had to be carried out since 1 February and which has already resulted in the return of material relating to five of the six programmes to the BBC, would have been avoided. However, as my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary explained in the debate on 3 February 1987, the material on which the programmes were based was so interwoven that it was not possible immediately to disentangle one kind of material from another. That accurately reflected the advice given by the BBC to the police and reported to the procurator fiscal.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Parliamentary Procedures

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the measures introduced by his Department since 1979 that were not subject to parliamentary procedure and therefore not debated in the House of Commons.

Mr. Tom King: All primary legislation for Northern Ireland (Bills and Orders in Council under the Northern Ireland Act 1974) is subject to parliamentary procedure. The Northern Ireland Statutory Rules and Orders, available in the Library, indicate the volume and nature of subordinate legislation and identify those Statutory Rules and Orders which were laid before Parliament.

Youth Committee

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the Northern Ireland Youth Committee.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Youth Committee for Northern Ireland is in the process of being reconstituted and an announcement will be made shortly.

Life Prisoners

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) in how many cases in each year, since the introduction of the review procedure for life-sentenced prisoners, on which the board had recommended that a release date be given, he has rejected the review board's recommendation;

(2) what is the procedure for the review of life sentences for prisoners convicted of offences in Great Britain but serving their sentences in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Guinness plc

Sir Alex Fletcher asked the Attorney-General if he will refer to the Director of Public Prosecutions, with a view to a request for inquiries by the police, the allegations that criminal offences were conducted by or on behalf of Guinness plc during its takeover of Distillers plc; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General: The DTI inquiry into Guinness is proceeding and there is already close liaison with the Director of Public Prosecutions, who is being advised by leading counsel. The question whether to request police inquiries is among those now under active consideration by the Director of Public Prosecutions.

Electronic Data System Limited

Mr. Dalyell asked the Attorney-General what action the Director of Public Prosecutions proposes to take in the case of alleged infringement of immigration rules by Electronic Data System Limited.

The Solicitor-General [pursuant to the reply, Official Report, 30 January 1987, c. 407]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Home Department on 4 February 1987 at column 682 and confirm that at no time was the matter referred to the Director of Public Prosecutions and he is not proposing to take any action.

ENVIRONMENT

Houses (Radon Levels)

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his statement on 27 January, Official Report, column 189, concerning radon levels in houses, what estimated relevant expenditure will be incurred by his Department during the current year and 1987-88; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: As I indicated on 27 January, there will be a Government-funded survey to identify the houses in Devon and Cornwall with the highest radon levels and a measurement service provided by the National Radiological Protection Board to enable people living in any area where radon concentrations might be above or near the action level to find out the radon concentration in their houses at no cost to themselves. A price for this work has not yet been agreed with NRPB; I will write to the hon. Member with this information in due course.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, further to his reply to the hon. Member for Yeovil on 9 February, Official Report, column 115, concerning advice given by officials of his Department in 1971, what was the maximum annual exposure to radiation calculated for residents of that property; whether any factors contributing to that calculated maximum exposure have been subject to revision since 1971; whether exposure from radon gas was part of the 1971 calculations; if he has any plans to undertake further investigations of radioactivity in or near that property; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: The maximum annual exposure to radiation calculated in 1971 for residents of the property referred to in my reply to the hon. Member on 9 February was 1,200 millirems (12 milliSieverts). However, as this measurement was designed to assess the potential health implications arising from the location of the property at an old uranium mine, only the gamma dose rate was calculated. Subsequent attempts to measure the alpha dose rate arising from radon and its decay products at this property have been made by the National Radiological Protection Board as part of its preliminary radon surveys, but the occupants have not been prepared to take part in the surveys. I understand that they will receive a further invitation to participate in the systematic survey which I announced on 27 January.

Job Creation (Cost)

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the average cost per job created by urban development grant schemes.

Mr. John Patten: The 228 urban development grant projects so far approved represent £106 million of UDG and other public expenditure. It is estimated that, when completed, these projects will accommodate some 24,000 permanent jobs and will also have brought about 12,500 man years of construction activity and £441 million of private sector capital investment, as well as providing nearly 5,000 houses and flats and bringing into use 900 acres of urban land. Some offers of UDG are in whole or in part justified on grounds other than direct job creation, and average cost per job is not therefore a measure which fully reflects the performance of the programme.

Nuclear Waste

Sir Trevor Skeet asked the Secretary of State for the Environment which nuclear power stations are used for the retention of nuclear waste.

Mr. Waldegrave: Nuclear waste is stored temporarily at all nuclear power stations pending disposal at Drigg.

NIREX

Sir Trevor Skeet asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether it is his intention to introduce legislation to give NIREX powers for compulsory purchase.

Mr. Waldegrave: No.

Circuit Breakers

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to how many local authorities have installed circuit breakers in property which they are responsible; how many new homes have such equipment; if he has had discussions with contractors in the private and public sectors about such installations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: The Department does not have any information on the numbers of local authorities that have installed circuit breakers in their property nor on new homes fitted with such equipment. No discussions with contractors in the private or public sectors have been held, but I understand that the Institute of Electrical Engineers already recommend that electric sockets used for outdoor appliances should be protected by residual circuit breakers.

Parish Council Elections

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those parish councils whose revised electoral arrangements have been submitted to his Department for approval but for whom no review order has yet been made; if he will indicate the date of submission in each case; and whether all such orders will be made and delivered by 6 March to enable the local elections in those authorities to be held under the new arrangements.

Mr. Chope: Under section 50(4) of the Local Government Act 1972, the electoral arrangements for parishes are the responsibility of the district council.

Children's Play

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what response he has made to the proposals put to him by the National Play Advisory Committee entitled Playboard and the future of central Government funding, for a national play service; and whether he intends any further response during the current discussions between the Sports Council and Playboard.

Mr. Tracey: I have met representatives of the National Play Advisory Committee to discuss their concerns about and their proposals for the future development of children's play. As I have explained to them, the Government remain convinced that the proposals for Playboard's role and functions to be merged with those of the Sports Council represent the most cost-effective use of public funds for the greater benefit of children's play.

Nature Conservancy Council

Mr. Rogers asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many people are and have been employed in the Nature Conservancy Council in each year since 1979 according to age, sex, occupation and profession.

Mr. Waldegrave: The information is not available in the form requested. However, I am advised by the Nature Conservancy Council that the number of permanent and casual staff employed as at 1 April of each year since 1979 is as follows:

at 1 April

	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985	1986

Mr. Rogers asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many graduate staff are employed by the Nature Conservancy Council, by occupation, grade and categorised under the subject of their first degree.

Mr. Waldegrave: This information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Rogers asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many full-time geologists are employed in the Nature Conservancy Council; in what grades categories; and on what form of contracts;

(2) how many full-time biologists are employed in the Nature Conservancy Council; in what grades and categories; and on what form of contracts;

(3) how many full-time geological assistants and technicians are employed in the Nature Conservancy Council; in what grades and categories; and on what form of contracts;

(4) how many full-time biological assistants and technicians are employed in the Nature Conservancy Council; in what grades and categories; and on what form of contracts.

Mr. Waldegrave: I am advised that the Nature Conservancy Council employs 17 full-time geologists (including geomorphologists). These comprise 10 permanent appointments (one grade 7, four SSO, five HSO), four limited period appointments (two HSO, two SO) and three casual appointments (one SSO, one HSO, one SO).

Twenty-nine biologists are employed full time by Nature Conservancy Council (10 grade 7, nine SSO and nine HSO) on permanent appointments and one period appointment. In addition there are a number of limited term and casual appointees employed on finite projects under Nature Conservancy Council's commissioned research programme.

Geological Conservation Review

Mr. Rogers asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how the geological conservation review is co-ordinated and supervised; and how it will be co-ordinated and supervised in the future.

Mr. Waldegrave: I am advised that the Geological conservation review is a key part of the NCC's earth science conservation programme. All work on the selection and safeguard of GCR sites and the publication of the review is co-ordinated by professional geologists and geomorphologists employed within the earth sciences division of the Chief Scientists Directorate. A professional overview on publication strategy is provided by a committee consisting of earth scientists from NCC's council, advisory committees and staff. There are no plans to change the existing arrangements.

Mr. Rogers asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what localities throughout Great Britain have already been selected for conservation by the geological conservation review unit; when they were first identified as being worthy of conservation; and when notification was completed under the provisions of section 28 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act as amended in 1985.

Mr. Waldegrave: The information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, the Nature Conservancy Council estimates that about one third of the sites originally identified as potential geological sites of special scientific interest have been notified under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Rogers asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the figures for support through the survey monitoring budget for geological sites of special scientific interest and biological sites of special scientific interest.

Mr. Waldegrave: I understand from the Nature Conservancy Council that because many sites are of special interest for both geological and biological reasons, monitoring costs cannot be separated in the way suggested.

Mr. Rogers asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy towards the statement by the chairman of the Nature Conservancy Council on page 7 of the 12th annual report (1985-86) regarding the priority to be given to the renotification of sites of special scientific interest; and what is his assessment of progress to date on these renotifications.

Mr. Waldegrave: I agree that the notification and renotification programme for sites of special scientific interest should have priority. The Nature Conservancy Council is still on schedule to achieve the targets set out in the 12th annual report.

Trafford Park

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he had with local people about the composition of the board of the urban development corporation for Trafford Park; why no representative of trade unions was placed on the board; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: I have discussed the membership of the Trafford Park development corporation with the local authorities concerned and with industrialists in the area. I consulted the local authorities, on behalf of my right hon. Friend, about the proposed appointment of members with special knowledge of the locality.

None of the board members are representatives of particular interests; they have been chosen because of their ability to do the job. Any further appointments to the board will be made on the same basis.

Urban Programme Assistance

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those authorities to receive urban programme assistance in 1987-88; and if he will give the proposed allocations to those authorities.

Mr. John Patten: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Batley and Spen (Mrs. Peacock) on 30 January at column 457-60.

British Coal (Housing)

Mr. Barron asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had with British Coal about the sale of its PRC homes; what advice he has given on this matter; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Energy and I have discussed this matter with British Coal. British Coal's housing disposal policy, including its application to PRC properties, must be a matter for British Coal to decide.

Tillingham Hall, Essex

Mr. Proctor asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to be able to issue a decision about the proposed development at Tillingham Hall, Essex; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley: I have today issued a decision letter on three appeals by Consortium Developments Limited. Two related to identical applications for planning permission for a comprehensive development including 5,100 dwellings in the metropolitan green belt between Havering and Basildon. The third appeal was against failure to decide an application for a consequential extension of the Upminster sewage treatment works.

I have considered carefully the report of my inspector following the public inquiry held between 18 March and 15 May 1986. As far as the Tillingham Hall site is concerned, I have concluded that, whilst recognising the merits of the proposals, there is no justification for allowing this development in the metropolitan green belt. I have dismissed the third appeal since planning permission for the proposed development at Tillingham Hall is not to be given.

These decisions illustrate the Government's strong commitment to the maintenance of approved green belts.

Housing Subsidy

Mr. Robert B. Jones asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what conclusions he has reached on the consultations dated 19 September and 18 December 1986 about housing subsidy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: After consultation with the local authority associations and the Audit Commission, I have decided to proceed with the proposals which were put to the local authority associations in September about sinking fund rates, in order to limit the payment of housing subsidy in advance of need. These proposals affect cases in which authorities decide to slow down repayments of debt by increasing the accumulation rate for their sinking funds. In future, in order to strike a better balance for subsidy purposes between short term and long term considerations, such authorities will be required (in the absence of exceptional circumstances) to use their actual sinking fund rate in subsidy calculations, if it is 8 per cent. or lower; and to use a notional rate of 8 per cent. for subsidy purposes, if their actual sinking fund rate is higher than 8 per cent. Applications currently with the Department will be decided in accordance with the previous practice for 1985-86 and 1986-87, but the revised treatment will apply to those authorities from 1 April 1987. Proposals are being made today to the other authorities concerned for modifying previous special determinations, as from 1 April 1987, to accord with the revised treatment. I emphasise that these decisions relate solely to payment of housing subsidy, and do not imply a Government view about what sinking fund rate may be appropriate for different authorities.

In relation to capitalisation of repairs, the proposals put to the local authority associations in December were designed primarily to prevent a risk of double subsidy where extensive use of capitalisation depresses an authority's revenue expenditure on management and maintenance below the notional amount allowed in the subsidy calculations. I have concluded that these proposals ought to proceed, but in order to allow the authorities most directly affected time to adjust they will have the opportunity of applying for a special determination which would allow them to use, for 1987-88 only, an alternative method of preventing double subsidy suggested by the local authority associations which will spread the impact on their finances over a longer period.

Insulation

Mr. Faulds asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, further to the reply to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Edgbaston (Dame J. Knight), Official Report, 28 January, column 244, when he expects consideration of future arrangements for help with the cost of materials for draught-proofing to be completed; what representations he has received from Neighbourhood Energy Action on this matter; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: An announcement on future arrangements for help with the cost of materials for draughtproofing will be made in due course. I have recently received a letter from the NEA about this.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prison Officers

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of times on which prison officers were sent on detached duties at each London prison during the month of December 1986; and how many officers were involved in each case.

Mr. Mellor: The number of times on which prison officers were sent on detached duty at each London prison during December 1986 is shown in column A. Column B gives the total number of officer days involved.

	A	B
Brixton	15	264
Holloway	1	2
Pentonville	23	159
Wandsworth	19	215
Wormwood Scrubs	28	310

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of (a) men and (b) women at prison officer training schools on 31 January 1987.

Mr. Mellor: On 31 January 1987 there were 70 men and 10 women undergoing training at the prison officer training schools.

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the number of women prison officers who have resigned from the service at Holloway prison during the last year; and what survey has been, or is to be, held to find out the reasons for their leaving the service.

Mr. Mellor: During 1986 a total of 41 women members of the prison officer class at Holloway prison resigned. The reasons have been analysed in the course of a review of personnel management issues at Holloway.

Prisons (Administration)

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department who is designated to take charge of one of Her Majesty's prisons in the event of any local police officers being called in to run such a prison; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: Police officers entering a prison department establishment to assist in the maintenance of order act under the command of the senior police officer present. The prison governor remains responsible for the management of the establishment.

Fresh Start Project

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the number of meetings in the last 12 months, and their dates, at which his officials have met officers of the executive committee of the Prison Officers Association to discuss the fresh start project.

Mr. Mellor: Officials discussed the fresh start proposals, or contributory developments, with NEC members or officials of the Prison Officers' Association on 14 occasions, the dates concerned being:

1986
3 March
27 March
13 May
30 May
31 July
16 September
15 December
18 December

1987
12 January
19 January
26 January
29 January
6 February
12 February

In addition fresh start was touched on incidentally during other meetings.

Crown Immunity

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to seek the removal of Crown immunity on prisons in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: None. I am satisfied that our existing arrangements are effective and can see no justification for the removal of Crown immunity from prisons.

Prison Officers (Training)

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of (a) men and (b) women who passed their training courses at prison officers training schools in England and Wales during 1986.

Mr. Mellor: The figures are 883 men and 125 women.

Fresh Start Scheme

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what additional financial funding is to be made available to introduce fresh start; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: No additional funds have been set aside at this stage for the introduction of fresh start and it would not be appropriate for me to say any more while negotiations with the trade unions are in progress. When they are concluded the Government will have to assess whatever emerges in value for money terms.

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what extra staffing he expects to recruit for the introduction of fresh start; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The precise staffing requirement of fresh start cannot be determined until each establishment has been reviewed and a complement derived in accordance with fresh start principles and normal consultative arrangements. The current view is that the overall numbers of staff in the service should be sufficient.

Prison Department (Estates)

Mr. Wheeler asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the prison department establishments in England and Wales and give the total acreage of the prison estate; when the last valuation was carried out on all buildings and land; and what was the total value.

Mr. Mellor: Prison service establishments in England and Wales are:

The total acreage of the prison estate is about 20,000 acres. No total valuation of the buildings and land has been undertaken; the figure would vary considerably according to the basis of valuation.

Metropolitan Police Vehicles (Accident Statistics)

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers, and how many members of the public were killed, and how many were injured, in accidents involving metropolitan police vehicles in the years 1984, 1985, and 1986; and how many of these deaths and injuries in each year resulted from accidents for which police drivers were assessed by the police to have been wholly or partly responsible.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis has provided the following information in relation to police vehicle accidents involving deaths:

Fatal accidents involving Metropolitan Police vehicles

	1984	1985	1986
Number of fatal accidents	10	6	4
Number of police officers killed	1	0	1
Number of civilians killed	11	7	4
Number of accidents in which police assessed as blameworthy	[1]1	1	[2]0

[1] Assessment on 2 accidents not yet completed, pending the outcome of court proceedings.
[2] Assessment on 3 accidents not yet completed.

Detailed information on the numbers injured in police vehicle accidents was not collected prior to October 1985, but there were 99 police vehicle accidents involving injury in 1984 and 76 such accidents between 1 January and 30 September 1985 (inclusive). The figures since then are given in the table.

Injuries in accidents involving Metropolitan Police vehicles (Number of injuries arising from accidents where the police were assessed as blameworthy given in brackets).

Official Secrets Act 1911

Mr. Lawrence asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has for the reform of section 2 of the Official Secrets Act 1911.

Mr. Hurd: We have no such proposals at present.

Committee of Public Accounts (Recommendations)

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will list those recommendations of the Committee of Public Accounts since 1983 affecting his Department which have been implemented.

Mr. Hurd: I refer the hon. Member to the Treasury Minutes published in response to the relevant reports of the Committee of Public Accounts (Cmnd. 9696, 9743, 9859, 9917). The Committee, on which the hon. Member serves, monitors departmental progress with accepted recommendations.

Myra Hindley

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, pursuant to his answer of 2 February, Official Report, column 475, he will estimate the cost to the Metropolitan police of the helicopter used to transport Myra Hindley; why this cost was not charged to the Greater Manchester police under mutual aid procedures; whether the cost of police overtime charged cover the costs of transport for each police force; what costs to police forces arose other than as a result of overtime; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that the additional cost of using a Metropolitan police helicopter to transport Myra Hindley to and from Saddleworth moor is esitmated at £1,200. The Metropolitan police may not seek any payment for the use of their helicopters because they do not hold an air operator's certificate under the Air Navigation Order 1985.

The cost of police overtime does not include transport costs. Apart from overtime the only other additional cost which is readily available is £460 for the provision of catering facilities for police officers at Saddleworth moor.

District Councils (Electoral Arrangements)

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list by population size those district councils whose revised electoral arrangements had been submitted to his Department within the required time scale, but for whom the necessary review orders have yet to be made; when he expects to sign those orders currently outstanding; and whether all such orders will be made and delivered by 6 March to enable the local elections in those authorities to be held under the new arrangements.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The table shows the eight districts in respect of which we have received reports from the local government boundary commissions and have not yet made electoral arrangements orders.

All the reports were submitted in November or December last year. Because of the amount of administrative effort entailed in considering reports and preparing orders, where a report is received late in the year it may not be possible to make the necessary order in time for the local elections the following May.

Priority is being given to the implementation of the reports on the Welsh districts, where the new orders will replace arrangements made in 1973. We expect to make orders for Dinefwr and Preseli shortly, and we hope to make an order for Montgomeryshire by 6 March. An order was made in respect of Carmarthen on 11 February.

The reports in respect of the English districts are being considered in order of receipt. We hope it will be possible to make orders by 6 March in respect of the first three reports received (relating to South Ribble, Kingswood and Chelmsford); but there will not be enough time to implement the Commissions' reports on Blyth Valley and Warrington before the May elections. The local authorities concerned have been informed.

District council	Population[1]	Date report submitted
Warrington	177,500	17 December 1986
Chelmsford	147,900	2 December 1986
South Ribble	99,200	1 December 1986
Kingswood	87,900	2 December 1986
Blyth Valley	78,000	11 December 1986
Preseli	70,300	4 December 1986
Montgomeryshire	48,900	18 December 1986
Dinefwr	37,100	27 November 1986

Immigrants (Expenditure)

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 5 February, Official Report, column 792, how much money has been allocated under section 11 of the Local Government Act 1966 since 26 March 1986, in each local authority, to post-school educational institutions; and if he will give a breakdown as to the various purposes for which these funds have been allocated.

Mr. Waddington: Grant under section 11 of the Local Government Act 1966 is paid to local authorities on the cost of employment of staff to help meet the special needs of people of Commonwealth origin. The following posts on which grant has been sought and approved since 26 March 1986 are in post school education. An accurate estimate of our commitment in respect of these posts in the current year cannot be given before claims have been made. The table therefore shows a figure for grant based on the estimates made by local authorities at the time of application.

Local Authority and Post	Estimated Grant 1986-87 (£)
Lancashire
Co-ordinator, race equality unit (Lancashire Polytechnic); co-ordinator of units activities generally.	13,214
Warwickshire
500 hours English home tuition: teaching of English as a second language.	2,780

Remand Population

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what, for the latest available, was the total remand population in England and Wales;

(2) for the latest date available what was the total remand population for the south-east region.

Mr. Mellor: The latest available information is for 31 December 1986, when the remand population is seasonally low. On that date about 10,010 untried or convicted unsentenced prisoners were held in prison department establishments in England and Wales of whom about 3,710 were held in the south east region of the prison department.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he is taking to seek to reduce the remand population.

Mr. Mellor: Our measures to limit the untried prison population include: exploring the reasons why bail is objected to, or refused; giving the Crown prosecution service the duty of reviewing and presenting any police objections to bail; encouraging probation service experiments to see if the courts can usefully be given better information when deciding whether or not to grant bail; seeking to ensure that enough places are available in bail and other hostels; and introducing statutory time limits on periods in custody in criminal proceedings, which we shall apply from April 1987 in three police areas before extending them throughout England and Wales. The Lord Chancellor is taking further steps to tackle Crown court delays, finding more resources and introducing management measures to make the best use of them. Ultimately, it is up to the court to determine whether a person is kept in custody or not.

Bail

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to introduce legislation to facilitate greater use of bail by the courts.

Mr. Mellor: The Bail Act 1976 contains a general presumption in favour of bail, subject to certain exemptions. We have no plans to introduce legislation to amend these exceptions, but if the hon. Member has any specific proposals I should be ready to consider them.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list information available to him as to the main grounds upon which bail is refused in magistrates' courts.

Mr. Mellor: The main circumstances, as specified in the Bail Act 1976, in which a defendant need not be granted bail are if the court is satisfied that there are substantial grounds for believing that the person, if released on bail, would abscond or would commit an offence while on bail or would interfere with witnesses or otherwise obstruct the course of justice. When considering whether any of those exceptions to the right of bail applies, the court has to have regard to relevant considerations including the nature and seriousness of the alleged offence and the probable method of dealing with the defendant for it. An analysis of the specific reasons given by magistrates' courts for refusing bail is not available and could not at present be provided without disproportionate cost.

Remand Prisoners

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what resources he is allocating to the probation service to assist its work with remand prisoners.

Mr. Mellor: Most probation officers spend some of their time helping in connection with persons on remand. In particular, probation committees assign probation officers to prison department establishments, where they play an active role in the throughcare of all inmates, including those on remand. The cost of the salaries and allowances of the probation officers so assigned, of whom there were 493 on 31 December 1986, is reimbursed in full by Prison Department.

In addition to this general current work, the probation services in Hereford and Worcester, Leicestershire, Greater Manchester, Northumbria, Staffordshire and the West Midlands are experimenting with a number of different schemes, mainly court-based, which are aimed at reducing the remand prison population; and the inner London probation service is planning to start a scheme next week, based at Wormwood Scrubs prison. With one exception, all these experimental schemes are being provided for from within existing probation service resources, which are 80 per cent. funded by the Home Office and 20 per cent. funded by the local authorities. The salary and allowances of the leader of the two-year pilot project at Brockhill remand centre is being reimbursed in full by prison department.

Detained Youths

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many youths aged (a) under 14 years, (b) 14 years, (c) 15 years and (d) 16 years, respectively who are currently detained under section 53(2) of the Children and Young Persons Act 1933, are being held in penal establishments.

Mr. Mellor: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list these occasions since 1984 when the Metropolitan police have received assistance from other police forces (a) within the United Kingdom and (b) outside the United Kingdom;

(2) if he will list the occasions since 1984 when the Metropolitan police has seconded or otherwise provided officers to assist other police forces (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) outside the United Kingdom.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [pursuant to his reply, 29 January 1987, c. 341]: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that two police officers have been seconded to the Kent force and one to the City of London police through arrangements for management exchanges which were introduced by the Metropolitan police on 1 January 1987. The Metropolitan police received three officers from those forces in return. There is no central record of the occasions, other than under the mutual aid arrangements, when the Metropolitan police provided or received other assistance. I understand that since 1984 the Metropolitan police have not received mutual aid from other forces.

The following officers have been seconded overseas since 1984:

CIVIL SERVICE

Radcliffe Rules

Sir Marcus Fox asked the Minister for the Civil Service if he will review the Radcliffe rules with a view to updating the list of those subversive organisations, membership of which precludes employment in the Civil Service.

Mr. Luce: It has remained the policy of successive Governments, as recommended in the Radcliffe report (Cmnd. 1681), that no one should be employed in connection with work the nature of which is vital to the security of the state who:

(a) is, or has recently been, a member of a Communist or Fascist organisation, or of a subversive group, acknowledged as such by the Minister, whose aims are to undermine or overthrow parliamentary democracy in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland by political, industrial or violent means;

(b) is, or has recently been, sympathetic to or associated with members or sympathisers of such organisations or groups, in such a way as to raise reasonable doubts about his reliability;

(c) is susceptible to pressure from such organisations or groups.

It is for consideration in each case whether a particular organisation or group is covered by this definition. I see no reason to change this practice.

No one is precluded from employment in the Civil Service solely because of membership of a particular organisation.

DEFENCE

DROPS

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence which of the firms he has listed as having been involved in his Department's demountable rack off-loading pick-up system programme contributed original ideas which are now untilised in the demountable rack off-loading pick-up system equipment owned by his Department; if he will say what such ideas are; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Of the firms listed in my reply of 16 December 1986 (Official Report, c. 302), Foden, Multilift, and Powell Duffryn have all since supplied equipment for the DROPS procurement programme and which is now owned by the Department. I have no indications that these equipments were other than original to the firms or used information to which they had no entitlement.

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence what comparative assessment he can make of (a) the extent of the involvement, (b) the duration of the involvement, (c) the closeness of the involvement, (d) the cost to the company and (e) the value to his Department of the contribution made, as between the companies involved in his Department's DROPS consideration between 1975 and 1982; and what assessment he can make of the comparative importance of the role played by each company in the process of considering the DROPS project.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is not possible to make the comparative assessment requested since the information on which it would need to be based is not available. The value of the part played by Boughton has, however, been acknowledged in correspondence between my right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for Defence and my right hon. Friend in February 1984.

Procurement Policy

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's policy towards the encouragement of competition in equipment procurement; what steps are taken to ensure that no attempt is made to restrict competition; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is our policy to seek competition wherever reasonable and practicable in order to achieve the best value for money in defence procurement. It is not in our interest to restrict competition, though we have a clear responsibility not to waste industry's or the Ministry's resources by inviting more bids than can adequately be assessed or by encouraging bids which have no reasonable prospect of success.

National Employer Liaison Committee

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Defence, further to his reply to the hon. Member for Ynys Môn of 29 January, if he will make the report of the national employer liaison committee available in the Library.

Mr. Freeman: As stated in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Ynys Môn (Mr. Best) on 5 February 1987, Official Report, c. 797-8, the report of the national employer liaison committee is an interim report, setting out a number of recommendations, along with proposals for further areas of study. These recommendations and proposals are being considered, and until this action is completed it would be premature to make a copy of the report available in the Library.

Rapier

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Defence, further to his answer to the hon. Member for Ynys Môn of 29 January when he expects to make an announcement as to a firm commitment and the date of entry into service of a Rapier battery for the United Kingdom/Netherlands landing force.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is not our practice to comment on such matters.

Cairo (Ministerial Visit)

Sir Dudley Smith asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the recent visit of the Minister of State for Defence Procurement to Cairo.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My noble Friend visited Egypt between 2 and 5 February at the invitation of the Egyptian Minister of State for Military Production. He had discussions with the Egyptian Prime Minister, Minister of Defence and other members of the Egyptian Government and visited Egyptian factories. Lord Trefgarne was warmly received by his hosts who welcomed the close and friendly relationship our two countries now enjoy and the extensive contacts existing between British firms and Egyptian organisations, which the visit helped to reinforce at a political level.

Tornado

Mr. Warren asked the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he received from the United States of America concerning the possible purchase of Tornado aircraft before his announcement of the intended purchase of the Boeing airborne warning and control system aircraft; what discussions have taken place about such a purchase since that date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has received no representations on such a purchase, nor has he had any discussions on the matter.

Radioactive Waste

Sir Trevor Skeet asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the nature and quantity of radioactive materials being considered for storage at Chatham dockyard and referred to on 2 February, Official Report, column 782, by the Under-Secretary of State for Defence Procurement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There are no firm plans for the storage of radioactive materials at MOD Gillingham (formerly Chatham dockyard). What I am considering is the need for the temporary storage there of short-life intermediate level radioactive material. This will involve no extension to existing facilities at Gillingham.

Royal Yacht (Refit)

Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Defence what was the original estimate for the refit of the Royal Yacht Britannia; what is the latest estimate; and what are the reasons for the increase.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The estimated costs, which are still under consideration, are commercial in confidence.

Departmental Property

Mr. Steen asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the acreage of land owned by his Department abroad; how many acres his Department has rights over in addition; and what is the market value of the Department's assets in (a) land and (b) other property including buildings.

Mr. Freeman: The Ministry of Defence owns virtually no land overseas but some 125,000 hectares (308,000 acres) are either made available to the Department by host Governments or leased; the Department additionally has rights of access over 80,000 hectares (198,000 acres). The market value of the assets could not be provided without incurring disproportionate cost.

Trackway (Patent Violation)

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will expedite the sending of the draft letter which has been waiting since before Christmas for Treasury Solicitors' approval about the unlawful marketing by the Singapore Government in Malaysia and Thailand of trackway in breach of a British patent held by Laird (Anglesey) Limited.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: This matter raises difficult questions. A letter will be sent as soon as possible.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Student Grants

10. Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the value of the maximum student grant in real terms compared with 1978-79.

Mr. Walden: The main rate of grant for the majority of students is currently £1,901; from the next academic year it will be £1,972. The equivalent grant in 1978-79 was £1,100, which would be worth £2,204 today. Students may be eligible for additional allowances depending on their circumstances.

14. Mr. James Lamond asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he now expects the Government's review of student grants to be completed.

32. Mr. Heathcoat-Amory asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he expects to complete his review of support for higher education students.

48. Mr. Michie asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he now expects the Government's review of student grants to be completed.

51. Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he now expects the Government's review of student grants to be completed.

Mr. Walden: I refer hon. Members to the answer I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Leicester South (Mr. Spencer).

21. Mr. Patrick Thompson asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he next plans to meet the Committee of Vice Chancellors and Principals to discuss student support.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend has no present plans to discuss student support with the Committee of Vice Chancellors and Principals but I will be meeting it on 9 March to hear oral evidence to the current review of student support.

34. Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received on the level of student grants; and if he will make a statement.

41. Sir David Price asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether, in view of the Select Committee's report on student awards dated 16 December 1986, he will make an early response to its recommendation that there is an urgent need for an increase in real terms, in student awards.

44. Mr. Livsey asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations have been made to his Department about the mandatory student awards for 1987-88; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: Since the beginning of October 1986 about 320 representations have been received relating in one way or another to the level of student grants. These included a full submission from the National Union of Students recommending levels of grant, and changes to the regulations, for 1987-88, which was discussed at a meeting with the Department's officials. In addition, the Education, Science and Arts Committee of this House published its report on student awards last month, and about 100 organisations or persons have submitted evidence in response to the invitation of the review of student support.

As my right hon. Friend announced on 30 January at column 401, the main rates of grant for the 1987-88 academic year will be increased in line with the forecast rise in the retail price index. I would expect the Government's response to the first report of the Education, Science and Arts Committee to be published before the summer recess.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what the total cost or the estimated total cost to parents of the assessed contributions to student grants has been in each year since 1978-79 to the latest date for which figures are available (a) in cost terms and (b) indexed using 1978-79 as a base.

Mr. Walden: The information below relates to all full value mandatory and discretionary awards.

England and Wales

Academic year	Assessed parental contributions £ million cash[1]	Index of assessed parental contributions (1978-79 = 100)
1978-79	99	100
1979-80	92	93
1980-81	107	108
1981-82	137	138
1982-83	167	169
1983-84	184	186
1984-85	251	254

[1] Including a notional assessment in respect of minimum award holders.

Birkbeck College

11. Mr. Stanbrook asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement about the present and future funding of Birkbeck college, University of London.

Mr. Walden: Following the University Grants Committee's decision to increase their original grant to London University for 1986-87 by £600,000, the Court of the University allocated £7·88 million to Birkbeck for the current year. For the next three years, the Committee has decided that Birkbeck should be treated as a special factor in its calculation of the block grant to the University. The internal distribution of the block grant will be for the University to decide.

Scottish Universities

12. Mr. Kennedy asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the anticipated level of funding for the Scottish universities in the forthcoming financial year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: The Scottish Universities will receive £189 million in recurrent grant for academic year 1987-88 plus some part of the equipment grant and other monies yet to be allocated by the University Grants Committee.

Schools (Capital Works)

13. Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what estimates are available to his Department of the total costs of capital works in schools necessary for local education authorities to implement the provisions of the Education Act 1981; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: No estimate is possible since capital expenditure depends on how each LEA decides to meet the requirements of the Act in practice, and on the characteristics of its existing capital stock.

16-plus Students

15. Mr. Dixon asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what percentage of young people aged 16 years plus have remained in full-time education in each of the last five years.

Mr. Evans asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what percentage of young people aged 16-plus years have remained in full-time education in each of the last five years.

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer the hon. Members to my reply to the hon. Member for Tyne Bridge (Mr. Clelland) earlier today.

School Books

16. Mr. Sean Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the level of expenditure on school books in England and Wales for each of the last three years.

Mrs. Rumbold: Local education authorities in England spent just over £64 million on school books in 1984-85, the latest year for which firm figures are available. In both 1982-83 and 1983-84 the figure was £65 million. Expenditure on schools in Wales is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Teachers (Pay)

17. Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what progress has been made towards a settlement of the teachers' pay and conditions dispute; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The Teachers' Pay and Conditions Bill received its Third Reading in the House of Lords yesterday. I continue to hold meetings with the local authorities and teacher unions. I regret that there has been no significant movement towards the Government's position.

University of East Anglia

18. Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has any plans to visit the school of development studies at the University of East Anglia.

Mr. Walden: I am hoping to visit the University of East Anglia later this year.

Children (Special Education)

19. Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many children were assessed and made the subject of a statement for special educational needs in Essex for each of the last three years.

Mrs. Rumbold: According to the Department's records, the number of children in Essex who were newly assessed and made the subject of a statement during the last three years for which figures are available were in 1983, 1,257; in 1984, 733 and in 1985, 930.

The figures for 1983 include both children ascertained under the Education Act 1944 and children with statements under the Education Act 1981. The figures for 1984 and 1985 relate solely to children with statements.

Brain Drain

20. Mr. Norman Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he is taking to stop the brain drain from higher education institutions in the United Kingdom.

46. Mr Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he is taking to seek to stop the brain drain from higher education institutions in the United Kingdom.

52. Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he is taking to seek to stop the brain drain from higher education institutions in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Walden: I refer hon. Members to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Dundee West (Mr. Ross).

LEAs (Capital Allocations)

22. Mr. Stan Thorne asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many local education authorities he has met since June 1983 about increasing the money allowed to them for repairs of school buildings.

29. Mr. Haynes asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many local education authorities he has seen since June 1983 about increasing the money allowed to them for repairs of school buildings.

33. Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many local education authorities he has seen since June 1983 about increasing the money allowed to them for repairs of school buildings.

Mrs. Rumbold: Ministers at the Department have held numerous meetings with local education authorities at which questions relating to the repair of school buildings have been raised; but the Department does not keep records from which the information requested could be obtained.

Adult Education

23. Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what discussions his Department is conducting into promotion of adult education in basic skills of literacy and numeracy; and if he will make a statement.

43. Mr. Beaumont-Dark asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what plans he has to deal with the problem of adult illiteracy.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend gives high priority to the funding of the adult literacy and basic skills unit in order to stimulate further development of the provision of education in adult basic skills, and to reduce problems of literacy and numeracy amongst adults. Grant from the Department of Education and Science has risen from over £470,000 in 1980-81 to over £2,050,000 in 1986-87; a fourfold increase.

The Department has frequent discussions with the adult literacy and basic skills unit, other relevant government departments and the MSC about how provision for adult basic skills can be developed and extended and is represented on the unit's management committee.

Grammar Schools

24. Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received in support of the expansion of grammar schools; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend receives such representations from time to time, usually in connection with proposals for the closure of grammar schools made under section 12 of the Education Act 1980.

Education and Industry

25. Mr. O'Brien asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on new initiatives to develop education and British industry.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Government are aware of the need for the education system to develop effective partnerships with industry and commerce. A number of measures have been introduced to support this policy. We will keep the situation under review but there are encouraging signs that the education system, thanks partly to Industry Year, is increasingly aware of industry's needs; the onus is now on industry to respond to this.

Part-time Students (Fees)

26. Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will reconsider his policy on charging tuition fees to part-time students at universities and polytechnics.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend sees no reason to change present practice whereby most universities, polytechnics and colleges charge fees for part-time students roughly pro-rata to fees for full-time home students.

National Federation of Voluntary Literacy Schemes

27. Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he last met representatives of the National Federation of Voluntary Literacy Schemes.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend has had no meetings with representatives of the National Federation of Voluntary Literacy Schemes.

Higher Education

28. Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the number of students currently in higher education; and how this figure compares with eight years before.

Mr. Walden: Provisional information for 1985 indicates there were 528,000 home full-time students and 328,000 part-time students in higher education in Great Britain. The equivalent figures for 1977 were 449,000 and 242,000 students, respectively.

Lancashire (Educationa Standards)

30. Mr. Robert Atkins asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when Her Majesty's inspectorate last conducted an investigation into education standards in Lancashire.

Mrs. Rumbold: Since 1 January 1983 there have been 19 published reports by Her Majesty's inspectors on schools, colleges and other aspects of education in Lancashire. There will be further formal inspections as necessary as part of Her Majesty's inspectorate's national programme. Her Majesty's inspectors also carry out each year a large number of less formal visits to schools and colleges in Lancashire, either as part of broad national surveys of certain aspects of educational provision or to keep in touch with developments in the particular institution. At the end of these visits Her Majesty's inspectors report orally to the head or principal on what they have found, but the visits do not lead to published reports. In addition, Her Majesty's inspectors had a range of meetings with officers of the Lancashire LEA to discuss aspects of education in the authority.

City Technology Colleges

31. Mr. Kenneth Carlisle asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if there are any plans to establish a city technology college in Lincoln; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend has received no proposals to establish a city technology college in Lincoln. If there is support within the local community for the establishment of a college, he would be pleased to consider any proposals which are put forward.

49. Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to how much money has been raised from private sources to date towards the construction of 20 city technology colleges.

Mrs. Rumbold: A number of prospective sponsors have offered financial and other assistance. Other individuals and organisations are known to be developing proposals but are not yet ready to put detailed proposals to the Department. The offers currently under discussion would support CTCs in a number of locations but I am not yet in a position to publish a more precise figure.

57. Mrs. Shields asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is his latest estimate of the proportion of capital costs of city technology colleges likely to be borne by his Department.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend intends that all or a substantial part of the capital costs of city technology colleges will be met from private sources such as industry and commerce or educational charities. The proportion to be borne by the Department will vary according to local circumstances. I am unable to offer an estimate at this stage in the negotiations with prospective sponsors.

National Curriculum

35. Mr. Galley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what proposals he has to introduce a national curriculum for schools; and if he will make a statement.

36. Mr. Leigh asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on his plans for a national curriculum.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend's proposals are set out in his speeches to the North of England Conference on 9 January and to the Society of Education Officers on 23 January; copies of both have been placed in the Library. He has invited comments on those proposals from all concerned, both inside and outside the education service.

Unemployed People

37. Mrs. Golding asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he is taking to encourage education for the unemployed.

Mr. Walden: I refer the hon. Member to the reply of 2 December 1986 by my hon. Friend the Member for Mitcham and Morden (Mrs. Rumbold) at column 745 and to the reply of 20 January by my hon. Friend the Member for Dartford (Mr. Dunn) to the hon. Member for St. Helens, North (Mr. Evans) at column 498.

New Technology

38. Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on recent progress in the education for the new technology programme.

Mrs. Rumbold: The integration of new technology in schools is promoted by the microelectronics education support unit. This was established in 1986 to follow up the work of the microelectronics education programme. It has an annual budget of some £3 million and is now fully operational.

Tertiary Education

39. Mr. McLoughlin asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many representations he has received from local education authorities wishing to introduce a tertiary level of education.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend is currently considering five proposals under section 12 of the Education Act 1980 which involve the establishment of new tertiary colleges.

"Civil Research and Development"

40. Mr. Wrigglesworth asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he now intends to publish a response to the report of the House of Lords Committee on Science and Technology entitled "Civil Research and Development"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: The response to this report is being coordinated by the Cabinet Office. The Government aim to issue it before the summer recess.

Dorset Institute of Higher Education

42. Mr. David Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received in support of polytechnic status for the Dorset institute of higher education.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend has received 10 letters in recent months from hon. and right hon. Members in support of the Dorset institute of higher education.

Bradford

45. Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give further consideration to providing additional resources to Bradford local education authority.

Mrs. Rumbold: There are no resources available from which my right hon. Friend could increase Bradford's allocation.

11-plus Selection

47. Mr. Rogers asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has any plans to reintroduce selection at 11-plus.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Birmingham Ladywood (Ms. Short).

Schools (Competition)

50. Mr. Lord asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what new plans he has to introduce into the nation's schools more competition in both work and play.

Mrs. Rumbold: Pupils are naturally competitive. Schools have a long tradition, which this Government believe they should sustain, of channelling this spirit and the urge to better personal performance to good effect.

Nursery Places

53. Mr. McWilliam asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the current number of places in nursery schools or nursery classes in England; and what percentage of three and four year olds have full-time places, and part-time places, respectively.

Mrs. Rumbold: Information on the number of places in nursery schools and nursery classes is not collected centrally. The number of pupils aged 3 and 4 attending maintained nursery schools or nursery classes in January 1986 in England was 39,414 full-time and 207,479 part-time. These represented 3·4 per cent. and 17·7 per cent. of the estimated 3 and 4-year-old population respectively.

Schools (Distribution of Resources)

54. Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he takes to ensure that those schools who by their excellence have a waiting list for pupil admission receive a fair distribution of resources by their local education authority.

Mrs. Rumbold: Local education authorities determine the allocation of the resources available to them in the light of local needs and circumstances, and in accordance with priorities set locally.

Teachers' Pay

55. Mr. Andrew MacKay asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a further statement on the teacher's pay dispute.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Ealing North (Mr. Greenway).

Mentally Handicapped Children

56. Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will undertake an examination of the implementation of the procedures of the Education Act 1981 with regard to maximising educational opportunities for mentally handicapped children within the community.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend intends to review all aspects of implementation of the Education Act 1981 in the light of the findings of the Select Committee's inquiry into special education.

Teachers' Superannuation Fund

58. Mrs. Virginia Bottomley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he has any plans to review his policy and procedures with regard to independent schools' use of the teachers' superannuation fund.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend has no plans to reconsider the basis on which independent schools may participate in the teachers' superannuation scheme.

He is however reviewing the Department's procedures for monitoring the salary progression of teachers approaching retirement. Pension benefits depend in part on teachers' final salaries, and some schools have recently increased the salaries of teachers approaching retirement. Where he considers salary to have been increased unreasonably my right hon. Friend has power to direct that pension benefits should be based on a lower salary.

Conductive Education

59. Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what further consideration he has given to the funding of the study of the Hungarian technique of conductive education; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: Following discussions between officials of my department and the DHSS and representatives of the National Foundation for Conductive Education and Birmingham university, the university has been invited to submit a formal application for assistance towards the cost of evaluating the conductive education project being established by the foundation in Birmingham. A decision on the application will be reached as soon as possible after it is received.

Sixth Form Colleges

60. Mr. Squire asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many education authorities have submitted proposals for sixth form colleges since May 1979.

Mrs. Rumbold: Since May 1979, 27 local education authorities have published proposals under section 12 of the Education Act 1980 for the establishment of sixth form colleges.

University Grants Committee

61. Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he last met the chairman of the University Grants Committee; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: In the course of normal business, my right hon. Friend sees the chairman of the University Grants Committee frequently, most recently on 29 January.

Village Primary Schools

62. Mr. Yeo asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what recent representations he has received about small village primary schools.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend has received representations from the National Association for the Support of Small Schools and the National Federation of Womens Institutes. In addition he has received representations on behalf of a number of individual schools.

University College of North Wales

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the effect on the University College of North Wales, Bangor, of the mathematical formula adopted by the University Grants Committee for the distribution of funds for each year since its inception.

Mr. Walden: The table shows the initial basic distribution of recurrent grant in respect of the University College of North Wales, Bangor for 1987-88, together with the comparable figure for 1986-87 and the provisional basic distributions for 1988-89 and 1989-90. The figures exclude elements of the recurrent grant to which the University Grants Committee's new funding method does not apply and adjustments in connection with the development of oceanography at the College.

£ million.

Year	Number
1986-87	11·018
1987-88	11·095

[1]1989-90	10·862

[1] Provisional.

Universities (Grants)

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what he expects to be the effect on smaller universities of the mathematical formula for the distribution of funds adopted by the University Grants Committee.

Mr. Walden: I refer my hon. Friend to UGC circular letter 6/87 of 10 February 1987, a copy of which is in the Library. Paragraph 10 of that letter reads:

A number of institutions have commented that, by basing its resource allocations on a resource per student which depends on subject but not on institution, the Committee has put small institutions at a disadvantage because they have relatively high overheads. This point has been examined by statistical analysis and the conclusions do not support the hypothesis that as a general rule small institutions have higher unit costs than large institutions. The Committee nevertheless expects to give further thought to this point. Meanwhile the grant distributions announced in this letter do not take account of any effect that size might have.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will set out the mathematical formula adopted by the University Grants Committee for the distribution of University Grants Committee funds to universities; if he proposes to take over this function himself; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: The method employed by the University Grants Committee for the distribution of recurrent grant in 1986-87 was described in detail in the Committee's circular letter 22/85 of 19 November 1985. Modifications introduced for the distribution of recurrent grant in 1987-88 are described in circular letter 6/87 of 10 February 1987. Copies of both letters are in the Library. The distribution of grant to individual universities is properly a matter for the University Grants Committee, and my right hon. Friend has no plans to take it over.

Mr. Henderson asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to the amount of the recurring grant provided by his Department for universities through the University Grants Committee which has been spent in meeting rates bills by universities in (a) Scotland, (b) England and Wales and (c) total (i) in 1979 and (ii) the most recent year for which figures are available.

Mr. Walden: The amounts of recurrent grant paid to universities by the University Grants Committee for the purpose of paying local authority rates in Scotland, England and Wales and Great Britain in the academic years 1979-80 and 1985-86 are as follows:

£'000 cash

	1979-80	1985-86
Scotland	9,790	24,677
England and Wales	26,982	67,154
Great Britain	36,772	91,831

University Applicants

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many university applicants there were in each year since 1978-79; and how many candidates were finally accepted in each of those years.

Mr. Walden: Applicants and acceptances through the Universities' Central Council on Admissions scheme for universities in the United Kingdom were as follows:

Academic year of entry	Applicants	Acceptances
1978	157,506	80,530
1979	166,362	82,398
1980	168,354	84,695
1981	167,096	80,341
1982	171,496	77,752
1983	172,738	74,860
1984	173,674	77,431
1985	176,553	82,889
1986	173,779	84,524

Advanced Further Education

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to the age participation index for students in full-time advanced further education in each country in the European Community.

Mr. Walden: The table shows new entrants to all higher education as well as to non-university institutions, expressed as a percentage of a single year age cohort (the average population in the most relevant age range).

Figures for non-university institutions only can be misleading for international comparisons, as countries designate institutions as universities or otherwise according to their own conventions and practice. Figures for full-time study only are not readily available.

The United Kingdom figures and to the best of our knowledge those for other countries include entrants of all ages; the Open University and other part-time study; nurses and other paramedical students at National Health Service training establishments.

[1] Those entering higher education for the first time, full-time and part-time, of all ages, as a percentage of the population in the specified age range, divided by the number of single years involved.

[2] Age group encompassing at least 70 per cent. of new entrants.

[3] 18 for degree-level only in 1984; 51 per cent. of all enrolments are below degree level.

[4] Not available; 58 per cent. of all higher education enrolments are in non-university institutions.

[5] Most students participate in higher education outside Luxembourg.

[6] Includes certain part-time students previously excluded.

[7] Partly estimated.

[8] Students from abroad are excluded, as are postgraduates and others already having a higher education qualification. Excludes students studying for higher education qualifications outside of the public education system other than nursing and paramedical students at DHSS establishments. If all private sector and correspondence courses were included the United Kingdom figures might be around 40 per 100.

Open University

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish in the Official Report the total cost to Open University students of summer school fees together with the number of students embarking on a summer school course, by subject, for each of the last five years for which information is available.

Mr. Walden: The information requested is:

	1982	1983	1984	1985	1986
Fee levels[1]	£77	£82	£84	£94	£99

Total undergraduate summer school numbers	34,140	37,423	35,828	33,474	33,320

[1] In addition to fees students also have to meet the cost of travel to summer schools. It is not possible to estimate these.
[2] 'U' courses are interdisciplinary courses.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish in the Official Report the number of students who have enrolled with the Open University in each year since it was established in 1969, the global student population of the Open University in each year, and the number of students graduating in each year.

Mr. Walden: The information requested is as follows:

[6] Estimate.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has on the geographical distribution of student enrolments in the Open University in the last year for which information is available.

Mr. Walden: In 1985 the distribution of student enrolments was as follows:

Region	New undergraduate students	Associate students[1]
London	1,668	1,496
South	1,196	828
South West	944	544
West Midlands	1,195	820

Scotland	1,438	725
Northern Ireland	401	228
South East	1,026	710
Total	13,870	8,999

[1] Associate students take single undergraduate level courses but do not follow a degree course.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what percentage of Open University students have applied to pay their fees in instalments in each year from 1983.

Mr. Walden: The Open University no longer collects this information. All its students are offered the facility of paying their tution fees by instalments; they do not have to apply to do so.

University Teachers

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many university teachers were employed in universities in the United Kingdom for each year since 1978-79; how many held temporary posts; how many held permanent posts; and what are the equivalent figures for research staff.

Mr. Walden: Information on permanent and temporary posts in universities is not available centrally. The numbers of academic staff employed in universities in the United Kingdom are as follows. Information for 1985-86 is not yet available.

	Full-time
	Teaching and research	Research only	Part-time[1]	All academic staff
1978-79	34,378	7,489	1,521	43,388

1984-85	32,654	11,538	3,495	47,687

[1] The breakdown of part-time staff between teaching and research is not readily available.

University Staff

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish in the Official Report the number of university staff for each year since 1978-79, broken down into categories of academic, academic related and non-academic staff.

Mr. Walden: Information for 1985-86 and for non-academic staff is not readily available. The remaining information is as follows:

University staff: Great Britain

	Full-time		Part-time
	Academic	Academic related	Academic	Academic related

Universities (Expenditure)

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish in the Official Report the equivalent of table 3.12.9 in the public expenditure White Paper (Cmnd. 56), "Age Participation Index and Qualified Participation Index", for universities only.

Mr. Walden: The information is shown in the table:

API and QPI for universities in Great Britain

Academic year beginning	Age participation index[1] (API)	Qualified participation index[2] (QPI)
Actual
1981	7·2	47·7
1982	6·8	44·4

[1] The API is defined as the number of initial home entrants aged under 21 expressed as a percentage of the average of the number of 18 and 19-year-olds in the population.

[2] The QPI is defined as the number of initial home entrants aged under 21 expressed as a percentage of the number of qualified school and FE leavers in the previous academic year.

[3] Provisional.

Mature Students

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many applications were made by mature students for entry to courses in higher education for each of the last 10 years; and how many were accepted.

Mr. Walden: The numbers of home applicants and acceptances, for students aged 21 and over through the Universities' Central Council on Admissions scheme have been as follows:

	Applicants	Acceptances
1976	15,176	6,303
1977	16,247	6,583
1978	16,699	6,998
1979	17,893	6,956
1980	17,776	7,122

1983	15,513	5,590
1984	16,534	6,249
1985	17,669	7,072

Similar figures for public sector higher education are not yet available. However, the total numbers of mature home students actually entering full-time higher education are as follows:

Special Schools (Closures)

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish in the Official Report the criteria he adopts in deciding whether to permit the closure of special schools.

Mrs. Rumbold: In deciding whether to approve proposals to close maintained special schools under section 14(5) of the Education Act 1981, my right hon. Friend has regard to the local circumstances in each case and, in particular, to whether the alternative provision proposed by the local education authority is appropriate to meet the special educational needs of all the pupils on the roll of the school at the proposed date of closure.

A copy of the Department's circular 3/82 "Section 14 of the Education Act 1981: Discontinuance of Maintained Special Schools" is being placed in the Library.

Committee of Public Accounts (Recommendations)

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will list those recommendations of the Committee of Public Accounts since 1983 affecting his Department which have been implemented.

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer the hon. Member to the Treasury Minutes published in response to the relevant PAC reports on matters addressed to my Department. These related to:

(i) Control of Manpower in Non-Departmental Public Bodies sponsored by the Department of Education and Science: PAC 31st Report, 1983-84 Session. Treasury Minute: Cmnd. 9368, published on 24 October 1984.

(ii) Redundancy Compensation Payments to University Staff: PAC 41st Report, 1985-86 Session. Treasury Minute: Cmnd. 9917, published on 22 October 1986.

The Committee, on which the hon. Member serves, monitors Departmental progress with accepted recommendations.

Careers Teachers

Mr. Lawler asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many specialist careers teachers are employed in England and Wales compared with 1977.

Mrs. Rumbold: The latest available information is derived from a sample survey carried out by this Department in 1984. This indicated that in maintained secondary schools in England there were some 800 full-time teachers for whom careers lessons formed the largest teaching subject. There were nearly 1,000 full-time teachers who had a higher education qualification in which careers education had been a main or subsidiary subject, compared with about 500 (in England and Wales) recorded by a similar sample survey in 1977.

Learning Difficulties

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what evidence he has in the light of the operation of the Education Act 1981 on the extent to which children with moderate learning difficulties can integrate into the mainstream educational system.

Mrs. Rumbold: The 1981 Act requires that children with statements of special educational needs should be educated in ordinary schools subject to certain conditions, including that educating the child in the ordinary schools is compatible with his receiving the special educational provision he requires. The implementation of integration policies depends on careful planning and preparation, and intensive in-service training for the staff involved, as well as appropriate resourcing of the mainstream schools.

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is his policy towards the degree of choice to be offered to parents with children with moderate learning difficulties of sending them to special schools catering specifically for their needs.

Mrs. Rumbold: Section 2 of the Education Act 1981 requires local education authorities to secure that a child with a statement of special educational needs is educated in an ordinary school, subject to account being taken of the views of the child's parents, and to certain conditions, including that educating the child in the ordinary school is compatible with his receiving the special educational provision that he requires. The 1981 Act provides for a partnership between parents and local education authorities. Local education authorities are required to ensure that parents of children with special educational needs are involved in the assessment procedure and that they are consulted about the special provision to be made to meet their children's needs.

Languages

Mr. Forth asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to the numbers of people in the United Kingdom who speak languages other than English as (a) their first and (b) their second language, and the public expenditure associated with the promotion of each such language.

Mrs. Rumbold: This information is not available.

Higher Education

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he expects to publish his White Paper on higher education.

Mr. Walden: Our Green Paper "The Development of Higher Education into the 1990s" (Cmnd. 9524) said we would make a further statement in the light of responses and of a further review of policies. One follow-up was the review of the University Grants Committee, chaired by Lord Croham GCB, the report of which was published last week (Cm. 81). My right hon. Friend will make a statement as soon as he is ready to do so.

Literacy and Numeracy

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science, further to his reply to the hon. Member for Yeovil on 11 February concerning statistical information on literacy and numeracy problems, what is his estimate of the total number of adults with inadequate basic skills of literacy or numeracy; when a major survey of the extent of such problems in literacy and numeracy was last funded by his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 11 February at columns 222-23.

The Department of Education and Science contributed 17 per cent. of the cost of the National Child Development Survey Study of 1981. No major surveys have been funded since that time.

Responsibility for the provision of adult basic skills tuition within the education service rests with local education authorities. My right hon. Friend looks to the adult literacy and basic skills unit to act as a central focus to assist LEAs and voluntary organisations in establishing new basic skills provision and developing existing provision in order to meet the needs of their local communities.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Registration Service

Mr. Hind asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will make a statement as to the present position or recommendations made in the scrutiny report on the registration service in England and Wales.

Mr. Newton: Following the announcement in the other place by my noble Friend of publication of the report on 24 October 1985 (House of Lords Official Report, column 1374) we received over 350 responses to the invitation to comment on the recommendations. The views expressed were most valuable and we are grateful to those who commented.

In the light of those consultations we have rejected the proposals to close the central searching and certificate issuing facility, to introduce loose-leaf registers, and to record the National Health Service number on the medical certificate of cause of death.

Many of the recommendations require primary legislation, including those on responsibility for the service, the creation of a single job of registrar dealing with marriages, birth and death registrations, and the great majority of those on procedures. Those recommendations affecting marriage law would, moreover, require amendment to the Marriage Acts. We have concluded that it will not be possible to legislate on these matters in this Parliament.

There is, however, no such obstacle to implementing the rest of the recommendations, covering local organisation of the service, staffing and pay, new technology, certain general procedures and finance. We have asked the Registrar General to pursue these recommendations, in consultation with other interested parties, including the staff interests where appropriate.

Close consultation and liaison with local authority interests will be essential. Some recommendations will be suitable for early implementation; others will require further study and piloting.

The number of local registration offices is primarily a matter for local authorities, and it will be for them to decide what action to take on those recommendations. Any reorganisation of the local registration arrangements must take account both of costs and of local demand for the service, and must ensure adequate facilities are available and accessible for the public to carry out their registration obligations.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Sir Fergus Montgomery asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what further action he proposes to reduce waiting lists and times.

Mr. Fowler: The Health Service is now treating record numbers of patients and waiting lists are far shorter than when this Government came to office. We want now to make further improvements.

In July 1986 I launched a three-year drive to reduce waiting lists and times in the National Health Service. The chairman of regional health authorities reported to me on the nature, extent and cause of waiting list and time problems in every district. These reports set out the action already under way and that proposed for 1987-88 to make significant improvements. To allow health authorities to build further upon those plans and make more rapid progress, I announced in November a £50 million waiting list fund over the next two years. Regional health authorities have submitted bids for the first allocation of £25 million for 1987-88 and I am today announcing the allocations from the fund for each region.

The result is that over the coming year health authorities intend to treat over 100,000 additional patients from the in-patient waiting list. All told, this extra £25 million will finance over 350 different projects throughout the country. I expect this to lead to significant improvements in waiting list totals. Many of the projects will additionally result in improving waiting time for first out-patient appointments.

The plans submitted by health authorities have been carefully considered under the supervision of Sir Roy Griffiths, the deputy chairman of the National Health Services Management Board. The aim has been to target resources at districts with the worst problems and where central funding can have the most impact.

The regional chairmen's reports confirm our view that the cause of excessive waiting lists varies from district to district and specialty to specialty. Many can be improved within existing resources and districts are acting upon those now. Other problems require special, additional funding, for equipment, supplies, staff, or additional operating sessions at evenings and weekends.

The projects funded are of many different types:

> We are funding a mobile operating theatre in Mersey region which would allow an additional 1,680 in-patient cases (including 120 hip replacements) in a full year;
> We are funding an additional out-patient clinic in Trent region allowing 1,200 children to be seen in the ear, nose and throat specialty;
> We are building day theatres and day wards and so allowing many more cases to be treated without the need for in-patient admission; and enabling the purchase of ophthalmic and gynaecological lasers allowing patients to be treated as out patients or day cases.

Among the new operations to be performed there will be at least 5,000 extra hip replacements and 8,000 extra cataract operations as well as a range of other surgery where patients have often had to wait in pain and discomfort.

In some cases, regions have found that patients can have earlier treatment if they are willing to travel, perhaps between neighbouring districts, or in exceptional cases through the cost effective use of the private sector. A major feature of the waiting list drive, and of the bids put forward, has been to assist the matching of spare capacity in the Health Service with excessive waiting lists elsewhere. Regions have been asked to make sure, also, that general practitioners receive all the information they need about waiting lists and waiting times in their own and neighbouring districts.

The projects funded and the action programmes already under way will lead to significant improvements in waiting times for patients. With the continued active involvement of clinicians and general practitioners, health authorities and health service management, I am sure that further substantial progress is possible. The allocations from the fund I have announced today are another major step towards that.

The regional allocations from the waiting list fund are set out in the following table:

Allocations of waiting list fund 1987-88

Region	Allocation £ million
Northern	1·700
Yorkshire	1·757
Trent	2·400
East Anglia	1·018
North West Thames	1·590

Asbestos

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the number of deaths resulting from asbestosis in the Crewe and Nantwich constituency for the periods 1981-82, 1982-83, 1983-84, 1984-85, 1985-86 and 1986-87.

Mrs. Currie There have been no deaths registered to usual residents of the Crewe and Nantwich parliamentary constituency (1983 boundaries) with an underlying cause of death of asbestosis from mid-1981 to mid-1986. Statistics for underlying cause of death are not yet available for the period mid-1986 to mid-1987. There have been a number of deaths registered where asbestosis was mentioned on the death certificate, but was not the underlying cause of death, and details of these are given in the table.

Number of deaths to usual residents of Crewe and Nantwich parliamentary constituency (1983 boundaries) with any mention of asbestosis on the death certificate mid-1981 to mid-1986

Period	Number of deaths
mid-1981 to mid-1982	2
mid-1982 to mid-1983	3
mid-1983 to mid-1984	2
mid-1984 to mid-1985	1
mid-1985 to mid-1986	3

Food Poisoning

Mr. O'Brien asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has as to the number of food poisoning cases reported in the United Kingdom by people who have been visiting EEC countries, particularly Spain; and what action he intends to take to reduce such numbers.

Mrs. Currie: The information requested is not available. The total figures of food poisoning cases presumed contracted abroad for England, Wales and Scotland from 1982-85 are, however, set out in the table together with the total number of cases for those years. No "contracted abroad" figures are kept for Northern Ireland.

	Contracted Abroad	Total Cases
1982	1,627	16,839
1983	1,956	19,915
1984	2,089	22,390
1985	†1,935	†21,019

†Provisional

If serious outbreaks involving large numbers of United Kingdom citizens are brought to our attention, the Department would contact the national authorities concerned and ask them to investigate. Should the risks be considerable, a statement might be issued to warn those about to visit the affected area.

Maternity Payments

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in (a) Scotland, (b) Strathclyde region, (c) Glasgow district and (d) Shettleston constituency, claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many are expected to qualify each year for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: In the 12 months ending 31 December 1986 the following number of claims to maternity grant were made at the Department's offices which cover the areas in question.

	Number
(a) Scotland	59,419
(b) Strathclyde region	30,593
(c) Glasgow district	10,880
(d) Shettleston constituency	1,013

It is not possible to predict how many women in the areas of the question will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Crewe and Nantwich claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Crewe and Nantwich are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested. The Crewe and Nantwich constituency is covered by the Department's office at Crewe although its boundaries are not coterminous with the constituency. The number of claims received for maternity grant in the Crewe local office during the calendar year 1986 was 2,134. It is not possible to predict how many women in Crewe and Nantwich will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Sheffield, Central claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Sheffield, Central are expected to qualify annually for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested. The Sheffield, Central constituency is covered by the Department's offices at Sheffield, north-east, Sheffield, north-west, Sheffield, south-east and Sheffield, south-west although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The numbers of claims received for maternity grant in each of the four local offices during the calendar year 1986 were as follows:

	Number
Sheffield, North-East	1,579
Sheffield, North-West	1,933
Sheffield, South-East	1,243
Sheffield, South-West	1,793

It is not possible to predict how many women in Sheffield Central will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mr. Mikardo asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in the city of Westminster claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in the city of Westminster are expected to qualify annually for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested. In the 12 months ending 31 December 1986 the following numbers of claims to maternity grant were made at the Department's offices which cover the City of Westminster, although their boundaries are not conterminous:

	Number
Euston	856
Paddington	1,138
Cricklewood	633
Chelsea[1]
Westminster[1]

[1]Claims for these offices are dealt with at Aldershot Out-station. A total of 3,085 claims were dealt with at that office but this total includes claims proper to other offices.

It is not possible to predict how many women in the City of Westminster will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mr. Randall asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Luton, South claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Luton, South are expected to qualify annually for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested. The Luton, South constituency is covered by the Department's office at Luton, although its boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The number of claims received for maternity grant in the Luton local office during the calendar year of 1986 was 3,029. It is not possible to predict how many women in Luton, South will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Walthamstow claimed maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Walthamstow are expected to qualify for a payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested. The Walthamstow constituency is covered by the Department's office at Walthamstow although its boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The number of claims received for maternity grant at Walthamstow local office during the calendar year 1986 was 1,901. It is not possible to predict how many women in Walthamstow will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mr. Roy Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Newport, East claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many such women are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested. The Newport, East constituency is covered by the Department's office at Newport although its boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The number of claims received for maternity grant in the Newport local office during the calendar year 1986 was 2,711. It is not possible to predict how many women in Newport, East will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Cynon Valley claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many such women are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested. The Cynon Valley constituency is covered by the Department's offices at Aberdare and Pontypridd although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The numbers of claims received for maternity grant in each of the two local offices during the calendar year 1986 were as follows:

	Number
Aberdare	788
Pontypridd	1,182

It is not possible to predict how many women in Cynon Valley will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many single payments for maternity items were paid to supplementary benefit claimants in 1984 and 1985; and what was the average amount paid for each claim in each of these years.

Mr. Lyell: The latest available information comes from the November 1984 "Annual Statistical Enquiry", and records 189,000 (to nearest '000) payments for maternity needs, at an average amount of £68·18.

(Note: ASE data record the number of single payments made during the 12 months preceding the date of the inquiry to persons in receipt of supplementary benefit at the time of the inquiry. As a result they do not record all the single payments made during the year).

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many single payments for maternity items were made to women in Bradford in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Lyell: I regret that the information requested is not collected by individual local offices and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in the Eccles constituency claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in the Eccles constituency are expected to qualify in a year for a maternity payment from the social fund after April; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested. The Eccles constituency is covered by the Department's offices at Salford North and Salford South although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The numbers of claims received for maternity grant in each of the two local offices during the calendar year 1986 were as follows:

	Number
Salford North	1,508
Salford South	1,066

It is not possible to predict how many women in the Eccles constituency will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Devon and Cornwall, respectively, received the maternity grant in the last 12 months for which figures are available; and how many women there are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested. In the 12 months ending 31 December 1986 the following numbers of claims to maternity grant were made at the Department's offices which cover Devon and Cornwall although the boundaries are not conterminous.

	Number
Devon:
Barnstaple	1,418
Devonport	1,815
Exeter	2,496
Plymouth	2,742
St. Austell	1,383
Torbay	2,142
Cornwall:
Launceston	361
Penzance	1,030
Truro	1,513

It is not possible to predict how many women in Devon and Cornwall will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in the Eccles constituency received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available, and how many women in the Eccles constituency are expected to receive statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance after April; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested. But in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 944 claims to maternity allowance were made at Salford, north and 676 at Salford, south, the Department's offices which cover the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

It is not possible to predict how many women in Eccles will qualify for statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance from April 1987. However, it is estimated that in total some 230,000 women will qualify for statutory maternity pay and 84,000 for maternity allowance in 1987-88.

Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Devon and Cornwall, respectively, received maternity allowance in 1985; and how many women there are expected to receive maternity pay or maternity allowance after April.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested. But in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, the following numbers of claims to maternity allowance were made at the Department's offices which cover Devon and Cornwall, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

	Number
Devon
Barnstaple	1,086
Devonport	1,410
Exeter	2,177
Plymouth	1,863
St. Austell	1,039
Torbay	1,659
Cornwall
Launceston	566
Penzance	683
Truro	987

It is not possible to predict how many women in Devon and Cornwall will qualify for statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance from April 1987. However, it is estimated that in total some 230,000 women will qualify for statutory maternity pay and 84,000 for maternity allowance in 1987-88.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Dunfermline, East claimed maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested. The Dunfermline, East constituency is covered by the Department's offices at Cowdenbeath and Dunfermline although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The numbers of claims received for maternity grant in each of the two local offices during the calendar year 1986 were as follows:

	Number
Cowdenbeath	536
Dunfermline	1,226

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Dunfermline, East received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested. But in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 949 claims to maternity allowance were made at Dunfermline and 366 claims at Cowdenbeath, the Department's offices which cover the constituency, although the boundaries are not coterminous.

Retirement Age

Mr. Andrew MacKay asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many men and how many women have deferred their state pension on reaching retirement age; and for how many years.

Mr. Major: An estimated 100,000 men and women over minimum pension age are at present deferring retirement. More precise information concerning those currently deferring is not available.

Information about deferment by existing pensioners is held in the form requested only for new awards of retirement pension. The table shows total pension awards with increases for deferment in the six months to 31 March 1986[1,2].

Period of deferment	Men	Category A women[3]	Category ABL women with increases to category A pension[4]
Less than 1 year	4,760	3,390	160
1-2 years	2,080	2,870	—
2-3 years	1,250	2,160	—
3-4 years	1,010	1,750	10
4-5 years	4,160	5,040	870
With increases for deferment Total	13,260	15,210	1,040
Total pension awards	147,290	80,630	13,310

[1] Excludes women whose pensions derive from their husband's contributions. Increments to their pensions stem from their husband's decision to defer retirement.

[2] No increases for deferement are paid in respect of periods where a person over pensionable age is in receipt of another national insurance benefit, such as invalidity benefit.

[3] Women awarded pensions derived solely from their own contributions.

[4] Women awarded pensions derived partly from their own and partly from their husband's contributions whose increments arise from deferment of pension on their own contributions.

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people there are of retirement age in each district authority area in Lancashire; and how many and what proportion are (a) married, (b) single men and (c) single women.

Mr. Lyell: Only the number of people of retirement age (taken as 65 for men and 60 for women) broken down into male and female is available annually; the remaining information is taken from the 1981 census of population — the latest available information — and shown in the following table.

District	Persons of retirement age, mid-1985			Persons of retirement age, 1981 census

Welfare Milk and Vitamins

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women and children in Bradford are in receipt of free welfare milk and vitamins in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Lyell: I regret that the information requested is not collected by individual local offices and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Lone Pensioners

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many and what proportion of people of pensionable age live alone in each district authority in Lancashire.

Mr. Lyell: The most recent information about the number and proportion of people of retirement age living alone is available from the 1987 census of population. The figures for each district authority in Lancashire are shown in the table.

District	Persons of retirement age living alone
	Thousands	Per cent.
Blackburn	8·3	33·6
Blackpool	11·0	29·3

Income Replacement

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list for each country in the European community in the last year for which figures are available the proportion of his previous earnings an insured person with average earnings would receive from statutory income replacement schemes, whether administered by Government or another body (a) during the first six months of incapacity for work, (b) during incapacity for work which has lasted between six and 12 months, (c) during incapacity for work which has lasted more than 12 months, (d) during the first six months of unemployment and (e) on retirement at the normal retirement age in each country.

Mr. Major: Most income replacement schemes on the continent of Europe are on an earnings-related basis and the figures requested by the right hon. Member are contained in the DHSS publication, "Tables of Social Benefit Systems in the European Communities (Position at 1 January 1986)", a copy of which is in the Library.

The United Kingdom, Ireland and the Netherlands operate mainly flat rate income replacement schemes, so that the replacement rate will vary between high and low earners. The figures for the United Kingdom for a person on average earnings are given in section 5 of "Abstract of Statistics for Index of Retail Prices, Average Earnings, Social Security Benefits and Contributions" — August 1986, a copy of which is also in the Library. Comparable weekly earnings figures for Ireland and the Netherlands are not readily available.

Hospital Closures

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list all current proposed hospital closures or partial closures to which community health councils are objecting.

Mrs. Currie: Most proposed closures or changes of use of hospitals are agreed locally with the support of the community health council. The table gives the latest available information on where this is not the case. It lists these proposals for closure of whole or part hospitals which in August 1986 had gone to public consultation and where the local community health council's objections, together with other factors, are still under consideration either locally or by my right hon. Friend.

Heating Allowance

Mr. Bill Walker asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give details of the total number of supplementary benefit recipients who were in receipt of heating allowance in 1984; and how many of them were paid the maximum allowance.

Mr. Major: A total of 2,829,000 supplementary benefit claimants were in receipt of a heating addition in 1984. The maximum standard heating addition payable is the estate rate heating addition for a dwelling with five or more rooms. In 1984, 10,000 such additions were in payment.

Invalid Care Allowance

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Social Services by what date he expects the processing of claims for invalid care allowance by married women to be completed; and what proportion of such claims have now been dealt with.

Mr. Major: As at 13 February, some 103,000 claims to invalid care allowance had been received from married women of which about 47,000 had been decided. The remainder, which are at various stages of processing and include cases where further information is awaited from claimants, will be cleared as soon as possible. The question implies a final date for clearance of all claims to invalid care allowance from married women, but because claims are still coming in and will continue to do so for the indefinite future, no such date can be set.

Benefits (Disregards)

Mr. Rowe asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any intention of raising the amount of savings which may be disregarded for the purposes of (a) additional heating allowance and (b) other benefits; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: The main rules limiting entitlement to those with savings above a certain level apply in the supplementary benefit scheme. At present those with savings above £3,000 are normally excluded from weekly entitlement. From 1988, as part of the social security reforms, we plan to increase this limit to £6,000 with a tariff income applying to savings between £3,000 and £6,000. We have no plans to increase the £500 capital rule which applies to single payments including those in periods of exceptionally cold weather. The limit was increased from £300 in 1983.

Bradford Health Authority

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make more resources available to Bradford health authority to avoid ward or hospital closures as a result of rate and precept increases; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: Regional health authorities are responsible for determining the cash limits for their respective district health authorities. In so doing, they take into account competing claims on the available resources in the light of national and local priorities.

London (Patient Admissions)

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list, for each district general hospital in London, the number of days in 1986 when requests for patient admissions had to be refused because no beds were available.

Mrs. Currie: We do not keep a comprehensive central record of the occasions when admissions to hospital are restricted for any of a variety of reasons. It is for local health authorities to manage the availability of services from day to day.

AIDS

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will indicate the breakdown of expenditure in the fight against AIDS for each year since 1984, and including for 1987, the breakdown both before and after the extra £4 million recently allocated.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given him by my right hon. Friend on 1 December 1986 at columns 525-26. The estimated expenditure for 1987-88, which is not in the previous reply is:

1987-88

	£ million
1. Health authorities
a. Cost of heat-treating Factor 8	2
b. Testing blood donations	2
c. Treatment (£10–20,000 per case)	12–24
d. Counselling, including GUM[1] prevention, haemophiliac reference centres, training	4
Total	[2]20–32
2. Public Health Laboratory Service	1·25
3. Publicity	14·0
4. Research	0·3
Total	35·55–47·55

[1] GUM = Genito-urinary medicine.
[2] Of which £7 million to be met centrally.

The Medical Research Council has allocated £2·4 million to 21 special projects. This figure includes £250,000 a year, included in the figures paid by the Department to the MRC for the United Kingdom centre for co-ordinating epidemiological research on AIDS. The £4·4 million allocated to three health regions is included in the £7 million met centrally.

Benefits

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will indicate for all welfare and national insurance benefits and allowances, the percentage change in value each year since 1979, and the comparable change in national average earnings for each of those years.

Mr. Major: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Secure Units

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has any plans to increase the capacity of his Department's secure units for youths detained under section 53(2) of the Children and Young Persons Act 1933.

Mrs. Currie: The placement of young people sentenced under section 53(2) of the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary. Where placement in the child care system is appropriate, such young people may be accommodated in youth treatment centres directly administered by the Department or in secure accommodation within local authority community homes. There are no plans to build further youth treatment centres. It is open to local authorities to apply for grants to provide additional secure accommodation places if they believe a need exists.

Heating Additions

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people in 1984 were in receipt of a heating addition in (a) England, (b) Scotland and (c) Wales; and what was the total expenditure in each country on heating additions.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 20 January 1987, c. 539]: The information requested about the number of people receiving heating additions in 1984 is as follows:

Country	[1]Number in receipt
England	2,376
Scotland	281
Wales	170

Reyes Syndrome

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what consideration has been given by the Committee on Safety of Medicines to the United States Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report dated January 1985, which was sent to the then Minister of Health by Mr. C. S. Harrington, the chairman of the National Reyes Syndrome Foundation.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 5 February 1987, c. 809]: At its meetings in March 1985 and April 1985, the Committee on Safety of Medicines considered all the available evidence, including the letter from Mr. Harrington and the United States Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report, volumn 34, No. 1 1985, before concluding in April 1985 that the evidence available at that time had not established a causal link between aspirin and Reye's syndrome.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many young persons have been reported as suffering from Reyes syndrome since 1981; and what change there has been in the incidence of the syndrome following the official advice in June 1986 that aspirin should not be given to children.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 5 February 1987, c. 809]:

The number of cases of Reyes syndrome in the British Isles reported to the British Reyes syndrome surveillance scheme in children aged under 16 years[1] for each calendar year since reports began in August 1981 is as follows:—

[4]Year	Gross	[3]Net
1981	15	13
1982	36	29
1983	54	49
1984	106	92
1985	55	50
1986	63	[3]51

[1] Data are not collected for persons aged 16 years or over.
[2] Gross totals adjusted to take account of cases where follow-up information shows the original diagnosis to be incorrect.
[3] The net total for 1986 may have to be adjusted as follow-up information becomes available.
[4] The year of report may not equate to the date of onset of the illness because many months may elapse before a report is made on a suspected case.

The gross number of reports received during the second half of 1986(39) exceeds the gross total for the corresponding period in 1985(16) but is less than that in the same period in 1984(42). When considering trends, it should be noted that an improved methodology for collecting data was introduced by the newly formed British paediatric surveillance unit in July 1986, when active canvassing of paediatricians was intensified.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the cost of the British Reye's syndrome surveillance scheme for each year that it has existed; what has been the additional cost of the risk factor study; who has paid for the surveillance scheme and the study; what contribution to their costs have come from public funds; how the surveillance scheme currently is being funded, and what steps are being taken to ensure that future funding is adequate.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 5 February 1987, c. 809]: I am informed by the Public Health Laboratory Service that the estimated annual cost of the British Reye's syndrome surveillance scheme was as follows:

Year	Estimate Cost £
1981-82	5,000
1982-83	8,000
1983-84	8,500
1984-85	9,000
1985-86	10,000

The costs for each year up to and including 1984-85 were met entirely from the budget of the Public Health Laboratory Service. The pharmaceutical company Schering Plough Corporation contributed £630 towards the costs in 1985-86, via the National Reye's Syndrome Foundation with PHLS meeting the balance. The total contribution to the PHLS promised by Schering Plough is £30,218 which it is providing by three equal annual payments, via the National Reye's Syndrome Foundation, starting in January 1986; the proportion of this allotted to the Reye's syndrome surveillance scheme is £7,554 at the rate of £2,418 a calendar year. In addition to this annual payment, the costs in the current financial year are being met by the PHLS (approximately £10,000) and the British paediatric surveillance unit which, from 1 July 1986, has been meeting the costs of postage and stationery for canvassing paediatricians for cases of Reye's syndrome. The Public Health Laboratory Service board has agreed to continue funding the surveillance scheme until at least September 1988.

The estimated cost of the Reye's syndrome risk factor study, from January 1984 until it finished in December 1985, was around £60,000 of which the pharmaceutical industry contributed £39,766 made up as follows:

Sterling Winthrop	27,766
Boots	6,000
Aspirin Foundation	6,000

The balance of around £20,000 came from public funds and was borne on the PHLS budget.

Aspirin

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what discussions there have been with overseas drug regulatory agencies following his decision to recommend that aspirin should not be given to children;

(2) if the decision of the Committee on the Safety of Medicines that aspirin should not normally be given to children has been communicated to other drug regulatory agencies together with the evidence that led the committee to reach this conclusion.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 5 February 1987, c. 809-10]: The recommendation by the Committee on Safety of Medicines on the use of aspirin by children, together with a summary of the data considered plus details of subsequent United Kingdom action, were communicated to the World Health Organisation, the United States Food and Drug Administration, the Australian Regulatory Authority, all member states of the European Community and the Community's committee for proprietary medicinal products. There were full discussions with the World Health Organisation and other bodies concerned. A synopsis of the information and advice was also published as a CSM update, in the British Medical Journal, Vol. 292, June 1986, which has a world-wide distribution.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has requested aspirin manufacturers to warn on their labels that aspirin should not normally be given to children; and whether any such request applies to aspirin intended for overseas sale.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 5 February 1987, c. 809-10]: Following the recommendation by the Committee on Safety of Medicines in May 1986 about aspirin use by children, the pharmaceutical industry voluntarily agreed to place a label warning on all adult aspirin products leaving its factories for use in the United Kingdom, that they should not be taken by children under 12 except on medical advice. We have no jurisdiction over products for overseas sale; the control of labelling is a matter for the regulatory authority concerned.

Meningitis

Mr. Aspinwall asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what progress have been made in the use of the anti-meningitis vaccine at present being manufactured.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 16 February 1987]: Vaccines manufactured elsewhere for A and C strains of meningococcal meningitis are not currently licensed for general supply in the United Kingdom but may be made available to doctors for individual patients. Work currently being undertaken at the Centre for Applied Microbiological Research towards development of a vaccine for the B15 strain will inevitably take some years to complete.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Agricultural Land

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the increase in public expenditure in 1987-88 and 1988-89 in consequence of his proposals on agricultural land announced on 9 February.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Our proposals may cost about £4 million in 1987-88 and approach £20 million in 1988-89. However, the removal of land from agricultural production and a lower level of support will reduce expenditure under the common agricultural policy. Our proposals do not imply any change in the overall public expenditure totals.

EC Pre-pension Scheme

Mr. Colvin asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish details of the European Commission's five-year pre-pension scheme designed to encourage farmers to leave the land.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The European Commission's socio-structural proposals, which include a pre-pension scheme for farmers linked to the non-cultivation of their holdings, is included in its document COM(86) 199, a copy of which is in the Library. The proposals are still under active discussion in the Council of Ministers.

Freezer Vessels (Licences)

Mr. Evans asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what criteria the Minister will be using for allocating the additional freezer vessel licences.

Mr. Gummer: Fisheries Ministers will take all relevant factors into account in considering applications for the additional licences for freezer trawlers for the pelagic fisheries.

Food Aid

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the areas of the United Kingdom where European Economic Community butter has been distributed and the number of people who have received 1 lb weight or more of this butter.

Mr. Gummer: Butter has been distributed throughout the United Kingdom. The charities concerned seek to ensure an equitable distribution of 250g packs. They do not keep records of each recipient.

Radioactive Waste

Dr. David Clark asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, further to his reply to the hon. Member for South Shields on 2 February, Official Report, column 512, concerning the Fisheries Radiological Inspectorate and the atomic energy unit of his Department, if he will estimate (a) the number of man-years effort required of each body to undertake the three-year programme of reviewing authorisations of radioactive discharges and (b) the number of man-years effort required of each body to complete such a review for a typical nuclear site; whether the staffing complement of each of these bodies was increased by reasons of that review programme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: It is estimated that a total of eight man years will be required on the part of both the Atomic Energy Unit and the Fisheries Radiological Inspectorate to undertake the review programme (ie four man years per unit). It is estimated that an average of 0·2 man years will be required per unit in respect of individual sites. The review of authorisations was one of the factors taken into account in setting the complement for both bodies.

Dr. David Clark asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, further to his reply to the hon. Member for South Shields on 2 February, Official Report, column 512, concerning the Fisheries Radiological Inspectorate and the atomic energy unit of his Department, what is the number of professional staff in post in each such body; what is the authorised complement in each case; when the staffing levels were last reviewed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: There are seven professional staff in post in the Atomic Energy Unit. The authorised complement is 12 but will be increased to 15 from 1 April 1987. There are four professional staff in post in the Fisheries Radiological Inspectorate, not including scientific support staff from within the Directorate of Fisheries Research. The authorised complement is five. Staffing levels in respect of both bodies were last reviewed in 1986.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

Mr. Weetch asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will designate at the earliest opportunity Breckland, the Suffolk river valleys, Dedham Vale and the Suffolk coast and heaths areas of outstanding natural beauty, as environmentally sensitive areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will designate west Berkshire as an environmentally sensitive area.

Mr. Donald Thompson [pursuant to his reply, 12 February 1987, c. 336]: In accordance with section 18 of the Agriculture Act 1986 the new areas which we shall designate next year will be based on the recommendations of the Countryside Commission and the Nature Conservancy Council. In England the areas which they have recommended to us and which have not yet been designated are Breckland, Clun, the North Peak, the Suffolk river valleys including Dedham Vale, the Test valley and the western part of the South Downs.

Committee of Public Accounts (Recommendations)

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will list those recommendations of the Committee of Public Accounts since 1983 affecting his Department which have been implemented.

Mr. Gummer: I refer the hon. Member to the Treasury minutes published in response to the relevant PAC reports (Cmnd. 9743 and 9808). The Committee, on which the hon. Member sits, monitors Departmental progress with accepted recommendations.

Radiation

Mr. Speller asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many sheep are still affected by radioactivity as a result of the Chernobyl accident; what information he has as to the fate of those sheep kept on Exmoor and now sold; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Some 340,000 sheep either within or moved from the outstanding restricted areas of the United Kingdom under Government consents are still subject to the movement and slaughter controls introduced following the accident at Chernobyl.

There are controls on sheep originating on Exmoor since monitoring surveys demonstrated that there was not a contamination problem in that area. However blue, red or apricot marked sheep which moved there from the restricted areas of Cumbria, Wales or Scotland are still subject to certain controls. In summary, these are that the slaughter of blue-marked sheep has been permitted provided they first pass a live monitoring test and receive a distinctive Government ear tag. From 16 February similar arrangements have been applied to red-marked sheep.

Mr. Speller asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food by what means he monitors the movement and ownership of sheep affected by the Chernobyl accident; and what steps he is taking to ensure that such sheep are not sold and slaughtered for human consumption.

Mr. Donald Thompson: No sheep may leave the outstanding restricted areas of the United Kingdom without a Ministry, Welsh Office or Scottish Office consent. This consent is conditional upon the sheep concerned being live monitored for radioactivity. Any which fail the live monitoring test are identified by a special paint mark and it is an offence to slaughter sheep so marked. Ministry, local authority and Meat and Livestock Commission staff all help to ensure that sheep carrying such marks are not admitted for slaughter.

Individual categories of sheep are released from the above slaughter controls only when retesting shows that radioactivity has fallen to acceptable levels.

Advisory Committee on Pesticides

Sir Richard Body asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will set out in the Official Report the remuneration and expenses of members of the Advisory Committee on Pesticides.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Members of the Advisory Committee on Pesticides are paid a fee of £57 and a reading time payment of £14 per session; the chairman receives a fee of £71 and a reading time payment of £17. Remuneration for travel and subsistence is paid at official rates.

Headage Payments

Mr. McLoughlin asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has as to other European Economic Community countries in which headage payments are made on dairy cows on farms that fall within less favoured areas.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 12 February 1987, c. 338]: In the United Kingdom we make payments of hill livestock compensatory allowances in excess of £110 million a year to producers in less favoured areas under the EC structures regulation. Apart from the United Kingdom, member states with designated less favoured areas have opted to pay compensatory allowances on dairy cows, subject to restrictions as to numbers and areas and variations in the levels of payment. We have confined payments to breeding cows and sheep. This, in our view, directs the available funds to the best advantage in the light of the United Kingdom's particular circumstances.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Parliamentary Papers

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Lord Privy Seal what is the reason for the recent lack of parliamentary papers in the Norman Shaw North issue office; if he will seek to ensure that Her Majesty's Stationery Office makes regular deliveries of parliamentary papers direct to that office; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Biffen: Her Majesty's Stationery Office does not make direct deliveries of parliamentary documents to the Norman Shaw North issue office because of the administrative requirement of centralised financial control and distribution. For this reason all documents are received initially at the main Vote Office stores.

Every effort will continue to be made to ensure that there is no lack of parliamentary papers at that office.

Equality Exchange

Ms. Richardson asked the hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, as representing the House of Commons Commission, if the House of Commons has registered as a member of the Equality Exchange, which was established by the Equal Opportunities Commission on 1 [illegible]

Mr. Beith: The House of Commons has not hitherto received any information from the Equal Opportunities Commission about the establishment of the Equality Exchange, and the possibility of registering as a member has accordingly not been considered.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Divorce

Mr. Warren asked the Attorney-General when the report by the Law Commission on the subject of the law relating to divorce will be published; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General: There has been no report from the Law Commission on this subject.

Lord Rothschild

Mr. Dalyell asked the Attorney-General whether, pursuant to the statement by his right hon. and learned Friend the Solicitor-General on Friday 6 February, Official Report, column 1294, he will make a statement to the House once he has received the police report on Lord Rothschild.

The Solicitor-General: It would be inappropriate for my right hon. and learned Friend the Attorney-General to make any comment on this matter before the police report has been received and a decision has been taken.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Attorney-General if he will list the contracts, with the subject of the assignment, awarded to management consultancy or accounting firms by the Lord Chancellor's Department in 1986, with the name of the consultants concerned.

The Solicitor-General: The following contracts were awarded to management consultancy or accounting firms by the Lord Chancellor's Department in 1986:

Firm and Subject of Assignment

Atkins Planning
Computer project support (three contracts)

CAP UK
Advice on communications procurement for Court Funds Accounting System

Coopers and Lybrand Associates
Civil Justice Review: study of commercial court

Hay MSL
Lawyers' legal aid remuneration in the higher criminal courts

Hoare Govett Ltd.
Advice on contracting-out of common investment funds in Public Trust Office

PE Information Systems Ltd.
Communications specification for Court Funds Accounting System

Peat Marwick, Mitchell and Co.
Computer project support

Plus Business Systems
Technical support with small computer systems

Touche Ross Management Consultants
Civil Justice Review: study of debt cases

"Warfare as a Whole"

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Attorney-General whether he intends to seek an injunction to prevent the distribution of the book "Warfare as a Whole" by Sir Frank Kitson.

The Solicitor-General: The manuscript is under examination by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Attorney-General whether he intends to prosecute Sir Frank Kitson under section 2 of the Official Secrets Act for including in his book "Warfare as a Whole" material in breach of national security.

The Solicitor-General: Until the examination of the manuscript is complete, my right hon. and learned Friend the Attorney-General will not be in a position to consider this question.

BBC Scotland (Police Raid)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Attorney-General when he became aware of the warrant on 30 January of the assistant procurator fiscal of Glasgow and Strathkelvin for police action against the BBC.

The Solicitor-General: On Sunday 1 February.

EMPLOYMENT

Vredeling Directive

Sir Russell Johnston asked the Paymaster General what consideration has been given to the Vredeling directive, as amended on 13 July 1983, in the light of recent events at the Caterpillar plant, Uddingston; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: The Goverment have already made it clear that they are greatly concerned about the events at the Caterpillar plant, Uddingston. They are firmly committed to the principle of employees being informed and consulted about matters which affect them and have consistently encouraged employers to develop procedures appropriate to their particular circumstances. But they remain opposed to the directive because they believe that the imposition of a rigid legal framework would disrupt existing arrangements and damage industrial relations.

Long-term Unemployed People

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General if he will provide figures for the most recently available date, and in the table form used at column 157, Official Report, on 29 October 1986, of the number of people who (a) have been interviewed under the restart programme and (b) have been placed into a destination by the Manpower Services Commission for the four London area manpower board areas and for the area manpower board area covering the former Merseyside county council.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The figures given in the form used by my hon. Friend in his reply of 29 October 1986 have to be used with care as they are only a measure of the extent to which we know of direct placements made as the immediate result of an interview. This is not a measure of the total number of people who find work or training directly or indirectly as a result of the restart programme.

Seventy Five per cent. of participants agree to pursue the offer made to them at their interview and we do not know the results of all of them. The immediate placings do not include the many people who subsequently find jobs, or other openings, such as training, as a result of counselling, restart courses, or the outcome of other elements of the restart menu.

Numbers interviewed and placed for the period 12 May to 8 January.

London	Number
Interviewed	95,883
Placed in Jobs as a direct result of restart interviews	568
Placed on community programme	1,689
Placed in job clubs	970
Placed on enterprise allowance scheme	332
Placed on training schemes	1,350
Placed on restart courses	6,282
Placed on the voluntary projects programme or in other voluntary work	166

I am not able to apportion the totals for London to specific area manpower board areas.

Merseyside
Interviewed	52,203
Placed in jobs as a direct result of restart interviews	374
Placed on community programme	857
Placed in job clubs	670
Placed on enterprise allowance scheme	107
Placed on training schemes	1,468
Placed on restart courses	4,344
Placed on the voluntary projects programme or in other voluntary work	255

Management Consultancy

Mr. Mates asked the Paymaster General if he will list the contracts, with the subject of the assignment, awarded to management consultancy or accountancy firms by his Department in 1985, with the name of the consultants concerned.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The following firms were awarded contracts by my Department in 1985:

FIRM AND SUBJECT OF ASSIGNMENT

Tom Critchley Associates
Study on the implications for DE of implementation of recommendations contained in the Multi-departmental review of government purchasing.

CURDS Ltd.
Review of Travel-to-work Areas.

ICL
Advice on the expansion of the DE data communications network.

ICL

LOGICA Ltd.
Advice on the use of database package for personnel data system.

PROLOG Ltd.

Job Creation

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General what was the gross and net cost and the numbers participating in 1985-86 and 1986-87 of the (a) community programme, (b) enterprise allowance scheme, (c) YTS, (d) new workers scheme, (e) community industry, (f) job release scheme and (g) job-splitting scheme.

Mr. Lee: The figures are:

	Gross cost[1] (£ million)		First year direct net Exchequer cost per person no longer unemployed		Participants
	1985-86	1986-87 estimate	1985-86	1986-87 estimate	1985-86	1986-87 estimate
Community programme	667	1,038	1,950	2,000	241,000	300,000
Enterprise allowance scheme	104	147	1,800	1,800	60,000	86,000
New workers scheme	—	9	—	1,300	—	50,000
Community industry	24	26	1,500	1,550	9,600	9,000
Job release scheme	187	112	1,850	1,850	10,000	12,000
Job-splitting scheme	0·2	1	−150	−150	268	250

[1] Excluding administrative costs.

YTS is a training measure. The concept of net Exchequer cost per person unemployed is not therefore appropriate. Relevant figures for YTS, including gross cost per annum per filled place, are as follows:

	Gross cost (£ million)		Gross cost per annum per filled place (£)		Participants
	1985-86	1986-87 estimate	1985-86	1986-87 estimate	1985-86	1986-87 estimate
YTS	818	891	2,800	2,600	364,000	362,000

Restart Scheme

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General what guidance has been given to jobcentre managers and restart counsellors on the practice of restart interviewees being accompanied by a friend, adviser or other similar third party; and what is his policy on this practice.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Jobcentre staff have been told that a third party may accompany a person to a restart interview if the interviewee so wishes, so long as the friend is present to assist the restart participant with the interview.

Mr. Haynes asked the Paymaster General how many miners in Ashfield who have accepted redundancy have been ordered to report to the local Department of Employment for participation in the restart scheme.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Everyone who has been claiming unemployment related benefits for more than 12 months will be invited to a restart counselling interview by the Manpower Services Commission. We have no means of knowing how many of these are miners who have accepted redundancy. Everyone interviewed will be offered help and advice about possible steps back into employment.

Overtime

Mr. Fallon asked the Paymaster General (1) whether he will publish on a regular basis, separately, figures for overtime worked in both the public and private sectors;

(2) whether the overtime figures published in the Employment Gazette are compiled from separate figures for employment in the public and private sectors; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: The overtime figures in the Employment Gazette are compiled from surveys of establishments which employ operatives in manufacturing activities.

Respondents to the surveys are not asked to distinguish between public and private sector employment, and there are no plans to provide separate overtime figures for the public and private sectors.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Paymaster General if he will list the contracts, with the subject of the assignment, awarded to management consultancy or accounting firms by his Department in 1986, with the name of the consultants concerned.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The following firms were awarded contracts by my Department in 1986:

AMP Ltd

YTS

Mr. Favell asked the Paymaster General if he will state the number of YTS trainees in (a) the public and (b) the private sector.

Mr. Trippier: At 31 January 1987 there were 92,930 young people in training on YTS in the public sector and 204,662 in the private sector, as defined by the Manpower Services Commission's management information system.

Community Programme

Mr. Fatchett asked the Paymaster General what has been the impact on targeted community programme schemes in the eight task force areas of the embargo on recruitment of under 25-year-olds to community programme places in connection with the job training scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 427]: There is no embargo on the recruitment of under-25-year-olds to the community programme. However, in the nine original job training scheme pilot areas, eligibility for under-25-year-olds is the same as for other long-term unemployed people, namely that they should have been unemployed for at least 12 out of the last 15 months. We believe that, where good quality job training is available, it is a more positive and preferable option for most young unemployed people under the age of 25.

The effect of having community programme and job training scheme places available has been to increase the help open to people unemployed for 12 months or more.

The eight task force areas of the inner cities initiative continue to enjoy priority in the targeting of MSC programmes and the allocation of community programme places.

SCOTLAND

Glasgow Royal Infirmary (Nurses)

Mr. McTaggart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many nursing staff have been employed in Glasgow royal infirmary during each of the last six years.

Mr. John MacKay: The number of whole-time equivalent nursing staff employed in Glasgow Royal infirmary at 30 September in each of the years 1980 to 1985 and at 31 March 1986 was as follows. The numbers exclude some nurses in training who are based at the Glasgow eastern college of nursing and midwifery, but who spend a proportion of their time working in the infirmary.

Year	Number (WTE)
1980	679·7
1981	763·1
1982	842·1
1983	875·6
1984	973·2
1985	978·9
1986	984·1

Urban Aid

Mr. Bruce asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations from voluntary organisations his Department has received regarding dual local authority sponsorship of urban aid applications.

Mr. Ancram: The only recent instance of such representations is that Aberdeen Cyrenians wrote to me in November 1986 about an application for funding under the urban progamme to provide emergency accommodation for young homeless people in Aberdeen submitted by Grampian regional council and which also involved the question of support from Aberdeen district council for the project.

Mr. Bruce asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether his Department requires dual local authority sponsorship of urban aid applications before grants will be awarded; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: Joint sponsorship of projects by regional and district councils is not a general requirement under the urban programme, but may be appropriate in some cases.

Single Homeless

Mr. Bruce asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to reply to the request for funding for a young persons' hostel in Aberdeen, from the joint working party on provision for single homeless; and is he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: No such request for funding has been received from the joint working party; consideration is, however, being given to a project submitted by Grampian regional council for urban programme funding for a project being promoted by the Aberdeen Cyrenians for emergency accommodation for young homeless people in Aberdeen. I expect to be able to give a decision about this application soon.

Roads

Mr. Henderson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the trunk road improvements funded by his Department in north-east Fife since 1979 and their costs together with those in hand or planned for early implementation.

Mr. Ancram: The information is as follows:

		Estimated Cost £
Schemes Completed Since 1979
A91	Junction with A92 at Dairsie	482,000
A91	East of Melville Lodge	210,000
A914	Junction with B9129 at Ladybank	90,000
Planned Schemes
A91	Auchtermuchty Bypass	3,700,000
A91	Junction with Strathkinness Road at Edenside	160,000
A91	Junction with A919 at Guardbridge	155,000
A914	Junction with C20 at Freuchie	170,000

Dornoch Firth and Ayr Road

Mr. Allan Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the current estimate of the number of vehicles which will use the Dornoch road bridge annually.

Mr. Ancram: It is estimated that upwards of 800,000 vehicles will use the Dornoch road bridge in the first year following its expected opening to traffic in 1991.

Mr. Allan Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his current estimate of the number of vehicles which will use the Ayr road route annually.

Mr. Ancram: My right hon. and learned Friend is responsible only for that section of the Ayr road route which is a trunk road, between Malletsheugh and the former Glasgow city boundary. It is estimated that upwards of 6 million vehicles will use this section of the new road in the first year following its expected opening to traffic in 1991.

Mr. Allan Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his current estimate of the total cost of (a) the Dornoch road bridge and (b) the Ayr road route.

Mr. Ancram: Estimated costs at current prices are as follows:

	£ million
(a) Dornoch road bridge (including approach roads)		21
(b) Ayr road route
Trunk road section	13
Local authority section	40	53

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the contracts, with the subject of the assignment, awarded to management consultancy or accounting firms by his Department in 1986, with the name of the consultants concerned.

Mr. Rifkind: The following contracts were awarded to management consultancy and accounting firms in 1986.

Firm and Subject of Assignment

BP International Ltd.
Production of a Scottish Office Procurement Manual.

Coopers and Lybrand Associates Ltd.
Provision of Training Sessions on Marketing Awareness for the Custodial Staff in the Historic Buildings and Monuments Directorate.

Coopers and Lybrand Associates Ltd.

Schools (Iodine Tablets)

Mr. Donald Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has as to the schools in each region in Scotland which keep supplies of potassium iodate or other iodine tablets for use by pupils in case of emergency.

Mr. Rifkind: This information is not available centrally.

River Elbe, Lingerabay, Harris

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the latest position with regard to the proposal to deposit silt dredged from the River Elbe at Lingerabay on Harris, and the means by which environmental objections are to be overcome.

Mr. John MacKay: There have been no further developments since an application for planning permission to deposit silt dredgings from the River Elbe in Harris was withdrawn in March 1986.

Community Charge

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list those organisations that made a submission on the Green Paper "Paying for Local Government," Cmnd. 9714, and indicate which of those organisations were unreservedly in favour of a community charge.

Mr. Ancram: I refer the hon. Member to the replies I gave on 1 December 1986 to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Maryhill (Mr. Craigen), at column 447-50, and on 12 January 1987 to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Garscadden (Mr. Dewar), at column 81.

Coastal Pollution

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when, over the last 10 years, surveys have been conducted of the concentrations of copper, chromium, cadmium, zinc, lead, nickel, mercury, arsenic, boron, organo-chlorine compounds and PCBs in sediments and sea water around the coast of Harris or other parts of the Outer Hebrides; by whom the surveys were conducted; and what were the results.

Mr. John MacKay: There have been no specific surveys of sea water around the Outer Hebrides in the last 10 years. However, a survey in western Scottish coastal waters undertaken by Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland scientists in 1984 showed typical concentrations as follows:

Copper	0·1-0·2/ugl $^{-1}$
Cadmium	10-15 ngl $^{-1}$
Lead	10-15 ngl $^{-1}$

The cadmium and copper values agree with samples taken in a recent survey off the Scottish west coast by a German vessel, which produced nickel concentrations of some 0·18-0·22/ugl $^{-1}$.

There are no recent reliable data for chromium, zinc, mercury or arsenic, but older data suggest concentrations of zinc of 1-3/ugl $^{-1}$ and mercury of less than 1 ngl $^{-1}$.

No information is available about concentrations of organo-chlorines or PCBs in that area.

Boron is not generally considered to be a contaminent as it is relatively abundant in sea water.

Prisoners (Alcoholism and Suicide Rates)

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will list the levels of alcoholism and suicide rates for each of the prisons in Scotland for each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Lang: Information is published in the annual report "Prisons in Scotland", copies of which are available in the Library.

The numbers of inmates in penal establishments in Scotland who (a) received treatment for symptoms associated with alcohol abuse, and (b) died as a result of self-inflicted injuries in the years 1979-86 are as follows:

	(a)	(b)
1986	n.a.	[1]7
1985	1,165	7
1984	1,699	5
1983	1,880	6
1982	1,888	3
1981	1,085	3

1978	724	4
1977	649	3

[1] Figure for 1986 not yet published.

Training Schemes

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will publish figures showing for each of Edinburgh's 62 district wards the number of people taken off the unemployment register as a result of the restart programme, the proportion of these people who have found full-time jobs, the number of people in each of the schemes operating under restart, and the number of people currently on Government training schemes.

Mr. Lang: The information is not available in the precise form requested.

A total of approximately 1,400 people in Edinburgh have ceased to claim benefit since being identified under the restart programme. It is impossible, however, to determine how many of these left the unemployment register as a direct result of either the invitation to attend an interview or the counselling itself. Between 1 July 1986, the date on which restart commenced, and 12 February 1987, the numbers of people in Edinburgh who were placed in employment or in one of the Government's employment, enterprise or training schemes as a consequence of restart interviews were as shown in the table. In addition to these figures, a number of people were referred to other specialist services for example, Professional and Executive Recruitment, Disablement Resettlement Officer, Careers Service, and so on. No statistics are available to indicate how many of those placed on restart courses have subsequently obtained employment or other forms of training.

	Number
Commenced employment	25
Placed on Community Programme	6
Placed in Jobclub	74
Started own business under Enterprise Allowance Scheme	2
MSC training course	18

Peterhead Prison (Inquiry)

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will state the terms of reference of the inquiry into Peterhead by Mr. Tom Buyers, Her Majesty's chief inspector of prisons.

Mr. Lang: I refer to my previous reply to the hon. Member for Banff and Buchan (Mr. McQuarrie) of 18 November 1986, at column 53.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide a table showing expenditure within his responsibility for the years 1978-79 to 1987-88, inclusive; and if he will express this in estimated 1987-88 outturn prices.

Mr. Rifkind: The information requested is set out in the table.

Total public expenditure within the Secretary of State for Scotland's responsibility

£ million

	Cash	Real terms
1978-79	3,712	7,498
1979-80	4,552	7,868
1980-81	5,383	7,844
1981-82	5,839	7,747
1982-83	6,233	7,711
1983-84	6,701	7,936
1984-85	7,050	8,003
1985-86	7,227	7,723
1986-87	7,806	8,098
1987-88	7,960	7,960

Notes:

1. The cash figures are taken from successive editions of "Public Expenditure: A Commentary on the Scotland Programme".
2. The figures for 1978-79 to 1985-86 are outturn; the figure for 1986-87 is estimated outturn; and the figure for 1987-88 is planned provision.
3. The real terms figures are the cash figures adjusted by the GDP deflator (1987-88 = 100).
4. Figures have been rounded to the nearest £1 million.

Scottish Development Agency

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing the level of funding of the Scottish Development Agency by his Department in each year since 1979-80 expressed in (a) cash terms, (b) real terms based on constant 1980-81 prices and (c) real terms based on constant 1986-87 prices.

Mr. Rifkind [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 458]: The information is as follows:

SDA Expenditure 1979-1987

(£ million)

	Gross Expenditure (outturn)	1980-81 Prices	1986-87 Prices
1979-80	89·6	95·6	134·0
1980-81	97·6	97·6	136·7
1981-82	97·8	89·0	124·7
1982-83	123·2	104·5	146·5
1983-84	117·0	95·0	133·2
1984-85	117·7	91·6	128·5
1985-86	131·4	96·5	135·3
1986-87 (Estimate)	133·2	95·0	133·2
1987-88 (Estimate)	136·0	93·5	131·0

Notes

(1) The figures provided represent gross grant-in-aid (inclusive of receipts), new issues of public dividend capital and borrowing from the National Loans Fund and European Coal and Steel Community.

(2) The estimate for 1986-87 is £3·2 million (in cash terms) lower than the original provision of £136·4 million: this reflects a reduced expenditure requirement owing to changes in the phasing of projects.

(3) The figures for 1987-88 represent the Government's public expenditure plans and are subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Estimates.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL FOR SCOTLAND

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland if he will list the contracts, with the subject of the assignment, awarded to management consultancy or accounting firms by the Lord Advocate's Department in 1986, with the name of the consultants concerned.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: One such contract was awarded during 1986:

Firm	Subject of Assignment
PA Computers and Telecommunications	To assess the financial and product viability of Imlaw Inc. of America

Official Secrets Act 1911 (Warrants)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland if he has any plans to seek to amend section 9 of the Official Secrets Act 1911 to provide for warrants under that section to be issued by a sheriff.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: Amendment of the Official Secrets Acts would not fall within my ministerial responsibility.

BBC Scotland (Police Raid)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland, pursuant to the answer of 13 February, Official Report, column 371, what steps the procurator fiscal of Glasgow took to ensure that he was legally justified in applying to the sheriff for a search warrant for the BBC.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: I refer the hon. Member to the answers by my noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate in another place on 4 February 1987, at columns 199-205, and to my answer, at columns 259-60 on 13 February 1987.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland why officials of the Scottish Office were informed on Friday 30 January of the granting of a search warrant against the BBC in Glasgow.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: No officials of the Scottish Office were informed by officials of my Department on Friday 30 January of the granting of a search warrant against the BBC in Glasgow.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland at what time on Friday 30 January the first warrant was granted for a police raid on BBC, Glasgow; and at what time the Lord Advocate informed the Secretary of State for Scotland of the grant of a warrant.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: The first warrant was granted at approximately 2.15 pm on Friday 30 January. The Lord Advocate did not inform the Secretary of State for Scotland of the grant of a warrant at any time.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland who altered the typed date on the original communication relating to entry to the BBC, signed by an assistant procurator fiscal, from 30 January to 31 January; and why.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: The typed date on the petition for a search warrant for the BBC Scotland premises was altered by the assistant procurator fiscal before he presented the petition to Sheriff Lockhart on 31 January 1987.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland whether a justice of the peace signed the warrant for the police search of the BBC premises in Glasgow.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: No.

Sheriffs (Warrants)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland under what authority sheriffs for any particular district in Scotland are empowered to issue warrants without reference to a justice of the peace.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: Sheriffs have authority to issue search warrants at common law, under the Criminal Procedure (Scotland) Act 1975 and under other statutes, and no reference to a justice of the peace is necessary in such cases.

PRIME MINISTER

Police (Ministerial Responsibility)

Mr. Ashby asked the Prime Minister if she will list each police force in the United Kingdom showing the Minister ultimately responsible, the number employed in each force and the cost in 1985-86 of running each force.

The Prime Minister: The table gives the information for each police force in England and Wales and in Scotland and for the Royal Ulster Constabulary for which my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for the Home Department, for Scotland and for Northern Ireland respectively have some statutory responsibility. Information is also given for the British Transport police, the Ministry of Defence police, the Royal Parks police and the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority constabulary; statutory responsibility for these forces rest with my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Transport, for Defence, for the Environment and for Energy respectively. There are also some other small bodies of constables operating on private property which are established under private legislation, which are not directly answerable to a Minister, and on which information is not held centrally.

Notes

[1] Whilst "other expenditure" represents expenditure that does not rank for police grant it is expenditure that falls to the individual police authority to meet; and counts as part of the net revenue expenditure of the force. Most of this "other expenditure" represents authorities' contributions to the cost of common police services and thus is not a direct reflection of the cost of running the individual force as implied by the force strength.

[2] These expenditure sub-totals are only in respect of England, Wales and Scotland.

Bain and Company

Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister why she visited Bain and Company in New York while on an official visit to the United States of America.

The Prime Minister: I have been to New York on only four occasions since 4 May 1979, all in connection with visits to the United Nations. No trace of any visit to Bain and Company has been found in our records and I have no recollection of any such visit.

Guinness plc

Mr. Sedgemore asked the Prime Minister if she is satisfied with co-ordination between the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, the Director of Public Prosecutions and the police in relation to Guinness plc inquiries; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The prosecution of offenders is not a matter for me. I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given to him by my hon. and learned Friend the Member for Folkestone and Hythe (Mr. Howard), the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, who has responsibility for corporate and consumers affairs, on 17 February, and to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Edinburgh, Central (Sir A. Fletcher) by my right hon. and learned Friend the Solicitor-General on 17 February.

TRANSPORT

Air Fares

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Transport what action he is taking to reduce fares for air travel and to ensure that these are based upon arrangements which are more comprehensible to the traveller.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Government have already secured a number of major liberal bilateral air service agreements with other European countries. We are now concentrating our efforts on obtaining a worthwhile agreement on air transport liberalisation in the European Community. The proposals now under discussion were tabled by the United Kingdom presidency as a first step towards the 1992 internal market target date. They include measures which, if adopted, would allow cheaper, less confusing fares to be introduced in off-peak periods; and would make it easier for airlines to introduce business fares on the basis of their own commercial judgment of the needs of the market.

Committee of Public Accounts (Recommendations)

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will list those recommendations of the Committee of Public Accounts since 1983 affecting his Department which have been implemented.

Mr. Moore: I refer the hon. Member to the Treasury minutes published in response to the 7th, 11th, 13th and 17th reports, 1983-84, 9th report 1984-85, and the 2nd, 5th, 19th, 36th and 49th reports 1985-86 (Cmnd. 9178, 9226, 9325, 9546, 9755, 9776, 9808 and 9917). The Committee, on which the hon. Member serves, monitors departmental progress with accepted recommendations.

M63 (Widening)

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement regarding the progress of the road-widening work on the M63.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Two of the three main contracts for widening of the M63 between junctions 1 and 7 west of Manchester started about 12 months ago. Work is progressing well. One contract (junctions 5 to 7) is programmed to finish in summer 1988, and the other (junctions 1 to 3 including Barton bridge) early in 1989.

Construction of the final section (junctions 3 to 5) should start in about six months time and be finished by autumn 1989.

Railways

Mr. Snape asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has about total state assistance to railways in each of the European Community member states, in the most recent year for which information is available (a) in pound sterling as a total sum and per head of population and (b) as a percentage of gross domestic product.

Mr. David Mitchell: The latest available data are for 1984:

State assistance to railway undertakings

	£ million	Per head (£s)	Percentage of GDP
Luxembourg	57	154	2·25
Belgium	761	77	1·34
Italy	4,054	71	1·55
West Germany	2,454	40	0·53
France	1,773	32	0·48
Denmark	194	38	0·47
Netherlands	407	28	0·44
Great Britain	936	17	0·29
Ireland	65	18	0·49
Greece	93	9	0·37

Notes:
1. There are substantial variations between countries in accounting systems and in the arrangements for financial support. The figures only provide a broad comparison.
2. State assistance is defined to include revenue and capital account but to exclude pension obligations.
3. Sterling equivalents have been calculated at average 1984 exchange rates.
4. Northern Ireland railways are not included.

Bus Companies

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many bus companies he expects to be in operation at the end of 1987 compared to the number in operation at the beginning of the current year.

Mr. David Mitchell: I expect the overall number to stay broadly the same, though deregulation of local bus services means that there are now new opportunities for companies to come into the industry. There are also better prospects for existing companies, if they operate efficiently and provide the public with the services they want.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the contracts, with the subject of the assignment, awarded to management consultancy or accounting firms by his Department in 1986, with the name of the consultants concerned.

Mr. Moore: Comprehensive records of all contracts with consultancy firms are not held centrally, and it would be disproportionately expensive to collect all the information required. The following list identifies those management and accountancy consultancies which began in 1986 and are valued at £10,000 or more:

Firm and Subject of Assignment

Arthur Young
Audit of the accounts of the Civil Aviation Authority.
Review of General Lighthouse authorities' tender vessel service requirement.
Preparation of accounts for the General Lighthouse Fund.

Christine Howarth Ltd.
Advice on management and organisation.

Cooper and Lybrand Associates
Advice on the implementation of a major computer strategy.

J. Henry Schroder Wagg and Co.
Financial advice to assist the assessment of proposals for a third Thames crossing at Dartford.

K. M. G. Thomson McLintock
Audit of London Regional Transport's DTp grant.

Peat, Marwick, F. Mitchell and Co.
Joint management review of the Woolwich Ferry and associated tunnels (with Greenwich LB).

Price Waterhouse
Audit of the accounts of the British Railways Board.
Accounting advice in respect of the setting up of Public Airport Companies under the Airports Act 1986.
Commercial costing at Transport and Road Research Laboratory.

Q International Ltd.
Feasibility study on the further exploitation of facilities at the Transport and Road Research Laboratory.

Touche Ross and Co.
Advice on the proposed disposal of British Transport Advertising.

Airport Charges

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to seek to increase airport charges for certain aircraft where he has information that those aircraft were manufactured, in whole or in part, outside the United Kingdom and the manufacturers have received subsidies from their own Governments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: My right hon. Friend has no such plans. Airport charges have to be set in the light of international obligations as to non-discrimination.

Search and Rescue Helicopter Service

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for Transport what is his latest estimated date for the provision of a search and rescue service helicopter in north-west Scotland, based on the Outer Hebrides; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Tendering action is now in hand. The precise date for the provision of a search and rescue helicopter for north-west Scotland will depend on consideration of the responses to invitations. This will be completed as soon as possible.

British Airways

Mr. Brandon-Bravo asked the Secretary of State for Transport what was the total cost of the flotation of British Airways.

Mr. Moore: The cost (excluding VAT) to the Government in 1986-87 of the sale is provisionally estimated as follows:

United Kingdom sale	£ million
Advisers' fees	2·0
Marketing	6·5
Receiving banks	6·0
Underwriting and selling commissions	8·5
Overseas sales	5·5
	28·5

This represents less than 3·5 per cent. of the gross proceeds.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

South Africa

68. Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if Her Majesty's Government will take steps to stop any importation of arms, ammunition and military equipment from South Africa into the United Kingdom, or via the United Kingdom to other countries.

Mr. Alan Clark: I am satisfied that the measures already taken are adequate.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the likely change in the level of exports and imports of manufactures as a result of the facility provided by the opening of a Channel tunnel on the forecast date.

Mr. Butcher: The opening of a Channel tunnel should help to provide both cheaper imports and more competitive exports, directly and by providing competition for other modes of transport. Such data as are available at present are too imprecise for useful forecasts to be made with any competence.

Industrial Aid

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what level of industrial aid has been given to the north-west of England in the last 12 months.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Under the major schemes of financial assistance available from this Department, the total amount paid to companies and businesses in the north-west from 1 February 1986 to 31 January 1987 was £136·4 million.

Interest Rates

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will seek to amend the Consumer Credit Act so as to require banks to notify customers of any change in the rate of interest on an overdraft not previously agreed.

Mr. Howard: I have no plans to make such an amendment to the Consumer Credit Act in respect of overdrafts not previously agreed. Such overdrafts are an informal and flexible facility which offer considerable benefits to customers and to require written information to be provided would impose an undesirable burden on lenders and might operate to the detriment of customers. In the case of agreed overdrafts, however, an amendment will be made in due course to the Consumer Credit Act to implement the provisions of the Consumer Credit Directive which was adopted in December 1986. Where an overdraft is agreed in advance the directive requires certain information, including the interest rate, to be notified to the consumer at the time that the agreement is made and subsequently where there is a change in the terms of the agreement.

Guinness plc

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he now expects to receive the report of his inspectorate's investigations into the Guinness company.

Mr. Howard: The investigation is progressing with all possible expedition, but I cannot say when a report will be received.

Regional Aid

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the total annual amount of regional aid paid to firms in (a) the north-west, (b) Lancashire, (c) Merseyside and (d) Greater Manchester in each year from 1976 to 1986; and if he will also express these figures at 1986 comparable prices.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I regret that the information requested is not available in the form required and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, I can provide the following total of regional assistance paid to firms in the north-west.

Financial Year	Total Payments of Assistance £000's (actual figures at date)	Total Payments of Assistance £000's (1985-86 value)
1976-77	60,162	143,495
1977-78	62,535	130,814
1978-79	104,664	197,839
1979-80	81,061	131,109
1980-81	124,580	169,958
1981-82	158,982	197,434
1982-83	115,830	134,169
1983-84	96,959	107,546
1984-85	93,205	99,026
1985-86	75,108	75,108

Notes:

(1) The payments of assistance comprises amount of grant paid under old and more recently new regional development grant schemes, and payments under regional selective assistance.

(2) The source of these figures is the annual reports under the Industry Act 1972 and the Industrial Development Act 1982, and data available from DTI NWRO.

(3) The regional development grant component of the total excludes Cumbria in most years, while the regional selective assistance component includes Cumbria.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the contracts, with the subject of the assignment, awarded to management consultancy or accounting firms by his Department in 1986, with the names of the consultants concerned.

Mr. Butcher: The following is the list for the 1986 calendar year:

Defence Exports

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of total visible exports are accounted for by defence exports.

Mr. Alan Clark: The latest figures available are for 1985. Exports of identified defence equipment, as defined in the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1986" (table 2.8), accounted for 1 per cent. of the United Kingdom's total visible exports for that year.

Telecommunications (Orbital Slots)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many orbital slots were filed with the International Telecommunications Union by his Department in 1984, 1985 and 1986.

Mr. Pattie: Three in 1984, none in 1985 and five in 1986.

Securities and Investments Board

Mr. Maxwell-Hyslop asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which members of the Securities and Investments Board meet the requirements of paragraph 1(3) of schedule 7 to the Financial Services Act 1986 in respect of persons carrying on investment business who are sole traders with a commission income not greater than £25,000 per annum.

Mr. Howard: The Securities and Investments Board has recently requested the transfer to it of powers under the Financial Services Act. Its governing body includes both persons with experience of investment business and other persons. I cannot anticipate the decision whether the board satisfies the requirements laid down in the Act. I am not aware that any present members of the board are engaged in business of a kind described by my hon. Friend. However, members of the board have been appointed on a personal not a representative basis.

United States (Distribution Licences)

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what protection he intends to provide to United Kingdom companies which are asked or required to open their books to United States Government officials under threat of supply denial; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: I have not yet announced a decision about the United States request for audit visits under the distribution licence system.

GATT (EC-United States Agreement)

Mr. Lawrence asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make available the text of the recent decision by the Council of Ministers of the European Community concerning the agreement between the Community and the United States of America for the conclusion of negotiations under GATT article XXIV.6.

Mr. Alan Clark: Copies are available in the Library of the House and in the Vote Office.

Jaguar Rover Australia

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when Rover Group expects to complete the sale of its Australian operating subsidiary, Jaguar Rover Australia.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand that Rover Group has announced that it has sold its Australian operating subsidiary, JRA Limited, to a new consortium company, JRA Holdings Ltd. The consortium comprises JRA management, Rover Group and Jaguar and a group of institutional investors led by Citicorp Capital Investors Australian Ltd. and the Byvest Management Buy-out Group.

As part of the agreement Rover Group and Jaguar will each subscribe 20 per cent. of the equity of the new holding company. The management unconditionally holds 15 per cent. of the equity, which could be increased to 25 per cent. if certain performance targets are met over the next five years.

The business of JRA will be unchanged following the sale.

Following the completion of the sale of JRA, and notwithstanding Rover Group's minority shareholding in the new holding company, the Government will accept no further responsibility for ensuring the obligations of the company are met.

Oil (Exports and Imports)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will publish in the Official Report, a table showing imports and exports of (a) crude oil and (b) petroleum products in terms of weight and value for the United Kingdom and such information as is available to him about the United States of America, Japan, Germany, France, Italy, Holland and Belgium for 1972, 1979, 1985 and to the latest available date in 1986.

Mr. Alan Clark [pursuant to his reply, 17 February 1987]: The available information is in the following tables.

Vehicle Imports

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will impose an anti-dumping duty on imports of commercial vehicles from MAN of Germany; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark [pursuant to his reply, 17 February 1987]: The treaty of Rome does not recognise the concept of dumping between member states. However, competition between undertakings in different parts of the Community is governed by the competition rules in articles 85 and 86 of the treaty of Rome. In relation to motor vehicles these rules are administered by the EC Commission.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps are taken to ensure that complete cars imported by General Motors from their plants in Germany are not being sold at less than the fair market value in their country of origin.

Mr. Alan Clark [pursuant to his reply, 17 February 1987]: There are no grounds for the Government to interfere in General Motors' pricing policy for cars which it imports from Germany. The treaty of Rome does not recognise the concept of dumping between member states and it is not uncommon for the price of motor vehicles to vary according to the member state in which they are sold. General Motors and other motor vehicle manufacturers must, however, determine their pricing strategy with regard to United Kingdom and EC competition laws. Responsibility for investigating complaints of anti-competitive behaviour under these laws rests with, respectively, the Director General of Fair Trading and the European Commission.

ENERGY

Plutonium

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list the countries to which plutonium has been exported in each year since 1979; for what purposes; and in what amounts.

Mr. Goodlad: In the period May 1979 to December 1986, a total of 2,140 kg of plutonium in both separated form and when present in irradiated fuel has been exported for civil purposes. The countries to which plutonium has been exported in consignments larger than gram quantities are as follows:

Austria
Belgium
Canada
France
Federal Republic of Germany
Italy
Japan
Netherlands
Sweden
Switzerland
United States of America

Each country listed has a safeguards agreement with the International Atomic Energy Agency. Information relating to individual country figures is commercially sensitive.

Committee of Public Accounts (Recommendations)

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Energy whether he will list those recommendations of the Committee of Public Accounts since 1983 affecting his Department which have been implemented.

Mr. Peter Walker: I refer the hon. Member to the Treasury minutes published in response to the relevant PAC reports (Cmnd. 9178, 9325, 9368, 9546, 9755, 9776 and 9917). The Committee, on which the hon. Member serves, monitors departmental progress with accepted recommendations.

Nuclear Power Stations

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Energy what lessons he has drawn from the blockages in emergency access to Bradwell nuclear power station on 14 January allowing for (a) the effect of heavy snow falls and icy conditions on the mobility of vehicles required for evacuation purposes, (b) the ability in adverse conditions of emergency personnel to move away before a fatal radiation dose is experienced, (c) the effect of severe weather conditions on the mobility of fire engines and (d) difficulties in evacuating nearby centres of population in drawing up emergency plans at nuclear sites; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Stockton, North (Mr. Cook) on 29 January 1987 at column 328.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list the contracts, with the subject of the assignment, awarded to management consultancy or accounting firms by his Department in 1986, with the name of the consultants concerned.

Mr. Peter Walker: My Department placed the following contracts with management consultancy and accountancy firms in 1986:

Firm and Subject of Assignment

Energy Systems Trade Association Ltd.
Provision of professional services for the organisation of an international seminar.

IUTEP Ltd.
Development of contract energy management guidelines for local authority single buildings.

LAMSAC
Demonstration of monitoring and targeting systems in local authorities.

PA Consultants
Advice on local government energy management in Scotland.

Peat, Marwick, Mitchell and Co.
Study of the methodology used by the UKAEA in recording pre-Trading Fund decomissioning and radioactive waste management liabilities.

Price Waterhouse
Development of reservoir engineering database.

Price Waterhouse (New York) (Toronto) (Tokyo)
Advice on US, Canadian and Japanese accounting conventions for British Gas offer for sale.

Touche Ross
Scrutiny of British Gas share offer for multiply applications.

Tyzack and Partners Ltd.
Advice on the selection of the Director General of Ofgas.

In addition to the above, my Department appoints the auditors to British Coal, the electricity supply industry and the Oil and Pipelines Agency.

Electricity (Transmission Systems)

Mr. Barron asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list information available to him on the capacity and routes of new transmission systems for the national electricity grid planned for the period up to 1995.

Mr. Goodlad: The Central Electricity Generating Board provides annually a general description of its proposals for investment in the transmission system. However, my Department normally receives detailed information on the capacity and routes of individual proposals for new transmission lines only where the Secretary of State's consent to place a line above ground is necessary under section 10*(b)* of the schedule to the Electric Lighting (Clauses) Act 1899, as amended by the Electricity Act 1947. My Department has no applications for such consent at present.

Matters relating to the electricity transmission system in Scotland are for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Power Stations

Mr. Barron asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list each power station site for which planning approval has been granted since 1965, stating in each case (a) the time lapse between when the application for planning approval was first filed and when it was granted and (b) whether or not the local authorities for the area in which the site was located were amongst the objectors.

Mr. Goodlad: I will write to the hon. Member with the information requested as soon as possible.

Mr. Barron asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list information available to him on the site, capacity and type of power stations due to be decommissioned by the South of Scotland Electricity Board and the Central Electricity Generating Board up to 1995 indicating the expected date of decommissioning of such capacity.

Mr. Goodlad: I am advised by the Central Electricity Generating Board that power station decommissioning plans are only confirmed for 12 months ahead. In the period to 26 October 1987, the following stations are to be decommissioned:

Site	Capacity	Type
Northfleet	342 MW	Oil
Richborough	228 MW	Oil
Roosecote	60 MW	Coal

In addition, 427 MW of gas turbine capacity (mostly auxiliary plant) is to be decommissioned.

The CEGB has no other firm plans for decommissioning up to 1995. During this period, several stations will reach the end of their currently assumed nominal lives, but this does not mean that they will necessarily be decommissioned at that time.

Matters concerning the South of Scotland Electricity Board are for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Nuclear Emergencies

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Energy why, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, East (Mr. Strang) on 10 December, Official Report, column 196, studies commissioned or undertaken by his Department on emergency plans for nuclear installations over the past five years are confidential.

Mr. Goodlad: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, East (Mr. Strang) on 12 February 1987 at column 317.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make it his policy to publish detailed scenarios of nuclear emergency exercises.

Mr. Goodlad: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Islington, South and Finsbury (Mr. Smith) on 4 February 1987 at columns 687-88.

WALES

Playgroups

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales how much financial support Her Majesty's Government have given to Mudiad Ysgolian Meitherium, the Welsh Language playgroup movement; and what progress Mudiad Ysgolian Meitherium has made while support was being given in terms of the formulation of new groups.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The information is as follows:

	1979-80	1980-81	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86	1986-87

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the contracts, with the subject of the assignment, awarded to management consultancy or accounting firms by his Department in 1986, with the name of the consultants concerned.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The following centrally managed contracts were awarded in 1986 to management consultants or accounting firms:

Name and assignment	£
Ernst & Whinney To advise and assist in the development of computer auditing	79,920
Mr. D. Towell In-service training and staff development	3,320
Coopers and Lybrand Feasibility study of the housing of the visual arts in Wales	49,330

It is not possible to identify, without disproportionate costs, a list of contracts awarded to management consultants or accounting firms in respect of projects not centrally managed.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales, at the latest date for which figures are available, how many people in (a) Wales, (b) Mid Glamorgan and (c) Clwyd have been unemployed for five years or more in numerical terms and as a percentage of the total unemployment figure; and if he will give the same sum for comparative months from 1980 to 1986 inclusive.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards [pursuant to his reply, 11 February 1987, c. 226]: The information requested is given in the following table:

Number of persons unemployed for over five years

Year (at October)	Number	Percentage[1]
(a) Wales
1983[2]	4,945	2·9
1984	6,809	3·8
1985	11,405	6·2
1986	14,897	8·6
(b) Mid Glamorgan
1983[2]	1,152	3·4
1984	1,604	4·6
1985	2,750	7·7
1986	3,530	10·5
(c) Clwyd
1983[2]	727	3·0
1984	964	4·0
1985	1,606	6·4
1986	2,103	8·9

[1] Percentage of the total unemployment figure.
[2] This information is not available in the form requested prior to 1983.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prison Officers (Pay)

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average salary earned by prison officers in 1986; and what percentage of this salary was made up by the working of overtime.

Mr. Mellor: In the financial year 1986-87 a basic grade prison officer with five years' service will have earned an average of £14,220. Overtime, at an average of just under 16 hours per week, will account for 37 per cent. of this amount. In addition, officers not occupying a rent-free quarter will have received a housing allowance of £1,330.

Fresh Start

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department which branches of the Prison Officers Association have indicated to his Department their support for the of introduction of fresh start.

Mr. Mellor: None, nor would I expect any to have done while negotiations with the national executive committee of the Prison Officers Association are in progress.

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions have taken place with prison governors as to their views on fresh start.

Mr. Mellor: Various meetings have been held with the Governors' Branch of the Society of Civil and Public Servants to discuss different aspects of fresh start. The subject has also been discussed at national and regional conferences of governors. At its recent annual general meeting, the governors' branch voted unanimously to give the fresh start plans its full support.

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations his Department has so far received on the introduction of fresh start; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: Many views have been expressed and questions been posed about the introduction of fresh start by prison service staff, trade unions and others inside and outside the service. Most recognise the need to tackle the longstanding problems which the proposals seek to address: the debate is rather about precisely how this should be done. The negotiations with the prison service trade unions now in progress will reveal whether, as we hope, an agreed basis can be found for the necessary changes.

Town Clauses Act (Prosecutions)

Mr. Arnold asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions have been brought in magistrates' courts (a) in Stockport, (b) in the Duchy of Lancaster and (c) in England and Wales under the Town Clauses Act 1847 during the past 12 months.

Mr. Mellor: The latest information available to me is for 1985 and relating to prosecutions under the Town Police Clauses Act 1847, is as follows:

Defendants proceeded against at magistrates' courts in 1985 under provisions of the Town Police Clauses Act 1847

Area	Number of defendants
Stockport	3
Duchy of Lancaster[1]	497
England and Wales	3,471

[1] Take as the three counties of Lancashire, Merseyside and Greater Manchester for which the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster has responsibility for the appointment of magistrates.

Victim Support Schemes

Mr. Arnold asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the £2 million he is making available in 1987-88 in further support for victim support schemes will be paid direct to local schemes; if he will list the purposes of his funding; and what method he will adopt in deciding which schemes to support.

Mr. Mellor: Awards will be made to local schemes, subject to general conditions set by the Home Office, by an independent panel assisted by officers of the National Association of Victims Support Schemes. The funds will be to meet the salary costs of co-ordinators or to assist with running costs, and for ancillary purposes. Schemes applying for these awards must be affiliated to the NAVSS, and must demonstrate that they are capable of making effective use of the money and of obtaining from other sources the balance of funds they require.

Sickle Cell Disease

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what training and instructions are given to prison medical staff on the diagnosis and treatment of sickle cell disease; whether, in the light of the inquest verdict of natural causes aggravated by lack of care on the death from sickle cell disease of Stephen Bogle, a prisoner at Brixton prison, he has undertaken or intends to undertake a review of such training and instructions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: It is not the practice of the director of prison medical services to provide training or instruction for medical officers in the diagnosis or treatment of particular medical conditions. They are, however, encouraged to further their knowledge in appropriate ways and to take advantage of opportunities for external training in specific aspects of general medicine and certain specialisms. The circumstances of all deaths which occur during or shortly following prison custody are examined for any lessons which may be learned. This will be done in the case of Stephen Bogle.

Fraud Offences

Mr. Weetch asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received seeking legislation to extend to fraud offences the provisions in the Drug Trafficking Offences Act 1986 in so far as they relate to the confiscation of illicit proceeds; what was his response; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: A general welcome was received for the proposal in our White Paper "Criminal Justice—Plans for Legislation" (Cmnd. 9658) for extending to other serious and profitable offences, including fraud, the power to make restraint and confiscation orders. This proposal would be given effect by part IV of the Criminal Justice Bill.

Immigration Appeals

Mr. Lawler asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the current average times between an immigration appeal being lodged and the case being heard before an adjudicator at each of the appellate centres.

Mr. Waddington: I understand from the appellate authorities that the current average waiting times between receipt of an appeal by them and the appeal being listed for hearing are as follows:

Hearing Centre	United Kingdom Appeals (months)	[1]Overseas Appeals (months)
Central London	5·0	3·0
Birmingham	1·5	1·5
Harmondsworth	1·0	4·0
Leeds	1·0	3·5
Manchester	3·0	5·0
Southampton	1·0	2·0

[1] In overseas cases the appellate authorities do not list the appeal for hearing until the appellant's representative has indicated he is ready to proceed, and the times given run from that date.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the contracts, with the subject of the assignment, awarded to management consultancy or accounting firms by his Department in 1986, with the name of the consultants concerned.

Mr. Hurd: In my reply to the hon. Member on 3 February 1987, at column 566, I explained that records do not distinguish between management and computer consultancies. Details of all consultancy assignments are as follows:

Prisoners (Accommodation)

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total expenditure on accommodating prisoners in police cells in the financial year 1985-86.

Mr. Mellor: The total amount paid to police forces for cell accommodation in the financial year 1985-86 was £2,245,332·82p.

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the highest number of prisoners held in police and court cells on any night during 1986.

Mr. Mellor: The highest number of prisoners recorded as having been held in police and court cells in England and Wales on any night during 1986 was 293 on 7-8 December.

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average number of prisoners held in police and court cells in England and Wales in the weeks ended 20 December 1986 and 27 December 1986.

Mr. Mellor: The average number of prisoners held in police and court cells in England and Wales during the weeks ending 20 December and 27 December was 178 and 91 respectively.

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the longest period of time for which a prisoner was detained in police cells during 1986.

Mr. Mellor: Comprehensive information is not available centrally about the length of time during which each prisoner was held in police cells in England and Wales during 1986. However, I am advised by the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that the longest period during which a prisoner was held in Metropolitan police cells was 47 nights.

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the highest number of female prisoners held in police and court cells on any night during 1986.

Mr. Mellor: The highest number of female prisoners recorded as having been held in police and court cells in England and Wales during 1986 was 134 on 9-10 December.

Prison Officers' Housing (Culcheth)

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what works are required to secure the adoption of roads, footpaths, street lighting and the sewage pumping station in relation to the 39 empty prison officers' houses at Culcheth; what adoption specifications are being sought from the local authority; and when he expects the negotiations on this with the local authority will be complete.

Mr. Mellor: The works required to secure the adoption of roads, footpaths, streetlighting and the sewage pumping station in relation to the 39 empty prison officers' houses at Culcheth will be determined by the adoption specifications, the details of which are being finalised with the local authority. The specifications will state the minimum standards of construction required by the local authority for the above-named services. Negotiations with the local authority will take at least five weeks to complete.

Transit Visas

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) whether he will rescind the requirement of a transit visa for those airline passengers continuing a journey from Heathrow, having arrived at Gatwick, or vice versa, and who have no intention of remaining in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what criteria were used in deciding to require transit passengers from Gatwick to Heathrow and vice versa to hold a transit visa when travelling by road but not to impose the same requirement for helicopter travellers.

Mr. Waddington: Transit passengers arriving by air who have a confirmed reservation on an onward flight leaving within 24 hours do not normally need a visa, although this concession has been withdrawn in respect of some nationalities. Transit passengers who can transfer to their onward flights under secure arrangements within the same airport are not required to pass through controls. Others who wish or need to gain access to areas outside an airport's security limits, for example to travel from one airport to another, have to pass through controls. This requirement is an integral part of immigration control. The requirement to pass through controls was waived for helicopter travellers between Gatwick and Heathrow because, when not in the air, they could be kept within secure areas at both airports.

Immigration

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) in how many cases, in each of the years from 1983 to 1986, his Department has confirmed that there are no conditions attached to a person's stay in the United Kingdom by virtue of the provisions of paragraph 6(1) of schedule 2 to the Immigration Act 1971, following administrative errors by immigration officers at ports in failing to endorse conditions of entry in passports;

(2) how many persons in each of the years from 1983 to 1986 are known to have qualified for indefinite leave to enter the United Kingdom under paragraph 6(1) of schedule 2 to the Immigration Act 1971 because of administrative errors by immigration officers at ports in failing to endorse conditions of entry in passports.

Mr. Waddington: The information requested is not centrally recorded.

Data Network

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the design of the Government data network will take account of the possibility of data transfers between Departments connected to the network that at the moment do not take place; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: I have been asked to reply.

The proposed Government data network will allow for new transfers of data, but its use will not alter the requirement that the originating Department authorise such a transfer.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Class Size

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish a table showing the number of classes in each local education authority with 30 and under, 31 to 35, 36 to 40 and over 40 pupils per class for primary and secondary schools in 1979, 1983 and for the most recent year for which figures are available, respectively.

Mrs. Rumbold: The number of classes in the four size bands requested in maintained primary and secondary schools for each local education authority in England for 1979, 1983 and 1986 are as follows. The analyses are in respect of classes taught by one teacher on a specified school period within the day of the census count in January of each year. The figures may not, therefore, be representative of the pattern of classes over the academic year as a whole.

Nursery Education

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to what percentage of three and four-year-old children in each local authority area are (a) in full-time nursery education and (b) in part-time nursery education; and how this compares with each of the last five years.

Mrs. Rumbold: The percentages of children aged under five in 1981 and 1986 participating in full-time and part-time nursery education in maintained nursery schools and in nursery and infant classes in primary schools is given in the table. Information in exactly the form requested and for all of the years would incur disproportionate cost.

[1] The number of pupils under five in January expressed as a percentage of the estimated 3 and 4-year-old population.
[2] Includes Isles of Scilly.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to the age participation rate in education for the under-fives expressed as a percentage of the two, three and four-year-old age group.

Mrs. Rumbold: The participation rate of children under five in January 1986 attending maintained nursery and primary schools in England was 43 per cent. of the relevant three and four-year-old population.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the contracts, with the subject of the assignment, awarded to management consultancy or accounting firms by his Department in 1986, with the name of the consultants concerned.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Department awarded five contracts to management and accountancy firms during the 1986 calendar year, as follows:

Name of Firm and Assignment

Arthur Young
Provision of advice as part of the Department's financial management review of the Secondary Examinations Council and School Curriculum Development Committee

Deloitte, Haskins and Sells
Consultancy support for the audit of the Department's data processing operational controls.

Deloitte, Haskins and Sells
Financial management advice and assistance to the University Grants Committee.

Butler Cox & Partners Ltd
Development of an integrated Office Systems Strategy.

Touche Ross & Co.
Production of the long form report for the sale of part of the Plant Breeding Institute and the National Seed Development Organisation.

Education Act 1981

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he expects to receive the London university project report on the policy and implementation of the Education Act 1981; if the report will be available to the general public; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend received the report on 31 December 1986. It will be published by the university of London institute of education in due course.

The Department is studying the report, together with the findings of two complementary projects. Any further action must await the outcome of the inquiry by the Select Committee on Education, Science and the Arts into special education.

Boarding School Provision

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science to what factors he attributes the decline in the number of boarders in maintained schools in England between 1983 and 1986; and whether he will discuss with the local education authorities the possibility of reversing this trend.

Mrs. Rumbold: One reason has doubtless been the fall in the school population as a whole, though there may well be other factors in individual cases. Any significant reduction in maintained boarding school provision requires my right hon. Friend's approval under section 12 or 13 of the Education Act 1980. He decides such cases on their individual merits, including any objections received. There are no present plans to discuss boarding education generally with local education authorities.

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science why his Department does not collect centrally the information requested in two parliamentary questions on 11 February, Official Report, column 223, by the hon. Member for Rutland and Melton about boarding school provisions; and whether he will take immediate steps to do so.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Department has found no operational need for this information, and in any event it would have to take account of the additional cost and burden the collection of such information would impose on LEAs and schools.

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information is available to his Department about boarding school provision in the maintained sector other than that contained in the reply by the hon. Member for Dartford (Mr. Dunn) to the hon. Member for Rutland and Melton on 11 February, Official Report, column 223.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Department occasionally receives information from the Boarding Schools Association obtained through its clearing house. Her Majesty's inspectorate advise the Secretary of State of its findings in the light of routine visits to individual boarding schools.

Training (Expenditure)

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what analyses are available to his Department of expenditure on (a) education support grants, (b) technical and vocational education initiative and (c) in-service training, INSET; if he will publish an analysis of expenditure on each such programme in each of the last three years showing (a) the amount of grant given for new projects, (b) the proportion of total expenditure on such projects calculated to be provided by the grant, (c) the amount of grant given for continuation of existing projects, (d) the proportion of total expenditure on existing projects in that year calculated to be provided by the grant, (e) the total outturn expenditure on all grant-related projects, including expenditure from other sources and (f) the overall proportion of such outturn expenditure provided by the grant; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will estimate what amount and proportion of departmental spending in 1987-88 to support in-service training of teachers related to the general certificate of secondary education is likely to be consumed by additional spending on supply teachers; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: Local education authorities plan to spend £16·7 million on training for the GCSE in 1987-88. It is not possible to estimate how much of this is attributable to the provision of supply teachers as this depends on the arrangements made by individual authorities to suit local needs and circumstances.

Science Budget

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give the figures for the proportion of his Department's science budget allocated to each of the constituent colleges of the university of Wales for each year since 1979; and what is the projected figure for 1987-88.

Mr. Walden [pursuant to his reply, 22 January 1987, c. 651]: The information is as follows:

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give the figures for the proportion of his Department's science budget allocated to institutions in Wales, other than the university of Wales, for each year since 1979; what is the projected figure for 1987-88; and if he will name these institutions.

Mr. Walden [pursuant to the reply, 22 January 1987, c. 651]: The information requested is as follows:

Nursery Places

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time day nursery places are provided by each local authority and how this compares with each of the last five years.

Mrs. Currie: I have been asked to reply.

Information on whether the places are full-time or part-time is not collected centrally. The total numbers of day nursery places provided by each local authority in England are listed in the documents "Children's Day Care Facilities at 31 March, England" (A/F/6); copies for each of the four years from 1981 are in the Library.

Figures for 1985 are given in the table.

Local Authorities (Grants and Subsidies)

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the total identifiable grants and subsidies including urban programme spending made by the Government each year since 1978 to (a) Edinburgh, (b) Bristol, (c) Lambeth, (d) Wandsworth, (e) Haringey, (f) Newcastle upon Tyne, (g) Cardiff, (h) Southampton, (i) Leicester, (j) Leeds, (k) Liverpool, (l) Manchester and (m) Sheffield (i) in total and (ii) in pounds per head of population.

Mr. John Patten: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Committee of Public Accounts (Recommendations)

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will list those recommendations of the Committee of Public Accounts since 1983 affecting his Department which have been implemented.

Mr. Ridley: I refer the hon. Member to the Treasury minutes published in response to the relevant PAC reports. The Committee, on which the hon. Member serves, monitors departmental progress with accepted recommendations. The Treasury minutes for reports which affect my Department are:

House Building

Sir Peter Hordern asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will now accept the general level of houses to be built, and their distribution, between London and the shire counties, as set out in the Serplan document.

Mr. Waldegrave: In its regional statement, SERPLAN provided estimates of the levels and distribution of housing provision required in the period 1991 to 2001. In his letter of regional strategic guidance, published on 19 June 1986, my right hon. Friend agreed that overall these estimates could provide a reasonable basis on which to bring forward proposals for structure plan alterations. He emphasised, however, that the figures should be regarded as neither prescriptive nor inflexible, and that they remained to be tested and revised in the process of structure plan reviews and in the light of the circumstances obtaining at the time.

EC Aid

Mr. Garrett asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the number of applications since 1984 by local authorities in the northern region for European Economic Community aid for projects which have also received central Government aid.

Mr. Chope: The European Economic Community aid to local authorities for which the department is responsible is the European regional development fund. Since 1984, the European Commission has approved a total of 80 local authority projects in the Northern region. The total fund grant awarded exceeded £26 million. More than £12 million went on five large projects, of which two were in receipt of transport supplementary grant aid and one was in receipt of an Arts Council grant. For smaller projects, the number that received central Government aid is not readily available.

PSA, Glasgow

Mr. Allan Stewart asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to reach a decision on the future of the Property Services Agency office in Glasgow; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: I hope to make an announcement about changes to the PSA territorial organisation, including the office in Glasgow, soon.

National Mobility Scheme

Mr. Fallon asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Darlington, 19 January, Official Report, column 370, he will give the number of tenants registered under the national mobility scheme in each of the last five years, and the number who successfully found accommodation under this scheme.

Mr. Tracey: Records are not kept in precisely the form requested, but reports of the national mobility steering committee for the first five years of the national mobility scheme give the following information:

	New nominations made[1]		Number of moves
	All tenures	by council tenants[2]	All tenures	by council tenants[2]

Housing Investment Programme

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the housing investment programme allocation in 1979 prices to (a) Burnley borough council and (b) Pendle borough council in 1979 and each subsequent year.

Mr. Tracey: The table gives the housing investment programme (HIP) allocations made to Burnley and Pendle borough councils since 1979, together with the total capital expenditure that these councils have been able to incur on housing:

£ million (1979 prices)	HIP allocation	Expenditure
	Burnley
1979-80	5,605	4,791
1980-81	3,792	5,378

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the contracts, with the subject of the assignment, awarded to management consultancy or accounting firms by his Department in 1986, with the name of the consultants concerned.

Mr. Ridley: Central records are collected annually after the end of the financial year. The latest readily available returns therefore cover 1985-86.

The contracts awarded to management consultancy or accounting firms by the Department of the Environment in the financial year 1985-86 were as follows:

Firm and Subject of Assignment

Hazardous Pesticides (Exports)

Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will take steps to stop the export of banned or hazardous pesticides to Third-world countries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: Pesticides may be banned or severely restricted for a number of reasons and the need to impose restrictions will vary depending on local conditions. For example, some are much more persistent in our environment than under tropical conditions; Third world countries may consider certain pesticides that are banned or severely restricted in this country to be vital to protect valuable food crops or for public health campaigns.

Rather than impose our national concerns on other countries, we believe our role should be to assist them to make their own decisions, in the light of their own circumstances. This is the philosophy underlying the agreements already reached in OECD and in FAO, and was endorsed at a UNEP meeting which we hosted in London earlier this month. The United Kingdom was one of the first countries to implement these agreements under which we notify other countries whenever we ban or severely restrict chemicals (including pesticides) so that those countries can consider what action may be appropriate to their circumstances. Individual countries are notified again when one of these chemicals is first exported to that country.

Bed-and-Breakfast Accommodation

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the current cost to local authorities for bed-and-breakfast hotel accommodation.

Mr. Tracey: The latest available information is for 1985-86. For that year local authorities have reported to the Department net expenditure of £21·3 million on maintaining households in bed-and-breakfast accommodation under part III of the Housing Act 1985.

Crown Suppliers

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when the study on the feasibility of the privatisation of the Crown suppliers by Samuel Montagu and Coopers and Lybrand commenced; what is the cost of the study; when it is expected to be completed; and what arrangements he intends to make for its publication.

Mr. Chope: The study commenced on 1 December 1986. It will cost £97,600 plus expenses. It will be completed soon. I shall make a further announcement about the study when I have considered its results.

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total amount of purchases by the Crown suppliers in 1985-86; and what proportion was British manufactured.

Mr. Chope: £135 million, of which 96 per cent. was purchased from firms registered in the United Kingdom.

Departmental Purchases

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total amount of purchases of (a) textiles, (b) clothing, (c) carpets, (d) furniture, (e) pottery and ceramic goods and (f) cutlery in 1985-86; and what proportion of each category was British manufactured.

Mr. Chope: Following is the information:

	£ million	United Kingdom manufacture per cent.
Textiles	7·4	70
Clothing	0·6	100
Carpets	8·1	99
Furniture	47·1	98
Pottery/Ceramics	4·3	100
Cutlery	0·9	99·75

Property Repayment Services System

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many locations are involved in the radical option under the property repayment services system; what is the maximum that can be spent; and whether the Property Services Agency may tender for the work.

Mr. Chope: The radical option of the property repayment services system applies on an experimental basis to 92 properties on the Government's civil estates. In these properties, the experimenting Departments involved, (the Department of Health and Social Security and the Department of Employment) may carry out minor new works costing up to £150,000 and maintenance jobs costing up to £100,000. The purpose of these experiments is to test the implications of enabling client departments to commission relevant works services direct from contractors or consultants without reference to the Property Services Agency.

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many additional posts have been created in client departments arising from the property repayment services system.

Mr. Chope: Information on the creation of additional posts, if any, in client departments as a result of the property repayment services system is a matter for the individual Departments concerned.

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the accounting and tender arrangements that accommodation officers must follow under the property repayment services system; and what are the arrangements that Property Services Agency staff must follow for comparable work.

Mr. Chope: The financial control systems set up by Departments in connection with PRS delegated works on the accommodation they occupy must remain a matter for the individual Department concerned and the accounting officers. PSA has, however, issued guidance on the general principles to be followed, in, for example, letting contracts for minor works, and on the agency's own practice in these matters, in the form of the booklet "Managing Works: A Guide for Accommodation Managers". I shall arrange for copies to be placed in the Library of the House.

Instructions for PSA's own staff on accounting and tender arrangements are contained in internal circulars and codes, compliance with which is ensured through the agency's internal audit and technical audit procedures.

Museums and Galleries

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the Property Services Agency will be able to tender for (a) maintenance work and (b) new work for museums and galleries after the new arrangements for them come into force after April 1988.

Mr. Chope: I shall answer this question shortly.

North Sea (Environmental Protection)

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will provide details of the discussions which took place during the meeting of the scientific and technical working group which was held in Aberdeen in June 1986 in preparation for the international conference on the environmental protection of the North sea 1987.

Mr. Waldegrave: The meeting was one of a series attended by scientific experts from the North sea littoral states, the Commission of the European Communities and international organisations concerned with the protection of the North sea. Its main purpose was to revise the quality status report on the North sea produced for the 1984

North sea conference in Bremen. The final revision of this report will be completed in the summer, after which I would expect it to be published.

Direct Labour Organisations

Mr. William Shelton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he proposes to take any further action against loss-making local authority direct labour organisations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: My right hon. Friend has decided to ask two more councils to submit special reports on their direct labour organisations.

The first is Lambeth borough council, whose DLO lost some £1·4 million on major new building work in the three years 1982-83 to 1984-85. The council has still not produced figures for 1985-86, although these should have been submitted no later than 30 September 1986.

The second is Burnley borough council, whose DLO lost over £110,000 on maintenance work in 1984-85, and a further £35,000 in 1985-86.

Our normal practice hitherto has been to wait for three consecutive financial failures before requesting special reports. Since authorities have over five years' experience of the operation of the DLO legislation, we have now decided to request special reports after two consecutive failures — waiting for three failures allows too long before real pressure is brought to bear to contain losses. We have therefore decided to seek a special report from Burnley without waiting for the 1986-87 results.

Council House Sales

Mrs. Roe asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will update the table giving information on sales of dwellings by each local authority in England, which was referred to in the answer given to the hon. Member for Swindon (Mr. Coombs) on 5 November 1986.

Mr. John Patten: I have today placed in the Library the latest version of the regular table giving information reported by each local authority in England on the progress of council house sales up to the end of September 1986.

Photochemical Oxidants Review Group

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the findings of the photochemical oxidants review group.

Mr. Waldegrave [pursuant to his reply, 9 February 1987, c. 112]: The first report of the photochemical oxidants review group will be published on 18 February 1987. I shall arrange for copies to be placed in the Library of the House.

Rates

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list in the Official Report (a) the rate support grant spending assumption per head of population for 1987-88 for Adur, Hove and Worthing district councils and (b) the proposed grant to be received in 1987-88 per head of population in Adur, Hove and Worthing district councils; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 417]: The following table sets out, for each authority, (a) the settlement assumption of total expenditure, which has been set for non-rate limited authorities at 4·159 per cent. above 1986-87 budgets; (b) the difference between this figure and each authority's grant related expenditure assessment; (c) the block grant payable for spending at the settlement assumption.

	Spending assumption (1986-87 budget + 4·159 per cent.) (£ per head)	Spending by comparison with grant related expenditure (£ per head)	Block grant payable at spending assumption (£ per head)
Adur district council	61·07	+11·65 (+23·6 per cent.)	11·87
Hove district council	69·37	−14·68 (−17·5 per cent.)	67·30
Worthing district council	71·34	+1·11 (+1·6 per cent.)	36·66

The principal factor underlying the different levels of grant payable to these authorities is the differences in their expenditure compared to grant related expenditure.

Consultants

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the full cost of the use of consultants in the district works office, Westminster; how many consultants have been employed; and what is the comparable cost of using Property Services Agency staff.

Mr. Chope: I shall answer this question shortly.

THE ARTS

Wales

Mr. Wigley asked the Minister for the Arts what proportion of the central Government arts budget was spent in Wales in each financial year since 1979-80; and what is the projected figure for 1987-88.

Mr. Luce: Between 2 and 3 per cent. of my budget was spent in Wales in the years in question. However, Welsh arts bodies also receive funds from my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Public Libraries (Political Material)

Mr. Cartwright asked the Minister for the Arts what consultations he is having with representatives of library interests in discharge of his functions under section 1 of the Public Libraries and Museums Act 1964 to ensure that the Government's proposed code of practice under section 4 of the Local Government Act 1986 does not inhibit the provision of a comprehensive service of political manifestos and other politically-related material by public libraries.

Mr. Luce [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 479-80]: None. The code of practice to be issued by my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for the Environment for Scotland and for Wales, will be concerned with local authorities' decisions to incur expenditure on publicity, that is, any communication in whatever form, addressed to the public at large or to a section of the public. We do not consider that this is relevant to, or should in any way inhibit, the provision of a comprehensive library service under the Public Libraries and Museums Act 1964.

CIVIL SERVICE

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Minister for the Civil Service if he will list the contracts, with the subject of the assignment, awarded to management consultancy or accounting firms by his Department in 1986, with the name of the consultants concerned.

Mr. Luce: The contracts awarded to management consultancy and accounting firms during the calendar year 1986 are as follows:

Firm and Subject of assignment

BGM Consultants Limited
Identification of core skills for the young people project.

Business Research Unit
Evaluation of staff appraisal scheme.

[1] Costs for these studies were shared with other government departments.

YTS

Mr. Favell asked the Minister for the Civil Service if he has proposals to increase the number of YTS approved places in the Civil Service and the level of take-up.

Mr. Luce: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer which my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister gave on 29 April 1986 at column 355. My right hon. and learned Friend the Paymaster General announced on 21 November 1986 at c. 367 that a two-year YTS scheme was being designed for introduction in the Department of Employment and the Manpower Services Commission. I am confident that other schemes in suitable Government Departments will follow. I am satisfied with the current level of take-up on schemes in the Civil Service (90 per cent.) and I do not foresee any difficulties in the future.

NATIONAL FINANCE

EC Budget

69. Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer which member nations are now net contributors to the European Economic Community budget.

Mr. Brooke: The United Kingdom, even after abatement, and Germany are both substantial net contributors to the EC budget. After taking account of their contributions to United Kingdom refunds and abatement, the French have also been net contributors, but on a modest scale.

70. Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the European Economic Community Council of Foreign Ministers will next discuss how to bring total European Economic Community expenditure into line with the financial resourses available within the 1·4 per cent. value added tax limit.

Mr. Brooke: The agenda for the next Foreign Affairs council has not yet been fixed. It would normally be for the Budget or Agriculture Councils to discuss first the proposals which the Commission should bring forward for ensuring that expenditure remains within the available resources.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the contracts, with the subject of the assignment, awarded to management consultancy or accounting firms by his Department in 1986, with the name of the consultants concerned.

Mr. Brooke: The following management consultancy and accounting firms were awarded contracts by Her Majesty's Treasury in 1986. With the exception of the first two, all were placed by the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency (CCTA).

Firm and Subject of assignment

I. E. Symonds and Partners
Study of building construction projects.

K. M. G. Thomson McLintock
Evaluation of office automation trial.

Price Waterhouse
Investigation of investment appraisal for computer projects.

Stratpac Limited

ICL
Study on aspects of MUST.

Alcohol

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will state for each of the last 10 years for which figures are available the percentage change on the previous year of the rate of tax levied on beer; and if he will also state the percentage change in revenue which was generated by this change in each of those years;

(2) if he will state for each of the last 10 years for which figures are available the percentage change on the previous year of the rate of tax levied on spirits; and if he will also state the percentage change in revenue which was generated by this change in each of those years;

(3) if he will state for each of the last 10 years for which figures are available the percentage change on the previous year of the rate of tax levied on fortified wines; and if he will also state the percentage change in revenue which was generated by this change in each of those years;

(4) if he will state for each of the last 10 years for which figures are available the percentage change on the previous year of the rate of tax levied on table wines; and if he will also state the percentage change in revenue which was generated by this change in each of those years.

Mr. Brooke: The percentage increases in the rates of duty are shown below. Also shown are the percentage increases in total revenue in each of the last 10 years. However, the increases in revenue reflect factors other than the changes in duty, such as changes in producers' prices and in consumers' preferences. Year on year comparisons are also sensitive to fluctuations in the pattern of pre-Budget stockbuilding and to distortions caused by the introduction of duty deferment for wines and spirits in 1982-83. I regret, therefore, that it is not possible to estimate the revenue effects of the duty change in isolation.

Receipts for table wines and fortified wines are not separately identifiable, so figures are given for receipts for lower strength wine of fresh grape, which is mostly table wine, and for middle and higher strength wines of fresh grape, which include most of the fortified wines.

[1] This duty rate became effective from 1 January 1977 as a result of a 10 per cent. regulator surcharge on the 1976 Budget duty rate.
[2] Not available due to restructuring of wine duties.
[3] Based on estimated duty charged.
[4] Revenue changes are for middle and higher strength wines together; duty changes are shown separately.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will estimate the total annual revenue which would be generated by an increase in duty of 5p on a bottle of table wine;

(2) if he will estimate the total annual revenue which would be generated by an increase in duty of 10p on a bottle of spirits.

Mr. Brooke: The estimated full year net revenue yield (including consequential value-added tax) of raising duty by 10p on a 75cl bottle of spirits is about £15 million in 1987-88 prices. On the same basis, a duty increase of 5p on a 70cl bottle of table wine would yield about £25 million.

Cigarettes

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many representations he has received (a) for and (b) against increasing the duty on cigarettes.

Mr. Brooke: My right hon. Friend has received numerous representations both for and against increasing the duty on cigarettes from a wide range of bodies and individuals. These will be carefully considered.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Milk Production

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many acres of land are to be taken out of use for milk production in the United Kingdom when the EEC milk package is implemented; and what are his proposals for the use of this land.

Mr. Gummer: In view of the wide range of circumstances under which dairy farmers operate, it is not realistic to make an estimate of the amount of land likely to be released from milk production. It is for individual farmers to decide how best to run their businesses, but the measures which I announced on 9 February are designed to help farmers find new opportunities.

Production Control

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any plans for production control in each sector of the farming industry; and if he has discussed this with the representatives of the National Farmers Union.

Mr. Gummer: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave him on Monday 16 February at column 486. The NFU and I frequently discuss CAP reform.

Consultancy

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Minister of Agriculture, if he will list the contracts, with the subject of the assignments, awarded to management consultancy or accounting firms by his Department in 1986, with the name of the consultants concerned.

Mr. Jopling: My Department has placed the following contracts with management and accountancy consultants in 1986.

Firm and Assignment

Computer Services Co. Ltd.
Design of new data processing system for Agricultural Census:

Coopers & Lybrand associates
Regional review:

Pactel
Data flow study:

Peat Marwick Mitchell
Management Accountancy Information System:

Sequal Information Ltd.
Design of new data processing system for Agricultural Census:

SRU
Marketing of ADAS Services:

Touche Ross
Dairy Crest Foods:

Wootton Jeffrey
Workstation evaluation:

Dorset Fishermen

Mr. Adley asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will arrange to meet in Dorset the commercial fishermen of Dorset to discuss matters currently of concern to them; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I am aware that the Dorset fishermen are concerned about a number of issues, in particular the recommendations for the future management of the bass stocks made by my scientists last July.

I have advised local fishermen's organisations that they will be consulted when any firm proposals for the management of the fishery are made, and that I would be prepared to see them if they wish to make further representations at that stage.

Animal Welfare

Mr. Hancock asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much has been spent in the last three years on animal welfare by his Department.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The Ministry's published MINIM returns, copies of which have been placed in the Library of the House, show that administrative expenditure on farm animal welfare in 1984-85 and 1985-86 was £2·8 million and £3·4 million respectively. Comparable figures are not available for 1983-84.

Improvement Scheme Applications

Mr. John asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how many agriculture improvement scheme applications have been approved since the commencement of the scheme;

(2) how many agriculture improvement scheme applications have been rejected since the commencement of the scheme;

(3) how many rejected agriculture improvement scheme applications were connected with (a) the ADAS drainage design service and (b) independent applicants;

(4) how many agricultural improvement scheme applications have included land drainage operations as part or whole of the plan.

Mr. Donald Thompson [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 483]: Separate information is not available on whether advice on the preparation of plans involving drainage work which had to be rejected had been given by the ADAS field drainage design service or others. Rejection is usually the result of an applicant's failure to comply with the eligibility conditions of the scheme.

Up to 31 December 1986 7,582 plan applications had been approved in the United Kingdom under the agriculture improvement scheme, 1,395 had been rejected and a further 3,935 were under consideration. Drainage operations accounted for around 13 per cent. of the total approved investments.

Field Drainage Design Service

Mr. John asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what income was generated by ADAS from the field drainage design service from October 1985 to October 1986.

Mr. Donald Thompson [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 483]: In the first 12 months of operation of this scheme, which was introduced in November 1985, invoices for some £84,000, exclusive of VAT, were issued under the field drainage design service.

Mr. John asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proportion of income generated by ADAS from the field drainage design service derives from agricultural clients.

Mr. Donald Thompson [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 483]: Over half of income in 1986 from the field drainage design service came from persons managing or farming agricultural land, or their agents.

Low-input Farming

Mr. John asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish the results of the experiments on low-input farming conducted at Boxworth experimental husbandry farm; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 484]: Information has already been given on a number of occasions to Parliament and the public about the project at Boxworth experimental husbandry farm to compare the economic and ecological effects of three different pesticide programmes in intensive wheat production over a five-year period to harvest 1988. Initial reports on the ecological effects of the study are to be published shortly and reports on economic effects will be available later this year.

Botulism

Mr. Hickmet asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if his Department's veterinary investigation service will make investigations into whether the cause of death on 1 December 1986 of the horse Gamble, stabled at Ponsworthy in Devon, was botulism.

Mr. Donald Thompson [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 484]: Inquiries have revealed that this horse was destroyed on 1 December after a period of illness, that no clinical diagnosis was made and that no specimens from the horse were submitted to the Ministry's laboratories for analysis.

Mr. Hickmet asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the incidence of botulism amongst livestock since the introduction of big bale silage; what is the difference between the big bale silage and Horse Hage; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 484]: Information is not available on the incidence of botulism amongst livestock since the introduction of big bale silage. The difference between big bale silage and Horse Hage is that the latter is vacuum packed in plastic bags.

Mr. Hickmet asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, further to his reply of 12 February 1987, whether any horses have died as a result of contracting botulism which have not been recorded by his Department's laboratories.

Mr. Donald Thompson [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 484]: Since botulism is not a notifiable disease the Ministry does not have information on any cases where no diagnosis was sought from the veterinary investigation service by a private practitioner.

Mr. Hickmet asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if, in the light of information supplied to him by the hon. Member for Glanford and Scunthorpe, he has anything to add to his answer of 12 February on another horse alleged to have eaten the same fodder as the horses which died.

Mr. Donald Thompson [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 484]: I have nothing to add to my answer of 12 February.

Mr. Hickmet asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, further to his reply of Thursday 12 February 1987, what information he has as to how much time both horses which were destroyed spent stabled at Widecombe-in-the-Moor.

Mr. Donald Thompson [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 484]: I have no information as to how long the horses had been stabled at these premises.

Mr. Hickmet asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received concerning the supply in Devon and Cornwall of Horse Hage fodder by Westway and Sons; what information he has received that such fodder is or may be a cause of botulism in horses; what action he has taken as a result; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 484]: No representations other than those from my hon. Friend the Member for Glanford and Scunthorpe have been received about the supply of fodder in Devon and Cornwall. The results of tests so far on samples of the fodder have proved negative.

Mr. Hickmet asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any information as to why Westway and Sons has withdrawn 4,000 bales of Horse Hage and offered to buy back Horse Hage supplied to horse owners; and if he will reconsider his decision not to advise the feed merchant and horse owners about this matter.

Mr. Donald Thompson [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 484]: Any action taken concerning the supply of Horse Hage is a matter for the company concerned. I do not consider that it would be appropriate to advise the feed merchant and horse owners about this matter.

Mr. Hickmet asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will seek to obtain the articles about botulism in horses and other livestock by the veterinary surgeon Mr. Ricketts of Newmarket and published in recent months in the Veterinary Record and elsewhere; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 484]: The Ministry's state veterinary service is aware of the articles about botulism written by Mr. Ricketts and published in the Veterinary Record and elsewhere.

Mr. Hickmet asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make botulism a notifiable disease when contracted (a) by horses or (b) by other livestock; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 484]: Botulism does not exhibit the well established criteria for making a disease notifiable. In particular, it is not contagious and there is no risk of infection of other livestock by an affected animal.

DEFENCE

DROPS

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence what steps were taken to ensure that the 1982 demountable rack off-loading pick-up system competition was carried out with complete fairness to all parties involved; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The 1982 DROPS procurement competition was conducted properly and fairly within the Department's established procurement procedures. These ensure even-handed and full consideration of the industry's proposals against their ability to provide effective value for money satisfaction of the services' requirements.

Experimental Diving Unit

Mr. Warren asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will review the work of the experimental diving unit following the abandonment of the HMS Challenger project; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I do not understand my hon. Friend's reference to abandonment of the HMS Challenger project. The ship is currently undergoing a refit and will be back at sea shortly. A review has taken place of the work of the experimental diving unit, the conclusions of which will shortly be the subject of consultation with the Department's trades unions.

AIDS

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Defence what advice is being given to members of Her Majesty's forces stationed overseas in countries with a high incidence of AIDS.

Mr. Freeman: I have nothing further to add to the replies which I gave to the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire (Mr. Kirkwood) on 19 November 1986, at column 222, to the hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras (Mr. Dobson) on 22 January 1987, at column 730-31, and to the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow (Dr. Godman) on 4 February 1987, at column 716.

Bofors Gun

Mr. O'Neill asked the Secretary of State for Defence if spares and ammunition is still produced for the Bofors light gun.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The only Bofors gun now in service with United Kingdom forces is the 40mm L60; spares and ammunition remain available for this gun.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the contracts, with the subject of the assignment, awarded to management consultancy or accounting firms by his Department in 1986, with the name of the consultants concerned.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Details of consultancy contracts awarded to management consultancy or accounting firms in 1986 are as follows. These do not include computer consultancies and project support work.

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Secretary of State for Defence what invitations to tender he plans to issue to management consultancy or accounting firms during the next three months; and what will be the subject of the assignment in each case.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Plans for management and accounting consultancies over the next three months are not sufficiently firm to allow for the publication of a forward programme.

Housing

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Defence why the proportion of vacant houses owned by his Department has increased during the previous five years.

Mr. Freeman: As I stated in a reply to the hon. Member for Woolwich (Mr. Cartwright) on 28 January 1987, at column 127, the principal reason for this increase has been the growing tendency towards owner-occupation among the armed forces, in common with the national trend: although MOD had disposed of some 6,000 surplus married quarters during the past five years, this reduction in stock has been outpaced by the move towards home-ownership. Another factor has been a major modernisation programme which renders married quarters unavailable for occupation but which, when completed, will leave them much more attractive as family homes.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Defence which local authorities have had use of his Department's housing on a short-term let basis.

Mr. Freeman: Records of lettings to local authorities have not been maintained centrally, but it is known that the following have had use of the Department's housing:

Exeter City Council.
Plymouth City Council.
Portsmouth City Council.
Gosport Borough Council.
Weymouth and Portland Borough Council.
Christchurch Borough Council.
East Hampshire District Council.
Kennet District Council.
Rushmoor District Council.
Test Valley Borough Council.
Rushcliffe District Council.
Salisbury District Council.
North Wiltshire District Council.
West Wiltshire District Council.
Gloucester City Council.
South Oxon District Council.
Harrogate Borough Council.
Alnwick District Council.
London Borough of Greenwich.

Married quarters are currently leased to the following local authorities:

Exeter City Council.
Plymouth City Council.
Portsmouth City Council.
Gosport Borough Council.
Kennet District Council.
North Wiltshire District Council.
London Borough of Greenwich.

School Fees

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total number of children of personnel serving in Her Majesty's forces currently attending boarding schools where the fees are met wholly or partly by his Department because the parent or parents are posted abroad; how many of the pupils are in (a) the maintained and (b) the independent sector; and what is the current cost per annum to his Department.

Mr. Freeman: Boarding school allowance is available to help service parents provide continuity of education for their children during frequent posting moves, whether within United Kingdom or overseas. Records are not maintained in the form requested, but the allowance is currently being paid in respect of some 21,500 children in all. Of these, it is estimated that about 20 per cent. attend school in the maintained sector. The estimated cost of the allowance for the current financial year is £92·404 million.

Arms Exports

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many jobs in the United Kingdom are (a) directly and (b) indirectly supported by arms exports.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: More than 100,000 jobs are estimated to be supported by United Kingdom defence exports. It is not, however, possible to differentiate between those jobs which are directly and indirectly sustained.

Marconi

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will make a statement as to the nature of police and other inquiries currently taking place into the trading practices of Marconi in relation to certain defence contracts.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No. The conduct of the Ministry of Defence police inquiries is the responsibility of the chief constable, Ministry of Defence police and is not a matter for Ministers. However, I can confirm that the Ministry of Defence police are investigating certain allegations relating to MOD contracts placed with the Marconi group of companies.

Helicopters (Search and Rescue)

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the response time and operation of the Sea King helicopter from Royal Air Force Lossiemouth which effected a civilian rescue from a fishing vessel off Wick on 15 February.

Mr. Freeman: On the night of 14-15 February 1987 a Sea King helicopter from RAF Lossiemouth rescued the crew of the fishing vessel Guide Onward, which had caught fire about 70 miles north-east of Lossiemouth. The Sea King was airborne within 16 minutes of being called out by the Rescue co-ordination centre at Edinburgh, and arrived at the scene 30 minutes later. The eight crewmen of the fishing vessel, who were in liferafts, were then winched to safety and were taken back to Lossiemouth.

AWACS

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Defence what has caused the delays in the signing of the airborne warning and control system contract; when he now anticipates that he will sign (a) the memorandum of understanding with the United States Government on airborne warning and control systems and (b) the offset contract with Boeing Corporation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There have been no delays. This is a major procurement and, as my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence said in the House on 18 December 1986, at column 1350, it is subject to satisfactory completion of contractual negotiations with Boeing. It has always been our intention that the purchase will also be the subject of a memorandum of understanding between the United Kingdom and United States Governments. I expect that these agreements will be signed very shortly.

Lieut.-Col. Alan Protheroe

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will state the duties of Lieutenant-Colonel Alan Protheroe of the Territorial Army.

Mr. Freeman: Colonel Protheroe, who holds the rank of full colonel in the Territorial Army, currently holds the position of adviser to the Director of Public Relations (Army) on public relations matters affecting the Territorial Army.

Air Defence

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what lessons he drew from his recent visit to the Falklands on the adequacy of British air defences.

Mr. Stanley: As far as the air defence of the Falklands is concerned, I refer the hon. Member to the reply he received from my right hon. Friend on 27 January, at column 169. As far as British air defence generally is concerned, substantial improvements are taking place in the quantity and quality of our air defence aircraft, in their ground and air-based sensors and in their protection on the ground.

Skynet

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Defence on what dates Skynet 4B and Skynet 4C were respectively registered with the International Frequency Registration Board; and in what orbit position.

Mr. Butcher: I have been asked to reply.

The Skynet 4B and 4C satellite systems have not yet been registered; this is the last stage in the international co-ordination process. Advance publication was sent to the IFRB about Skynet 4B and 4C on 13 April 1982 and 21 July 1983 respectively, specifying orbital locations of 6 deg. E and 53 deg. E respectively.

Telecommunications (Orbital Slots)

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will place in the Library the notifications of request published by the International Telecommunications Union.

Mr. Butcher: I have been asked to reply.

I assume that the hon. Gentleman is referring to information concerning satellite systems submitted to the International Telecommunication Union by Her Majesty's Government. Copies of the advance publication on such systems published by the ITU will be placed in the Library.

Ulster Defence Regiment

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the Ulster Defence Regiment, and its Reserve, in 1986 have been found to be members of illegal paramilitary organisations or, separately, legal paramilitary organisations such as the Ulster Defence Association or the Third Force.

Mr. Stanley [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 493]: There is no Ulster Defence Regiment Reserve. Any soldier found by the courts to be a member of an organisation proscribed under the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978 would automatically be discharged from the regiment. According to available records, in 1986 no serving member of the Ulster Defence Regiment was so convicted. There is no central record maintained of membership of legal organisations.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Lebanon

14. Mr. Winnick asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the advice given to British citizens still in Lebanon.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: Those in west Beirut have repeatedly been urged to leave. Our advice to those British citizens resident in all areas of Lebanon is that they should observe a high level of caution and consider carefully whether they have compelling reasons to remain. We are alert to the need to keep our advice up to date.

Mr. Lawrence asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which British airlines use Beirut airport; what advice he is giving to British airlines about the situation in the Lebanon; what information he has as to which European airlines use Beirut airport; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I have been asked to reply.

No British airlines currently use Beirut international airport. My Department has not received any recent requests for advice from British airlines wishing to operate to the Lebanon. If any approach was received, any advice would have regard for the situation prevailing at the time. I understand that no other European airline currently operates scheduled international services into Beirut international airport.

South Africa

15. Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on actions taken to implement the decision of the Commonwealth review meeting in August and the European Economic Community Foreign Ministers' meeting in September relating to South Africa.

Mrs. Chalker: We have fully implemented the measures which were undertaken at the Commonwealth Heads of Government review meeting in London in August and those which were agreed by the Twelve in Brussels on 16 September.

19. Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps have been taken by Her Majesty's Government to secure the right of the British media to report on the situation in South Africa in light of the impediments imposed by censorship.

26. Mr. Bidwell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations Her Majesty's Government have made to the Government of South Africa about the recently imposed controls over the media in that country.

Mrs. Chalker: Her Majesty's ambassador at Pretoria made representations to the South African Government on 19 December on behalf of the Twelve to express our strong concern at the draconian new restrictions on the media in South Africa.

20. Mr. Eastham asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, in the light of the decision by Barclay's Bank to pull out of South Africa, Her Majesty's Government will now revise their policy on South Africa with a view to encouraging other banks and companies to disinvest from South Africa.

Mrs. Chalker: No. We will not seek to encourage British companies to disinvest from South Africa. Such decisions must be entirely a commercial matter for the companies concerned.

25. Dr. Bray asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in consultation with our European Economic Community partners on securing a ban on coal imports from South Africa.

Mrs. Chalker: In line with the statement by Ministers in European Political Co-operation on 15 September 1986 it rests with the presidency of the day to work for consensus on this issue.

34. Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made in the last six months by Her Majesty's Government to secure the release of Nelson Mandela and other political prisoners in South Africa and Namibia and to prevent the implementation of the death sentences imposed on Mojalefa Reginald Sefatsa, Reid Malebo Mokoena, Oupo Moses Diniso, Theresa Ramashamola, Duma Joshua Khumalo and Francis Don Mokhesi.

Mrs. Chalker: With the Commonwealth and our European partners we have long called for the unconditional release of Nelson Mandela and other political prisoners. We reiterated our call time and again during the period in question. The appeals of the "Sharpeville Six" have not yet been heard; it would therefore be inappropriate for us to make representations at this moment.

35. Mr. Sedgemore asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's policy toward the implementation of the 16 recommendations of the United Nations Security Council regarding the United Nations mandatory arms embargo on South Africa.

Mrs. Chalker: Security Council resolution 591 of 28 November 1986, which was adopted by consensus, took account of these recommendations.

37. Mr. Dykes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has yet received any official information from the Pretoria authorities concerning the appointment of a new ambassador in the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Chalker: On 5 February the South African Government announced the appointment of Mr. Rae Killen as ambassador to the Court of St. James in succession to Dr. Denis Worrall.

39. Mr. Michie asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations Her Majesty's Government have made on the recent South African raids into Angola.

56. Mr. Robert Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations Her Majesty's Government have made to the Government of South Africa about that country's continued incursions into Angola.

Mrs. Chalker: Our condemnation of cross-border raids is well known to the South African Government. In October 1986, we joined our partners in the Twelve in urging South Africa to exercise restraint and to respect the sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity of her neighbours. We continue to take opportunities to make known our concern.

41. Mr. Livsey asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next intends to meet representatives of the South African Government to discuss United Kingdom-South African relations.

Mrs. Chalker: My right hon. and learned Friend met the South African ambassador on 9 February.

65. Mr. Hunter asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent contact he has with black South African representatives of organisations other than the African National Congress; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: We maintain contact with a wide cross-section of black South African opinion. For example, during his presidency mission to South Africa last July my right hon. and learned Friend met the Chief Ministers of KaNgwane and KwaZulu as well as leading black businessmen.

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about Anglo-South African relations.

Mrs. Chalker: As I told my hon. Friend on 21 January, relations with South Africa remain overshadowed by the issue of apartheid. We shall continue to work for the early and peaceful replacement of apartheid by a non-racial, representative system of government in South Africa.

Human Rights

16. Mr. Gerald Howarth asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has received on the subject of human rights in eastern Europe.

Mr. Renton: We receive numerous representations on this subject both from organisations and from individuals. Recent examples have concerned religious freedom in Rumania, the treatment of ethnic minorities in Bulgaria, imprisonment of members of the Jazz Section in Czechoslovakia and freedom of travel in Poland.

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his reply of 4 February, Official Report, column 666, what pressure his Department will bring to bear on those dependent territories which do not respond positively to his invitation to adopt the first protocol of the convention on human rights.

Mr. Eggar: The dependent territories are at present reviewing the situation with regard to the extension to them of the first protocol. Until this review is complete it would be premature to consider whether any further steps are necessary.

Dr. Worrall

17. Mr. Anderson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met Dr. Worrall, the former South African ambassador in London; and what was discussed.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: I last met Dr. Worrall on 9 February. The hon. Member will understand that in accordance with normal diplomatic practice our discussions were confidential.

Central America

21. Mr. Flannery asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next plans to visit Central America, including Nicaragua.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. and learned Friend visited Mexico in January and my right hon. and noble Friend the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has just visited Guatemala to attend the meeting of EC, Contadora and Central American Foreign Ministers on 9-10 February. My right hon. and learned Friend has no further plans to visit the area.

63. Mr. Litherland asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with Mr. Philip Habib, President Reagan's special envoy, on Central America.

Mr. Eggar: During Mr. Habib's visit last month, neither my right hon. and learned Friend nor my right hon. and noble Friend the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs were available and he was therefore received by a senior official. The discussions were, of course, confidential.

Campuchea

22. Mr. Neil Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on human rights in Campuchea.

Mr. Renton: We are seriously concerned by reports that abuses of human rights are occurring in Cambodia under the Heng Samrin regime and the occupying Vietnamese forces. We have made our concern quite clear to the Vietnamese authorities on many occasions.

Czechoslovakia

23. Mr. Robert Banks asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's relations with Czechoslovakia.

Mr. Renton: Our relations with Czechoslovakia are showing increasing substance and breadth. The latest in a series of bilateral ministerial visits was my visit to Czechoslovakia from 1 to 4 February. I had lengthy discussions with senior representatives of the Czechoslovak Government and was also pleased to be able to meet Cardinal Tomasek and leading members of opposition groups.

Afghanistan

24. Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current situation in Afghanistan.

Mr. Eggar: Seven years after invading Afghanistan, more than 110,000 Soviet troops continue to occupy a once free and independent non-aligned country. The Soviet Union is now reconsidering its policy. We hope that it will withdraw its troops completely and promptly, in accordance with the principles laid down in successive United Nations resolutions.

Chile

27. Mr. Lofthouse asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what advice his Department offers to Chilean exiles resident in the United Kingdom who consider returning to Chile.

Mr. Eggar: We have not received any such requests in recent years.

Soviet Union

28. Mr. Beith asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent meetings have been held between Foreign Office Ministers and their Soviet counterparts.

Mr. Renton: I held discussions in Moscow on 14 and 15 January with the Soviet Foreign Minister, Mr. Shevardnadze, and with First Deputy Foreign Minister Kovalev.

29. Mr. Richard Shepherd asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on recent developments in the granting of exit visas to dissidents in the Soviet Union.

Mr. Renton: There has been welcome evidence of movement in the reports that exit visas are to be granted to the imprisoned dissidents, Anatoly Koryagin and Sergei Khodorovich and that others are to be released, but many continue to suffer imprisonment and persecution for their beliefs and to be denied exit visas. We shall keep up the pressure upon the Soviet authorities for improvement across the board in their human rights performance.

31. Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's relations with the Soviet Union.

Mr. Renton: We are conducting an active dialogue with the Soviet authorities with the aim of securing progress in arms control and on regional questions, including Afghanistan; greater respect for human rights; an increase in trade; and more contacts between people at all levels. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister will pursue these questions when she visits Moscow.

33. Mr. James Lamond asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if any Ministers from his Department will accompany the Prime Minister during her forthcoming visit to the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: Yes. My right hon. and learned Friend will accompany my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister.

36. Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what initiatives he is taking in the context of relations with the Soviet Union.

Mr. Renton: We are playing a leading part in working for progress in arms control and for improvement in the Soviet human rights record. Over the last year we have developed co-operation in energy and agriculture. We look for an increase in bilateral trade.

38. Mr. Lawrence asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assurances were received from the Soviet Foreign Minister during the recent discussions by the Minister of State the hon. Member for Mid-Sussex (Mr. Renton) on the subject of compliance by the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics with its international obligations under the Helsinki agreements.

43. Mr. Sumberg asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assurances he has received from the Soviet Foreign Minister on the subject of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republic's compliance with its commitments under the Helsinki agreements, in particular in relation to the freedom of Soviet Jews to leave the country.

Mr. Renton: During my recent visit to the Soviet Union I was told that measures were in hand which would lead to a substantial increase in the number of Soviet citizens allowed to leave their country. We shall watch carefully to see whether such an increase takes place.

48. Lord James Douglas-Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on recent developments in human rights in the Soviet Union.

Mr. Renton: We welcome the recent releases of dissidents. Any movement in the direction of a more humane and tolerant society is welcome. But many more are still persecuted or imprisoned for their beliefs. We shall continue to press for further improvements.

Hong Kong

30. Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next intends to visit Hong Kong.

Mr. Renton: My right hon. and learned Friend has no present plans to visit Hong Kong.

Namibia

32. Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will raise in the European Economic Community Council of Ministers the extension of existing sanctions measures applying to Namibia.

Mrs. Chalker: We do not believe that applying sanctions to Namibia would advance the common objective of Namibian independence.

Persian Gulf

40. Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on current United Kingdom interests in the Persian Gulf.

Mr. Renton: We enjoy long-standing relations with the states of the Persian Gulf. The region is of particular strategic and political importance and also represents a significant market for British goods and services.

Arms Control Talks

42. Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress at the various security confidence-building and disarmament conferences under way.

61. Mr. Merchant asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the East-West arms control negotiations in Geneva.

Mr. Renton: The current round of the Geneva nuclear and space talks began on 15 January and has several weeks still to run. It would not be appropriate to comment on the progress of the talks at present. The negotiations for a comprehensive ban on chemical weapons resumed on 3 February.

In December last year, we and our NATO allies proposed distinct negotiations on conventional arms control, one on confidence building, the other on conventional stability in Europe.

44. Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make a statement on the latest progress of the proposed chemical weapons compromise suggested by Her Majesty's Government at the conference on disarmament in Geneva.

Mr. Renton: As I told the hon. Member on 3 December 1986, the reaction of other delegations to the conference on disarmament has been generally encouraging. We have particularly welcomed a number of public expressions of support. The United Kingdom proposals continue to be the subject of detailed discussion among delegations in Geneva.

Mr. Strang: asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make a statement on the recent approach from the Warsaw Treaty Organisation to discuss reductions in conventional forces; and whether Her Majesty's Government have forwarded any new proposals on NATO-Warsaw Treaty Organisation conventional disarmament.

Mr. Renton: At the meeting of NATO Foreign Ministers in Brussels last December my right hon. and learned Friend and my NATO colleagues put forward proposals calling for the opening of East/West negotiations to enhance conventional stability in the whole of Europe. Contacts between representatives on NATO and Warsaw pact countries on a mandate for these negotiations began on 17 February in Vienna.

Iran (Arms Sales)

45. Mr. George Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about recent British arms sales to Iran.

Mr. Renton: All applications for the export of defence-related equipment to Iran or Iraq are rigorously scrutinised against guidelines which my right hon. and learned Friend anounced to the House on 29 October 1985 in his written reply to the right hon. Member for Tweedale, Ettrick and Lauderdale (Mr. Steel). All exports allowed, including any recent sales, are consistent with those guidelines.

Israel

46. Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make a statement on his recent meeting in London with Mr. Shimon Peres, Foreign Minister of Israel.

Mr. Renton: My right hon. and learned Friend had a valuable exchange of views on Arab/Israel and other regional issues.

Diplomatic Service

47. Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he is satisfied that applicants for the administrative grades of the Diplomatic Service have an equal chance of success regardless of their university or polytechnic of study.

Mr. Eggar: Yes.

Middle East

49. Mr. Walters asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on recent progress towards a middle east peace settlement.

Mr. Renton: The lack of progress towards a solution of the Arab/Israel dispute is disappointing but there is a growing consensus that a properly managed and prepared international conference could help. We are ready to support realistic initiatives by the parties to narrow the gap on outstanding issues.

62. Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking, and what support the United Kingdom will provide, to assist the pursuit of the peace process both in regard to the Egyptian-Israeli dispute and in the middle east generally.

Mr. Renton: Together with our European partners, we are ready to support in any way we can realistic initiatives by the parties to seek negotiated solutions to conflicts in the middle east. We welcome the agreement of Egypt and Israel in September 1986 to arbitration of the dispute over Taba.

Falkland Islands

50. Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the capital cost of implementing the Falkland Islands conservation zone.

Mr. Eggar: The Falkland Islands Government have budgeted £4 million to cover the costs of implementing the Falkland Islands interim conservation and management zone (FICZ) in 1987. The bulk of the costs come from turn-key contracts for two patrol vessels and a surveillance aircraft, within which some capital costs are included. An accurate figure for the capital costs will not be available until the end of the year.

Guatemala (Ministerial Conference)

51. Mr. Patchett asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the meeting of the European Economic Community Foreign Ministers and Central American Foreign Ministers in Guatemala city.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the recent visit by the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office to Guatemala for the meeting of the Foreign Ministers from the European Community, central America and the Contadora group.

Mr. Eggar: The British delegation led by my right hon. and noble Friend the Minister of State took an active role in the meeting in Guatemala on 9-10 February of the Foreign Ministers of the European Community, central America and the Contadora group. My right hon. and noble Friend reiterated our support for efforts to achieve a peaceful settlement in central American on the basis of the Contadora principles, and for the strengthening of democracy in all the countries of the region.

Southern Africa

52. Mr. Buchan asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps Her Majesty's Government are taking to consult the front-line states of Africa both jointly and severally with a view to responding to their appeals for assistance to withstand South African aggression and destabilisation.

Mrs. Chalker: My hon. Friend the Minister for Overseas Development visited Botswana, Zimbabwe and Mozambique from 3 to 11 February to attend the annual meeting of the Southern African Development Co-ordination Conference (SADCC) in Gaborone, 5-6 February, and for bilateral consultations. During his visits my hon. Friend announced a further £10 million of British Aid for SADCC projects, to help reduce member states' dependence on South Africa; £10 million additional aid for Zimbabwe; and £6·5 million for Mozambique.

United Nations

53. Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy on the financial crisis facing the specialist and technical agencies of the United Nations.

Mr. Eggar: We remain committed to supporting effective United Nations agencies. We meet our financial obligations in full and expect others to do the same. We are working for solutions which will deal in the short term with shortfalls in income and will restore a stable level of funding for the agencies.

European Community (Policies)

Mr. Knox asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the development of co-ordinated community policies in the European Community.

Mrs. Chalker: A record of agreements reached in the European Community in the period July to December 1986 under the United Kingdom presidency has been deposited in the Library of the House. The Government believe that the entry into force of the Single European Act will further the development of co-ordinated policies of benefit to Britain and the European Community as a whole.

Turkey

55. Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met the Turkish Foreign Minister; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. and learned Friend last met the Turkish Foreign Minister at the NATO ministerial meeting in Brussels on 12 December 1986. They discussed a wide range of issues of mutual interest including bilateral relations, human rights and relations between Turkey and the European Community.

Cyprus

57. Mr. Norman Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made towards a settlement in Cyprus following his most recent talks with both Greece and Turkey.

Mr. Eggar: Although my right hon. and learned Friend sees both his Greek and Turkish colleagues frequently in the margins of various international meetings, he has not held discussions with either of them about Cyprus for some time. Meanwhile, the United Nations Secretary General is continuing his efforts to find a settlement in Cyprus. The United Nations under-secretary general for political affairs visited Cyprus last November, and again at the beginning of this month, to try to find a way forward. We lose no opportunity to urge both sides to show the flexibility and good will necessary to resolve the dispute.

British Missions

58. Mr. Burt asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has any plans to review the level of commercial representation in British missions abroad.

Mrs. Chalker: Commercial staffing at each post is regularly reviewed by FCO inspectors. In addition, commercial staffing world wide is reviewed annually by FCO's top management and in a joint FCO-DTI market assessment exercise aimed at matching resources with demand from exporters.

Visas

59. Mr. Lawler asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what percentage of temporary visa applications are being dealt with on the same day that they are lodged at the United Kingdom's diplomatic posts in the Indian subcontinent.

Mr. Eggar: In the last month for which complete statistics are available—December 1986—the percentage of short-term visa applications received and determined on the same day was over 97 per cent.

60. Mr. Spencer asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the most recent position in the working of the visa system in the Indian subcontinent.

Mr. Eggar: The visa regime continues to operate smoothly. All personal applicants for short-term visas are being seen on the day they apply and in December 1986 more than 97 per cent. of all applications were being determined on the day of application.

In the small number of cases that require more than a very brief interview, the waiting time is four days in New Delhi and Bombay and three days in Madras. Elsewhere in the subcontinent there are no queues and interviews take place on the day of application.

Test Ban Treaty

64. Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what initiatives the Government have proposed with a view to making progress towards a comprehensive test ban treaty; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: As the hon. Member will be aware from previous parliamentary answers, we have:

(a) tabled a paper in July 1985 on seismic monitoring for a comprehensive test ban;

(b) played a leading role in the work of the ad hoc group of scientific experts at the conference on disarmament (CD); and

(c) together with other Western countries, proposed a mandate for an ad hoc committee on nuclear testing issues at the Geneva CD.

We have also discussed nuclear testing issues with the Soviet Union to explain the difficulties we have with proposals for the immediate resumption of negotiations. We have urged the Soviet Union to agree to the Western mandate at the CD and to pursue the approach to nuclear testing issues agreed at Reykjavik.

UNITA (Arms Supplies)

67. Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will raise with his European Economic Community counterparts the supply by EEC countries of arms to UNITA.

Mrs. Chalker: Since we are not aware that any EC country is supplying arms to UNITA, we do not consider that it would be appropriate to raise the matter with our partners. Our view, that Western interests in Southern Africa would be best served by the peaceful negotiation of a settlement leading to a withdrawal of all foreign troops from the region and the full independence of Namibia, is well known.

Poland

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on current relations with Poland.

Mr. Renton: Recent contacts with Poland have included a meeting between my right hon. and learned Friend and the Polish Foreign Minister at the United Nations General Assembly in September, and my own visit to Warsaw from 5 to 8 February. We intend to continue an active dialogue in which human rights and the need for national reconciliation in Poland will play a major part.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the contracts, with the subject of the assignment, awarded to management consultancy or accounting firms by his Department in 1986, with the name of the consultants concerned.

Mr. Eggar: Details of contracts awarded by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in 1986 to management consultancy or accounting firms are as follows:

Firm and Subject of assignment

Coopers and Lybrand
Audit of FCO travel centre.

Peat, Marwick, Mitchell
Audit of FCO freight contract.

Price Waterhouse
Appraisal of computerisation of FCO overseas estate management.

Touche Ross
Study of FCO computer audit requirement.

Boarding School Provision

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the total number of children of personnel serving in diplomatic and consular posts overseas currently attending boarding schools in the United Kingdom where the fees are met wholly or partly by his Department; how many of the pupils are in (a) the maintained and (b) the independent sector; and what is the current cost per annum to his Department.

Mr. Eggar: In January 1987, 760 children of Foreign and Commonwealth Office staff (including the ODA and the communications departments) serving overseas were attending boarding schools in the United Kingdom. Out of these, one child attends a state maintained school. The estimated cost for the 1986-87 financial year is £3,208,945.

Siberian Pipeline

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his policy towards the maintenance of each point made to the United States Government in his notes of 1982 and 1983 regarding the Siberian pipeline; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place copies of my letter in the Library.

Foreign Affairs Council

Mr. Hanley asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Foreign Affairs Council held on 16 February.

Mrs. Chalker: My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary and I attended the Foreign Affairs Council in Brussels on 16 February.

The Council discussed the Commission proposals for new financial protocols for some of the Community's Mediterranean preferential partners. Discussion will continue at the March Council.

The Council discussed the Commission proposals for a draft mandate for an EC/Hungary trade and economic co-operation agreement and noted the Commission's wish for an early adoption of its mandate.

The Council discussed a continuation of the arrangements, agreed after the Chernobyl nuclear accident, limiting permissible contamination in food imported into the Community. Meeting in Political Co-operation, Foreign Ministers issued a statement on Palestinian camps in the Lebanon. A copy of the statement has been placed in the Library of the House.

Belize

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the present British military role in Belize.

Mr. Stanley: I have been asked to reply.

The role of the British garrison in Belize is to assist in the external defence of the country and in the training of the Belize defence force. In addition to the garrison, there are 15 loan service personnel serving with the Belize defence force to help with its training and development.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Maternity Payments

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in the London borough of Redbridge received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in the London borough of Redbridge are expected to receive statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested. The Wigan constituency is covered by the Department's offices at Wigan although its boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The number of claims received for maternity grant in the Wigan local office during the calendar year 1986 was 2,633. It is not possible to predict how many women in Wigan will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mr. Stott asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in the Wigan travel-to-work area received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available; and how many such women are expected to receive statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 1,900 claims to maternity allowance were made at Wigan, the Department's office which covers the Wigan constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous. It is not possible to predict how many women in Wigan and the surrounding area will qualify for statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance from April 1987. However, it is estimated that in total some 230,000 women will qualify for statutory maternity pay and 84,000 for maternity allowance in 1987-88.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women claimed maternity grant in Portsmouth in the last year; and what estimates have been made as to the likely number of claimants for maternity payments for the year after the introduction of payments from the social fund.

Mr. Major: The number of claims for maternity grant made at the Department's local office at Portsmouth during the 1986 calendar year was 2,665. It is not possible to predict how many women in Portsmouth will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Board and Lodging Allowances

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how much his Department is paying to persons living in (a) Burnley and (b) Pendle for board and lodging allowances;

(2) how many people living in (a) Burnley and (b) Pendle are (i) single persons under 26 years, (ii) single persons over 26 years, (iii) married couples without children and (iv) married couples with children, and are receiving board and lodging payments.

Mr. Major: I regret that the information requested is not collected by individual local offices and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Family Income Supplement

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people in Scotland are currently in receipt of family income supplement; and what is his estimate of the numbers dependent on incomes between 100 and 140 per cent, of supplementary benefit level in Scotland.

Mr. Major: The information is provided in the table.

	Number
Number of recipients of Family Income Supplement in Scotland at May 1986 (lastest available date).	[1 3]24,000
People in assessment units not in receipt of supplementary benefit or housing benefit supplement and with relative net resources between 100 and 140 per cent. of the supplementary benefit scale-rates	[2 3]78,000

[1] Estimated from a 10 per cent. sample of family income supplement recipients.

[2] Based on assumptions contained in "Low Income Families—1983" copies of which are in the Library.

[3] These two figures should not be added together.

All estimates of people calculated in the low income figures are subject to sampling error. Any Scottish estimates of people who are not receiving supplementary benefit are particularly prone to this statistical problem. This is because of the small number of sample cases available in the family expenditure survey.

The Scottish samples have been translated into population estimates using factors based on data for Great Britain as a whole. Since the family expenditure survey response rate in Scotland may differ from that of Great Britain as a whole, and since the extent of the difference may vary from one year to another, the Scottish estimates are more prone to grossing error than data for Great Britain.

Taken together, these two sources of statistical error make both trends and levels in the Scottish estimates peculiarly difficult to interpret. These statistical problems will be considered as part of the low income technical review.

Day Nurseries

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has as to which local authorities have reduced the number of places in day nurseries since 1979; and what has been the percentage reduction in each case.

Mrs. Currie: Thirty two local authorities in England reduced their number of day nursery places between 1981 and 1985 and the following table shows the percentage reduction in each case.

Local authority	Percentage change 1981-85[1]
Cleveland	−7·4
Durham	−16·7
North Tyneside	[2] −1·1
South Tyneside	−43·5
Sheffield	−5·4
Wakefield	[2] −71·4
Cheshire	−4·7
Bolton	−12·6
Knowsley	−16·7
Wirral	−4·5
Coventry	−23·1
Berkshire	[2] −62·7
Cambridgeshire	−2·8
Hertfordshire	−53·4
Suffolk	−21·4
Hammersmith	−1·9
Wandsworth	−6·6
Westminster	−8·0
Barking	−10·3
Ealing	−2·8
Enfield	−6·9
Havering	−10·5
Merton	−14·4
Newham	−1·2
Richmond upon Thames	−4·6
Waltham Forest	−1·8
Dorset	[2] −23·8
Hampshire	−7·1
Kent	[2] −53·1
East Sussex	−40·9
Devon	[2] −75·7
Gloucestershire	[2] −57·3

[1] For some authorities the percentage change is based on estimated figures for 1981 or 1985.

[2] In these authorities there were less than 100 day nursery places provided by the local authority in 1985 and so the percentage changes are based on relatively small numbers.

The information relating to Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland is a matter for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales, Northern Ireland, and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

AIDS

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will now give general practitioners the right to prescribe condoms on National Health Service prescriptions as part of the campaign against the spread of AIDS; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to him on 10 February, at column 202.

Hospital Charges

Mr. Anderson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what sums were collected by each of the English area health authorities from non-United Kingdom residents for hospital charges in 1985 and 1986.

Mr. Newton: The table shows the income under section 121 of the National Health Service Act 1977 recorded in the annual accounts of health authorities for 1984-85 and 1985-86. This income is shown net of any sums written off in the relevant year (including those due from earlier years); in a few cases the result is a negative figure (figures shown in brackets in table). The table does not include income received under sections 65 and 66 of the Act from overseas residents treated as private patients.

Spectacles (Voucher System)

Mr. Butterfill asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what are the arrangements for spectacle repairs for children in the spectacles voucher system;

(2) what are the arrangements for spectacle repairs for adults in the spectacles voucher system.

Mr. Newton: Financial assistance is available towards all repairs of children's spectacles. The amount of assistance varies according to the nature of the repair up to a maximum of the value of a full voucher in cases where it is necessary to replace the spectacles completely. For repairs to damaged spectacles adults are expected to take advantage of guarantee arrangements which are increasingly available from optical suppliers. However, where the spectacles have been rendered unserviceable by fair wear and tear vouchers are available to adults in the eligible groups towards the cost of their replacement.

Mr. Butterfill asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he is satisfied with arrangements in the spectacles voucher system for repair to glasses for children or adults who are disabled or are otherwise at risk of frequently breaking their glasses.

Mr. Newton: Comprehensive arrangements exist for the repair of childrens' glasses. The Department has received representations about the arrangements for adults who are disabled and who are prone to break their glasses frequently. We are reviewing these arrangements.

Mr. Butterfill asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether, in the case of complex lens users receiving only the £2 (single vision) or £14 (bifocal) voucher, opticians are expected to offer glasses at voucher prices so that customers have the opportunity to buy basic models of single vision complex glasses at £31 or bifocals at £52; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: Spectacles are now supplied entirely through the private market and prices are determined by the suppliers. I understand that current full voucher values for complex prescriptions can enable those on low incomes to obtain a basic pair of spectacles in the private market to meet their clinical needs.

Abortions

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how far the targets cited by the Family Planning Association in 1976 have been achieved in relation to the reduction by half of that year's figures for unwanted pregnancies and abortions.

Mr. Newton: The number of legal abortions to residents of England and Wales rose from 101,912 in 1976 to 147,030 in 1985, an increase of 44 per cent. Over the same period the number of legal abortions per thousand of the resident female population aged 15 to 44 rose from 10·53 to 13·66, an increase of almost 30 per cent.

Not all abortions necessarily follow an unwanted pregnancy.

The number of unwanted pregnancies is not known.

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Social Services to what factors his Department attributes the fall in the number of abortions among those under 16 years in the first half of 1985; and the subsequent rise in those numbers.

Mr. Newton: Since my predecessor's reply to my hon. Friend on 25 June 1986 at column 210, the relevant figures for the first three quarters of 1986 and the population estimates for 1985 have become available. The table has been updated as follows:

Legal abortions to females aged under 16
Number and rates per thousand population. Residents

Quarter	1984 Number	1984 Rate per thousand[1]	1985 Number	1985 Rate per thousand[1]	1986 Number	1986 Rate per thousand[1]
March	1,067	1·43	985	1·33	1,028	1·39
June	973	1·30	925	1·25	980	1·33
September	1,017	1·36	960	1·30	900	1·22
December	1,048	1·41	1,030	1·39	—	—
Total[2]	4,158	5·58	4,002	5·41	—	—

[1] The rates (per thousand population) for the under 16 age group are based on the population of females aged 14 and 15. The denominator for 1984 is the mid-1984 estimated resident population figure. That for 1985 and 1986 is the mid-1985 estimated resident population.
[2] Includes late notifications, 53 in 1984 and 102 in 1985, not assigned to any quarter.

The slight fall in the rate of abortions in 1985 compared with 1984 and the slight rise in the first two quarters of 1986 compared with the same period in 1985 are insufficient to indicate a trend.

Cervical Cancer

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will list the number of registrations from 1982 to the present day of malignant neoplasms and carcinoma-in-situ of cervix uteri showing those under 35 years as percentages of total of all ages;

(2) what are the latest figures available to him on the incidence of cancer of the cervix among women under 35 years of age; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: The table gives the latest available information from the registration of newly diagnosed cases of malignant neoplasm of cervix uteri and of carcinoma in situ of cervix uteri for women of all ages and aged under 35 years for England and Wales.

Registrations of newly diagnosed cases of malignant neoplasm of cervix uteri (ICD[1] (9) 180) and carcinoma in situ of cervix uteri (ICD[1] (9) 233.1), numbers all ages and numbers and percentage aged under 35 years. England and Wales 1982, 1983

Year	Malignant neoplasm of cervix uteri: All ages	Under 35	Per cent.	Carcinoma in situ of cervix uteri: All ages	Under 35	Per cent.
1982	3,909	546	14·0	5,427	3,066	56·5
1983	3,875	621	16·0	5,409	2,965	54·8

[1] International Classification of Diseases 9th revision.

The most comprehensive information available to OPCS on the incidence of cancer comes from the registration of newly diagnosed cases of cancer. Complete data for 1984 have not yet been provided to OPCS by the regional cancer registries.

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Social Services to what factors he attributes the increase in the combined registrations for malignant neoplasm of cervix uteri and carcinoma-in-situ of cervix uteri among women under 35 years of age.

Mrs. Currie: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Family Planning Association and Brook Advisory Centre

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received regarding the accountability of the Family Planning Association and the Brook Advisory Centre for the public money allocated to them.

Mr. Newton: We have received no such representations in the last 12 months.

Nurses (South Manchester)

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has received the letter from the hon. Member for Stretford dated 6 February containing information about nurse staffing levels in South Manchester health authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: As the allocation of staffing resources at local level is a matter for individual health authorities, I have written to the chairman of South Manchester health authority asking him to reply to the hon. Member at the same time as reporting to me.

North Western RHA (Computers)

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the audit report concerning the North Western regional health authority procurement and development of the integrated personnel system and the patient administration computers.

Mrs. Currie: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Blackburn (Mr. Straw) on 16 February.

Council for the Advancement of Communication with Deaf People

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he is able to announce his decision in respect of the application for funding by the Council for the Advancement of Communication with Deaf People.

Mr. Major: This application is receiving full consideration following a recent meeting between officials and the chairman and director of the council. We shall announce our decision as soon as possible.

Mass Screening (Stonehouse)

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to receive the results of the mass screening programme undertaken at Stonehouse, Gloucestershire.

Mrs. Currie: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Neasden Hospital (Staff Accommodation)

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many (a) nurses and (b) other National Health Service staff were transferred against their wishes from their residences in Neasden hospital on 2 December 1986; if any reimbursement is being made to offset any additional expenses now falling upon residents; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: This information is not held centrally. The hon. Member may like to consult the Brent health authority.

Dentists (Hypodermic Needles)

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will take immediate action to prohibit the practice of dentists re-using needles for injecting local anaesthetics.

Mrs. Currie: Dentists in the community and hospital dental services are provided with a fresh needle for each patient. In the general dental service general dental practitioners' terms and conditions of service already require the use of suitable instruments. Recent guidance issued on control of cross-infection in dentistry has stressed that it is essential to use a fresh disposable needle for each patient. I would expect any complaint that a dentist has failed to observe that guidance would be subject to an investigation by the service committee of the relevant family practitioner committee.

Nuclear Installations (Cancer)

Mr. Michael Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he can yet give a firm date for the publication by the Office of Population, Censuses and Surveys of the statistical study of cancer incidence and mortality in the vicinity of nuclear installations in England and Wales.

Mr. Newton: I regret that I cannot yet be absolutely definite, but now expect it to be around mid-March. However, in view of the widespread interest that has been expressed in the context of the forthcoming debate on Sizewell, I am taking exceptional steps to make available a limited number of photocopies of the first rough proof from the printers. I hope to place 20 copies in the Library later today, as soon as the copying has been completed.

I must stress that this proof has only just been received by OPCS. It is subject to printers' errors and a final further cross-check by the authors between the derived tables in the text and the free-standing computer tables at the back of the report.

I remind my hon. Friend that, as I said in answer to the hon. Member for Oldham, West (Mr. Meacher) on 16 February, the purpose of the investigation was to assemble and publish data as a basis for identifying any prima facie excesses of cancer which might merit further investigation; the study does not itself test causal connections.

The study was carried out on an independent basis by five scientists, using data available to OPCS. It was supported by the Medical Research Council and the Imperial Cancer Research Fund cancer epidemiology and clinical trials unit. The authors are Mrs. Paula Cook-Mozaffari, Mr. T. Vincent, Mr. D. Forman, Mr. F. Ashwood, and Dr. M. Alderson.

Interpretation of the figures and decisions on any further work will have to be considered when the full report is published, and in the light of advice from the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment.

Benefits

Mr. Greg Knight asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will report the outcome of his investigation into the practice of referring back decisions to medical boards in claims for industrial disablement benefit.

Mr. Lyell: In seeking consistent adjudication it was for many years the practice for the Department's medical staff to refer claims back to the medical board if it was thought that the board's decision, or the record of it, needed clarification or reconsideration. Following a commissioner's decision which criticised this practice, instructions were issued in 1985 to prevent reference back to medical boards by Departmental staff outside the terms of the legal provisions.

The Department has been looking into the extent of this practice as regards industrial disablement benefit and the possibility that some claimants may have been disadvantaged by it. A sample comprising about 4,000 decisions by medical boards has been examined. About 9 per cent. of these were found to have been referred back to the board by the Department's medical staff for reconsideration. In less than 0·3 per cent. of the cases was the outcome potentially adverse to the claimant. The changes made were fully consistent with other unamended decisions made in similar circumstances and amounted in most cases to no more than minor adjustments, for example, to the date set for the next review of a provisional award.

In the light of this information, I have considered whether a wider-ranging search for such cases should be undertaken. To seek out all such instances would involve the scrutiny of some 17·5 million decisions made since the industrial injuries scheme was set up in 1948. The high cost involved and the delays this could cause to other claimants would be out of all proportion to the amounts of benefit at stake. I have therefore decided to take no further action to identify amended industrial disablement decisions.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Vehicle Excise Duty

Mr. Proctor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if he will publish a table showing for each district council area in Northern Ireland the number of summonses issued for not displaying a road fund licence on a motor vehicle, together with the number of people fined as a result, those who were given a custodial sentence for non-payment of fines and the number and amounts of fines outstanding;

(2) how many summonses were issued in the west Belfast area in the years 1973 to 1986 for not displaying a road fund licence on a motor vehicle; how many people were subsequently fined or had a custodial sentence imposed for non-payment of fines; and how many fines remain unpaid.

Mr. Scott: The information is not readily available and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the contracts, with the subject of the assignment, awarded to management consultancy or accounting firms by his Department in 1986, with the name of the consultants concerned.

Gaelic Athletic Association

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will request the chairman of the Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights to expedite the commission's consideration of allegations made in 1984 of discrimination practised in Northern Ireland by the Gaelic Athletic Association through clubs benefiting from public funds and to issue an interim report thereon pending the next annual report; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tom King: The Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights is an independent body and it is for the commission to decide when to publish its views on any matter.

The commission's twelfth annual report (HC 151), published on 10 February 1987, gives a target date of September 1987 for the completion of the commission's review of the adequacy and effectiveness of legislation to prevent discrimination on grounds of religious or political belief. I understand that the commission intends to publish a separate report on the outcome of this review.

Remands

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many prisoners charged with scheduled offences in the latest calendar year for which figures are available were remanded in custody prior to trial for periods between (a) up to three months, (b) three to six months, (c) six to nine months, (d) nine to 12 months, (e) 12 to 18 months and (f) over 18 months for scheduled and non-scheduled offences, respectively.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 462]: The length of time spent on custodial remand for persons tried during 1986 and who were in custody at the time of their trial and charged with scheduled and non-scheduled offences respectively was as follows:

Time in custody	Scheduled offences	Non-scheduled offences
Less than 3 months	193	343
3 months up to 6 months	85	50
6 months up to 9 months	51	17
9 months up to 12 months	35	6
12 months up to 18 months	27	2
Over 18 months	61	0
TOTAL	452	418

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of prisoners on custodial remand for scheduled and non-scheduled offences, respectively, were (a) given a non-custodial sentence, (b) given a custodial sentence, and (c) found not guilty or not preceeded against in 1986.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 462]: The information in relation to those tried in 1986 and who were in custody at the time of trial is as follows:

Disposal	Scheduled offences (per cent.)	Non-scheduled offences (per cent.)
(a) Non-custodial sentence	6·9	13·9
(b) Custodial sentence	73·0	55·2
(c) Found not guilty or not proceeded against	20·1	30·9

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give the average period between remand and trial for prisoners refused bail and charged with scheduled offences in Northern ireland in 1986.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 462]: For persons tried in 1986 and who were (a) in custody at the time of their trial; (b) never released on bail; and (c) were charged with scheduled offences, the average time spent on custodial remand was 37·5 weeks.

Evidence (Accomplices)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people have been convicted in the current year either on their own admission of guilt or following a plea of not guilty on the basis of evidence on behalf of the Crown given by alleged accomplices in cases concerning scheduled offences in Northern Ireland; how many suspects arrested on the basis of such evidence have been released as a result of the retraction of evidence given by accomplices; how many people are presently awaiting trial as a result of evidence obtained from alleged accomplices; and how many people have been found not guilty, or not guilty on appeal, on the basis of such evidence.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 463]: One person was convicted and two persons acquitted in cases concerning scheduled offences during 1986 following trials in which the evidence of a former accomplice was given on behalf of the Crown or on the basis of their statements of admission made during enquiries arising from the evidence of a former accomplice. A further 52 persons had their convictions overturned on appeal. There were no instances of an alleged accomplice withdrawing his or her evidence.

There have been no such trials so far in 1987 but two persons are still awaiting trial as a result of statements of admission made to the police.

Security

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the security statistics for the second half of 1986 are now available, together with details of persons charged with terrorist-type activities and convictions for scheduled offences for the year.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 465]: Yes. The statistics together with those since 1971 are as follows:

Statistics on security

Part I—Statistics of Terrorist Activity

Yearly totals for 1971-1986

Statistics for terrorist activity comprise the following:

(i) Number of shooting incidents.
(ii) Number of explosions.
(iii) Number of bombs and devices neutralised.
(iv) Weight of explosives in bombs and devices neutralised.
(v) Number of armed robberies and amount stolen.
(vi) Number of malicious fires.
(vii) Number of deaths and injuries of RUC/RUC"R", Army and civilians.

Part II—Statistics of Security Forces' Activity

Yearly totals for 1971-1986

Statistics for security forces' activity comprise the following:

(i) Number of houses searched.
(ii) Number of weapons, pounds of explosives and rounds of ammunition found.
(iii) Number of people charged with terrorist type offences (murder, attempted murder, explosives offences, firearms offences, armed robbery and other offences relating to the security situation, e.g. arson, membership of illegal organisation, etc.).

STATISTICS ON SECURITY (PART III)
July-December 1986
Notes on the tables:

1. The offence classifications are based on those used by the Crown and Peace Office in their annual return.
2. The tables relate to persons convicted at the Belfast Crown Court. This covers all scheduled offences tried on indictment.
3. Some jury trials are included in cases where the Attorney-General certified out of the scheduled mode of trial, ie non-terrorist serious offences.
4. Where a person had been convicted of more than one offence only the most serious or that which received the longest sentence is recorded in the statistics.

Firearms

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will detail the number of arms found in 1986 under the headings of (a) machine guns, (b) rifles, (c) shotguns, (d) pistols-revolvers and (e) others.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 464]: The information is as follows:

	Number
Machine guns	11
Rifles	57
Shotguns	45
Pistols-revolvers	61
Others	41

Note: "Others" refers to rocket launchers and mortar tubes.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a table in the Official Report to show how many firearms, by type, namely, handguns, rifles, shotguns or fully automatic weapons, were seized by the security forces in Northern Ireland in 1986; and, for each type, how many were legally held weapons stolen by terrorist organisations from (i) civilians, (ii) the Royal Ulster Constabulary, (iii) the Royal Ulster Constabulary Reserve, (iv) the Ulster Special Constabulary, (v) the Ulster Defence Regiment and (vi) the Regular Army.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 464]: Information is not readily available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, information about weapons which have been recovered or stolen is given in the following table.

1 January 1986 to 31 December 1986

	Pistols-revolvers	Rifles	Machine guns, sub-machine guns	Shotguns
Terrorist firearms recovered by the security forces in Northern Ireland	48	47	11	28
Legally held firearms stolen in Northern Ireland Stolen from:
Army	—	—	—	—
Ulster Defence Regiment	3	1	—	—
Royal Ulster Constabulary/RUC Reserve	4	—	—	—
Civilians	1	1	—	20

Note: Ulster Special Constabulary were disbanded in 1970.

Plastic Bullets

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many plastic bullets were fired in Northern Ireland in the second half of 1986; in what circumstances and in what location the bullets were fired; and how many persons were injured as a result.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 464]: During the last six months of 1986, 1,434 plastic baton rounds were fired in Northern Ireland. 37 people were allegedly injured as a result in the period.

I am writing to the hon. Member with the information he has requested about the circumstances and places in which the baton rounds were fired. A copy of my letter will be placed in the Library.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many attacks on Royal Ulster Constabulary personnel took place in each month of 1986, showing whether the attack was on (a) a foot patrol or (b) a mobile patrol, (c) the total attacked while on duty each month together with details of the type of attack, namely (i) physical assault, (ii) stone throwing, (iii) petrol bomb, (iv) explosion, (v) shooting and the number of persons made amenable.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 464]: Information is not available in the form requested and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, in 1986, there were over 1,400 incidents in which the police were attacked either on duty or at home. Of these, 55 incidents involved the use of explosives and 82 the use of firearms.

Prison Sentences (Review)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the procedure for the review of life sentences for prisoners convicted of offences in Great Britain but serving their sentences in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 17 February 1987]: Under section 26(4) of the Criminal Justice Act 1961, a prisoner permanently transferred from Great Britain to serve his sentence in Northern Ireland is treated for the purposes of detention, release, recall and otherwise as if the sentence had been imposed in Northern Ireland. It follows that the review procedures in these cases are the same as those which apply to persons convicted in Northern Ireland, but in cases of murder the trial judge in the jurisdiction in which the sentence was imposed must be consulted before the prisoner is released on licence.

THE ARTS

Items in lieu of Tax

Mr. Stern asked the Minister for the Arts whether Her Majesty's Government have accepted any items in lieu of tax in accordance with the arrangements announced on 6 February.

Mr. Luce: I am pleased to announce that an enhanced provision of £1,165,000 to Class XIII, Vote 10 to be charged to the Contingency Reserve has allowed the acceptance of a painting of the "Madonna and Child" by Giovanni Bellini, which would be allocated to the Ashmolean museum, Oxford, in accordance with the conditions attached to the offer. The amount of tax satisfied by this acceptance is £725,000. The offer of a second item (which would be similarly funded) is in the final stages of agreement. Further details will be made available when the acceptance has been completed.

TRANSPORT

Prometheus Project

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will make a statement on his Department's participation in the Prometheus project; and what progress has been made to date.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Prometheus project commenced on 1 October 1986. The first year is being devoted to the definition of a wide range of studies which complement each other. There is close consultation between Departments and the Science and Engineering Research Council. The Department's participation is principally in the traffic system and route choice aspects which are closely linked with the Department's AUTOGUIDE initiative, itself the subject of close consultation with industry and with potential operators and users. The Department is also coordinating the work of research teams in five countries in this field, and is participating in the work of a council which brings together the interests of the participating companies and their five Governments. Good progress is being made in planning future years' research. Consultants and universities are engaged in preliminary studies with Government financial support.

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information has been given to him by his departmental representative on the Prometheus project on the participation of industrial sub-contractors in the car manufacturing industry in (a) France, (b) West Germany and (c) the United Kingdom; and what steps he is taking to encourage United Kingdom subcontractors to join.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The participants in the Prometheus project are motor manufacturers based in the Eureka member countries. Industrial sub-contractors are not eligible to join in their own right. The participants, who expect assistance from their Governments, will require extensive support from supplying industries and public research institutions in their respective countries. There is no requirement that participants should disclose in detail their links with subcontractors but the motor companies in France (three) and the Federal Republic of Germany (four) are known to be in close touch with their electronics industries, as is the United Kingdom participant. This is Gaydon Technology, acting for Austin Rover, Jaguar and Rolls-Royce. The definition phase of Prometheus commenced in October 1986. Progress has not yet reached the stage at which sub-contracts have been placed. It is a primary objective of the Department and of the Department of Trade and Industry that British firms should seek the maximum technological and commercial benefit from contributing to this and other Eureka projects. The Government will give every encouragement to them to do so.

Bedford Bypass

Sir Trevor Skeet asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he proposes to announce the route for bypassing Bedford, and a timetable for the sequence of events.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I shall announce the preferred route shortly. The next stage would be to develop the scheme in sufficient detail to enable publication of orders. I shall carefully consider the possibility of publishing orders in separate sections.

A22 (Improvements)

Mr. Gow asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the improvements planned for the A22 London-Eastbourne road and the dates on which he expects each such improvement to be completed.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The A22 is not a road for which this Department is responsible. Improvements are a matter for the appropriate local highway authorities, the Surrey, West and East Sussex county councils, and the London borough of Croydon.

We plan to improve the junction of the A27 Lewes road with the A22 at Polegate by early next year.

Level Crossing (Eastbourne)

Mr. Gow asked the Secretary of State for Transport what studies he has made of the delays caused to road traffic at the Hampden Park level crossing north of Eastbourne; and what proposals he has for diminishing the delays.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Hampden Park level crossing is on a local road for which East Sussex county council is responsible.

"Highway Code"

Mr. Hind asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he proposes to publish a revised "Highway Code"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The revised "Highway Code" will be published on 4 March. This is the first major revision since 1978 and includes improved advice to road users on a number of important topics.

ENVIRONMENT

Planning Inquiries

Mr. Richard Shepherd asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what responses he has had to the draft circular on awards of costs at planning inquiries; and what advice he now proposes to issue.

Mr. Waldegrave: Comments were received from nearly 50 organisations and individuals. Copies of the responses from those who gave express permission for their comments to be made public have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses, and in the Department's library, and are available for inspection.

The circular is being published in final form today. It is the first major restatement of policy on the award of costs for over 20 years. The basic principle remains the same—that costs will be awarded not for the success or failure of an appeal, but only where unreasonable behaviour by one party at an inquiry has caused another party unnecessary expense.

The circular gives details of the sort of behaviour which may give rise to an award of costs. For example, costs may be awarded against a planning authority which fails without good reason to determine a planning application within the statutory period, or gives no good reason for refusing permission. On the other hand costs may be awarded against an appellant who (for example) persists with proposals for major development on green belt land when it is obvious that permission will not be granted.

I hope all those concerned with planning appeals will study the circular closely. It is further evidence of our determination to cut out unnecessary expense and delay in the planning process.

Urban Development Grant

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the proportion of private finance to urban development grants in urban development grant applications approved by his Department during the last 12 month period for which figures are available, broken down by region.

Mr. John Patten: 58 projects were approved for urban development grant during 1 February 1986 to 31 January 1987.

Region	Number of projects	Grant £ million	Private investment £ million
East Midlands	5	2·2	5·8
Greater London	7	5·2	24·4
Merseyside	3	3·1	18·2
North West	11	1·6	4·4
Northern	10	2·2	5·6
South West	1	0·1	0·6
West Midlands	13	6·4	32·4
Yorks & Humbs	8	1·6	3·6
Total	58	22·4	95

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the total number of urban development grant applications approved to date where the grant has been under £100,000; and what percentage of all applications approved this figure represents.

Mr. John Patten: 65 projects with urban development grant of less than £100,000 have been approved. This represents 28·5 per cent. of all approved projects.

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many schemes have been approved to date involving urban development grant on the commercial part, and housing association grant on a related residential part, of a project; and if he will list these schemes in the Official Report, indicating their location and the value of each grant in each case.

Mr. John Patten: None.

Trafalgar Square

Ms. Clare Short asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many applications have been made for the use of Trafalgar Square for meetings in the past 12 months; how many have been granted; and how many refused;

(2) if he will list the organisations which have been given permission to hold meetings in Trafalgar Square and those which have been refused over the past 12 months.

Mr. Waldegrave: An application from the Co-ordinating Committee for British Withdrawal from Ireland for a meeting on 2 February 1986 was refused. Permission was given for the following 48 events:

15 March 1987	Internation Fund for Animal Welfare	Given
11 April 1987	United Evangelistic Mobile Units	Given

Permission for large meetings is currently being refused on public safety grounds while Nelson's column is being cleaned.

Work on major refurbishment of the square is expected to begin this summer and to last for at least two years. During that time no meetings of any kind will be allowed at the square except for the traditional events before Christmas and on new year's eve.

Derelict Land Grant

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many derelict land grants have been repaid in respect of schemes in Lancashire in each of the last three years; and (i) in which boroughs the schemes were sited, (ii) how much grant was paid and (iii) what was the total value of the scheme.

Mr. John Patten: For 1984-85 this information could not be provided except at disproportionate cost. The information for 1985-86 and 1986-87 to date is as follows:

Year	Number of schemes on which repayments were made	Borough in which schemes cited	Total grant paid (Gross)[1]	Amounts of repayments[2]
1985-86	7	Blackburn	48,616	3,000
		Bolton	64,335	500
		Chorley	13,408	6,000
			15,400	4,000
		Fylde	43,799	43,799
		Ribble	[3]614,788	111,475

[1] The figures represent the total grant paid over the life of the scheme at a rate of 100 per cent. of eligible costs.

[2] Representing payment of after-value realised on disposal of reclaimed land and income generated in the course of reclamation.

[3] To date.

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many derelict land grants have been paid in respect of schemes in Birmingham in each of the past three years; how much grant was paid; and what was the value of the schemes.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to his reply, 11 February 1987, c. 238.]: In 1984-85 nine grants were paid totalling £206,064. Total value of these schemes was £2,216,812. In 1985-86 two grants were paid totalling £32,589. Total value of these schemes was also £32,589.

In 1986-87 16 grants have been paid, totalling £855,385. Total value of these schemes was £2,213,000.

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list current applications for derelict land grants in Birmingham and the west midlands.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to his reply, 11 February 1987, c. 238]: In 1986-87 there are 160 applications for derelict land grant being processed in the west midland region, four in Birmingham, 94 in the Black Country and 62 in the shire counties. Applications are submitted to the Department in confidence and it is not therefore possible to publish details.

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all projects funded by derelict land grants in the west midlands during the past three years.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to his reply, 11 February 1987, c. 238]: In the period 1984-87, 609 successful applications for grant were processed in the west midlands, totalling over £31 million. Details of those schemes could be made available only at disproportionate cost.

Rate Payments (Default)

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many summonses were issued by each district and borough council in East Sussex for each year since 1979 for rate payment defaults and recovery through magistrates courts.

Mr. Chope: The Government do not keep records of the number of summonses issued by local authorities. The information is, however, to be found in the annual rate collection statistics published by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy.

Loft Insulation

Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many households in the Birmingham, Erdington constituency have benefited from the 66 per cent. loft insulation grant; and what has been the annual cost in each of the years for which the scheme has been running.

Mr. Tracey: This information is not collected for individual constituencies.

New Towns Commission (Asset Disposal)

Mr. Steen asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what criteria he uses in determining asset disposal targets for the New Towns Commission.

Mr. John Patten: For housing and land for housing development, disposal targets are set following discussions of the Commission's forecasts between the commission and the Department. Targets for disposal of industrial and commercial property and of other assets are set following a review by the Department (with advice from independent property consultants) of the commission's disposals programme and analysis of future prospects.

Mr. Steen asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what were the targets set by him for asset disposals and the amount realised by the New Towns Commission during the last five years.

Mr. John Patten: Targets for capital receipts and outturn achieved by the Commission for the New Towns in the years 1981-82 to 1985-86 are as follows (£ million):

	Receipts target	Outturn
1981-82	76·6	60·3
1982-83	44·1	49·6
1983-84	46·6	51·2
1984-85	40·2	55·8
1985-86	84·4	95·0

Local Authority Debt

Mr. David Howell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what protection Her Majesty's Government provide for lenders and other creditors in the event of default by a local authority.

Mr. Ridley: A local authority's debt and its creditworthiness have always been its own responsibility. The Government do not stand behind local authority debt. The great majority of local authorities understand the importance of maintining their creditworthiness and behave in accordance with the rules of financial good practice.

All loan debt is a statutory charge on all the revenues of an authority. If a local authority were to default, creditors—including those who have provided finance for authorities under arrangements such as deferred purchase schemes which do not legally constitute borrowing—might have to take action in the courts to recover their money. The Public Works Loan Board could not lend to an authority which chose to act illegally or which appeared unable to service and repay the debt, even under its lender of last resort facility.

Council Housing

Sir Hugh Rossi asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the comparative figures for arrears in England and Wales of (a) council house rents and (b) local authority mortgage repayments, showing (i) the global sum, (ii) the number of cases and (iii) the relationship of these figures to the total numbers of lettings and mortgages, respectively.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to the reply, 5 February 1987, c. 765-66]: The latest estimates of arrears of mortgage repayments are that about 16,000 mortgagors or 3¼ per cent. of private persons with mortgages outstanding to English local authorities, were in arrears of six months or more at the end of 1985-86, for a total of about £10 million.

On council house rent arrears, I have nothing to add to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Mid-Staffordshire (Mr. Heddle) on 10 December 1986, at column 188.

Homes (Radon Levels)

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the highest know level of radon in any dwelling in Truro constituency; what is the calculated annual effective dose equivalent associated with such a level; what number of dwellings in Truro constituency have been found to have radon levels above the 20 milliSievert action level; what funds are available for remedial building work on such dwellings; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave [pursuant to his reply, 6 February 1987, c. 855-56]: I am advised by the National Radiological Protection Board that the highest level of radon found in any dwelling in Truro constituency in the course of its surveys to date is 7,725 becquerels per cubic metre, which is equivalent to an annual effective dose of 390 milliSieverts (mSv). This is more than twice the level found in any other house in the constituency, but 15 other dwellings were found in which the occupants receive annual doses above the 20 mSv action level.

The NRPB's preliminary survey identified a total of seven houses, all in Devon and Cornwall, where the annual effective dose was above 100 mSv. The NRPB is in touch with the householder concerned to offer confirmatory measurements and advice.

As I stated on 27 January, responsibility for remedial measures must rest with the house owner or landlord. The Government are prepared to consider offering financial assistance towards the costs of remedial work to the most needy owner-occupiers, but until we have received further evidence from NRPB on the extent of the problem and advice from the Building Research Establishment on the most effective remedial measures, it is too early to estimate the funds that may be needed for remedial building work.

As the participants in the NRPB's preliminary survey were given an assurance that the results would remain confidential it would not be appropriate for me to identify the properties concerned.

Greenwich Royal Observatory

Mr. Faulds asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether all the Greenwich royal observatory's activities, with the exception of the equatorial group of telescopes, will be accommodated on the Madingley road site.

Mr. Walden: I have been asked to reply.

It is planned that all the United Kingdom-based activities of the Royal Greenwich Observatory will be accommodated on the Madingley road site, with the exception of the archives section which will be housed in the university library. The future requirement and location for the satellite Laser Ranger is being reviewed by a scientific committee set up by the Science and Engineering Research Council.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Education Expenditure

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish in the Official Report the young mature entry index and the older mature participation index (as defined in the public expenditure White Papers Cmnd. 9702, table 3.12.10, page 194 and Cmnd. 9428, table 3.10.4 page, 150), for the latest public expenditure White Paper, Cmnd. 56 (a) for higher education, and (b) for universities only.

Mr. Walden: The information is shown in the following table:

Young Mature Entry Index and Older Mature Entry Index for initial home[1] entrants to higher education and universities in Great Britain.

[1] The term "home entrants" refers to entrants domiciled in the United Kingdom.

[2] The young mature entry index is defined as the number of initial home entrants aged 21 to 24 expressed as a percentage of those in the relevant age group who obtained one or more A-levels at age 18 but did not then enter HE.

[3] The older mature participation index is defined as the number of initial home entrants aged 25 or more expressed as a percentage of the population aged 25 to 34.

Student Grants

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what has been the total cost to the Exchequer of student maintenance grants in each year since 1970 expressed in the following ways (a) cost terms, (b) indexed, using 1979 as 100 (real terms), (c) including fees and (d) real terms (cash).

Mr. Walden: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the total value of all full value awards granted by local authorities to students over 19 years for the last five years for which data are available at outturn and at 1986-87 prices, and indexed using 1979 as a base; and what was the total value of mandatory awards according to the same categories.

Mr. Walden: Figures are given in the following table for all mandatory awards and other full value awards. Figures are not available by age of student, but most will be aged 19 or over.

Expenditure on mandatory and full value awards: 1979-80 to 1984-85

England and Wales

Student Grants

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has any plans to review the relative tax position of those students who receive their grants from (a) their parents and (b) local authorities; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I have been asked to reply.

In the normal way there is no difference in the relative tax position of students who receive grants either from their parents or from local authorities. Local authority maintenance grants to students are not liable to tax; nor are ordinary (non-covenanted) parental contributions to students' maintenance.

If the parent makes his contribution in the form of payments under a deed of covenant, the tax position is different for both the parent and the student. The parent normally obtains tax relief for the payments by deducting basic rate tax from them. The payments form part of the student's taxable income, and by setting his personal allowances against them he may be entitled to repayment of the tax deducted at source.

School Closures

Mr. Pendry asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science, pursuant to the reply, 3 November, Official Report, columns 302-4, whether St. Nicholas preparatory school, Birmingham, and Newcourt Christian school, London, have since (a) closed, (b) met the terms of the notice of complaint or (c) had the period for compliance further extended.

Mr. Dunn: I regret to say that St. Nicholas preparatory school has failed to make the necessary improvements. The terms of the order made by the independent schools tribunal thus come into force requiring its closure by the end of the present school year. The period for compliance in the case of Newcourt Christian school runs until 31 May 1987.

University Grants Committee

Mr. Robert Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish in the Official Report the formulae currently used by the University Grants Committee in the allocation of resources to universities.

Mr. Walden: The University Grants Committee's resource allocation procedures were described in the committee's circular letter 22/85 of 19 November 1985, a copy of which has been placed in the Library. Supplementary information is contained in the committee's circular letters 4/86 and 6/87, in which recurrent grant to universities was announced for the academic years 1986-87 and 1987-88 respectively. Copies of these letters are also available in the Library.

Mr. Robert Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make available finance to the University Grants Committee to cover fully the cost of the recent pay and salary settlement for university staff.

Mr. Walden: As my right hon. Friend told my hon. Friend the Member for Fife, North-East (Mr. Henderson) on 23 January, at column 745, the government are willing to make available additional funding for university academic pay restructuring on certain conditions. The total cost of a settlement will need to be met from that additional funding and the recurrent grant to universities to which my right hon. Friend announced substantial increases on 6 November 1986, at columns 487-96 for 1987-88 and beyond.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the percentage change in real terms, measured by the gross domestic product deflator, in the funding of each university by the University Grants Committee between 1980-81 and 1987-88, excluding those amounts representing compensation for changes in home student fees, compensation for redundancy and early retirement, changes to take account of minor capital works from the recurrent grant and changes in the level of local authority rates (a) including and (b) excluding additions made for the information technology and new blood programmes; and if he will give similar figures for the provisional distribution for 1989-90.

Mr. Walden: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Primary Schools (Expenditure)

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how much was spent per pupil in primary schools in each local authority area in England for the year 1984-85; and what was the average figure for England as a whole.

Mrs. Rumbold: The information requested is given in the following table:

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Postal Services

Mr. Yeo asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if when he next meets the chairman of the Post Office, he will discuss postal services in rural areas.

Mr. Butcher: I have nothing to add to the reply given to my hon. Friend on 28 January, at column 267.

House of Fraser

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received from Mr. Tiny Rowlands of Lonrho over the last month about the takeover of House of Fraser by Al Fayed.

Mr. Howard: My right hon. Friend has received four letters from Mr. R. W. Rowlands dated 12 January, 22 January, 4 February and 12 February.

Airbus

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what sums have been provided by Her Majesty's Government to date to help finance each type of the European Airbus; what rates of interest have been paid on such sums; what repayments have been made to date; and what repayments have yet to be made and when.

Mr. Pattie: To date, Her Majesty's Government have provided launch-aid of £192·3 million to British Aerospace in respect of the Airbus A320 programme. British Aerospace funded its share of the development costs of earlier Airbus programmes wholly from its own resources. The Government's launch-aid for the A320 programme is repayable by a combination of fixed instalments and levies from aircraft sales calculated to yield a real rate of return on the Government's investment. No repayments have yet been made. The first fixed instalment is due to the Government on 1 January 1990 and levy payments are expected to commence during the 1989-90 financial year.

Takeovers (Share Purchase)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what informaion he has as to how many merchant banks have offered inducements to individuals and bodies corporate to buy the shares of companies involved in takeover battles in the knowledge that the cost would be recovered directly or indirectly from the companies whose shares had been acquired.

Mr. Howard: Specific allegations have been made in only one case. These allegations are being investigated.

Insider Trading

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will publish in the Official Report a list of the cases of insider trading referred to his Department for investigation since 1983 together with his findings, indicating which of these cases have been or will be re-opened to make use of the powers which are now available to him.

Mr. Howard: No. Those involved in the investigation of a possible offence are entitled not to be identified if no prosecution ensues. I could not identify cases where further investigations were being undertaken without jeopardising the prospects of establishing whether a contravention occurred.

Trade Statistics

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the volume of United Kingdom manufactured exports and imports in 1972, 1979 and 1986, respectively, taking 1972 as 100.

Mr. Alan Clark: The information is as follows:

The volume of United Kingdom exports and imports of manufactures taking 1972 as 100 is given below for years 1972 and 1979 to 1986 1972 = 100 OTS basis, seasonally adjusted

	Export volume	Import volume
1972	100·0	100·0
1979	133·4	180·6
1980	134·8	179·2
1981	126·8	175·6
1982	129·1	192·3
1983	128·7	217·7
1984	140·7	240·3
1985	149·3	252·2
1986	153·6	266·7

National Girobank

Mr. Allan Roberts asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the future of National Girobank; and if there are any plans for privatisation in the future.

Mr. Pattie: I am confident that, to the benefit of its customers and staff, Girobank can build upon its encouraging record in recent years of prudent and profitable growth. As we have made clear, the Post Office, including its wholly-owned subsidiary Girobank plc, is not excluded from our policy of transferring activities from the public to the private sector wherever it is practicable and commercially sensible to do so. There are, however, no plans to privatise the Post Office or any of its constituent businesses in the present parliament.

United States (Distribution Licensing)

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what consideration he has given to the implications for United Kingdom responsibilities under European Community law of proposals for United States investigations to conduct internal audits of United Kingdom high technology companies for examining compliance with United States re-export controls; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: I do not consider that there are any such implications.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the audit requirements of the United States inspectors he now proposes to admit to the United Kingdom to examine the books of United Kingdom computer companies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: The United States authorities have requested that United States officials should be allowed to check the procedures which United Kingdom firms choosing to use the distribution licence system agree to put in place under it.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received from the United Kingdom audit profession in relation to the United States-sponsored internal control programme for high technology companies in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: None.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he has taken to ensure that United States investigators conducting internal audits of United Kingdom defence contractors in the high technology field are not given access to information whose disclosure would prejudice national security or breach commerical confidentiality.

Mr. Alan Clark: Any visit, if allowed, would take place only on conditions which safeguarded national security and commercial confidentiality.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry under what circumstances he is prepared to allow United States auditors to examine the accounts of British high technology companies in order to investigate compliance with United States re-export controls.

Mr. Channon: The Government have made clear their rejection of extra-territorial re-export controls on many occasions. We also reject the principle of audit visits designed to monitor compliance with such controls, since any controlled goods imported into this country are subject to our own stringent export licensing requirements.

A number of interested trade associations have made it clear that some of their members see advantage in approved foreign consignee status under the distribution licence system, and would not wish the Government to take any action which would deny them those benefits. Even so, I shall not normally allow audit visits except where I am satisfied that a company wishes to maintain approved foreign consignee status and does not therefore wish the Government to reject an application for a visit.

In such cases, a number of further restrictions would apply. Where United Kingdom companies refuse visits they should not, on that account, be subject to penalties other than the loss of approved consignee status under the scheme. No information gained as a result of a visit should be used as the basis for United States proceedings or administrative action in relation to activities carried on in the United Kingdom. Finally, all visits would be governed by the guidelines already applicable to the conduct of foreign officials while in this country. In any case, I would not expect more than a handful of visits a year.

WALES

Hospital Charges

Mr. Anderson asked the Secretary of State for Wales what sums were collected by each of the Welsh area health authorities from non-United Kingdom residents for hospital charges in 1985 and 1986.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The information requested is as follows:

The table shows income under section 121 of the National Health Service Act 1977 but does not include income received under sections 65 and 66 of the Act from overseas residents treated as private patients.

The table shows net income; the negative figure for West Glamorgan is a result of the cancellation of a bill raised in an earlier year.

Cereals

Mr. Geraint Howells asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he has any plans to introduce quotas on cereals in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: No.

Annual Review of Agriculture

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report the corresponding tables for Wales to those published in the annual review of agriculture 1987, Cm. 67, as tables 1, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 20, 21, 22 and 26.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards [pursuant to his answer, 12 February 1987, c. 295-6]: The information available is given in the tables. Certain elements are not available for Wales.

[1] For all years the figures relate to all known agricultural holdings including minor holdings.
[2] Cereals for threshing excluding maize.
[3] Following a change of definition in England and Wales in 1986 "Vegetables grown in the open" and "Total horticulture" now include "Peas for harvesting dry and for human consumption". Data for 1984 and 1985 reflect this change.
[4] Includes small area of soft fruit grown under orchard trees.
[5] Hardy nursery stock, bulbs and flowers.
[6] Most of the difference between total horticultural area and the sum of individual sectors is made up by glasshouse area.
[7] Includes area of other crops and bare fallow not shown in the table.
[8] Other land comprises farm roads, yards, buildings (excluding glasshouses), ponds and derelict land and gardens.
[9] Because of changes in coverage of poultry holdings, data for 1983 and subsequent years cannot be directly compared with data for earlier years.

[1] The figures are based on returns in the Agricultural Census. Wives/husbands of farmers, partners and directors engaged in farm work were collected for the first time in 1977. Figures for earlier years exclude this category and this is thought to explain the decrease in the number of regular whole-time and part-time female workers from 1977 onwards. Figures include estimates for all minor holdings in Wales not surveyed in the respective June censuses (see footnote (a) to table 3).

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

County Courts

Ms. Clare Short asked the Attorney-General how many sitting days each county court judge has sat in the courts to try on indictment a scheduled offence in each of the years 1984, 1985 and 1986.

The Solicitor-General: The number of days sat by each of the county court judges trying scheduled offences in Northern Ireland on indictment in the years 1984, 1985 and 1986 is shown in the following table:

Judge	1984	1985	1986
Judge One	8	14	15
Judge Two	5	—	—
Judge Three	8	1	18
Judge Four	11	10	11

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Lawrence asked the Attorney-General if he will make an assessment of the working to date of the Crown Prosecution Service.

The Solicitor-General: The Crown Prosecution Service became operational in all areas by 1 October 1986 after submitting to a very tight timetable. The staff in the crown prosecution service have worked extremely hard to build a completely new Department from scratch, and have since continued the task of consolidation and improvement. The foundations have been laid for a very professional, dedicated and efficient service. Neverthless, much remains to be done. In particular, more professional staff must be recruited in London. Inevitably, the new service will need some time to achieve everywhere the efficiency that has been reached in most parts in England and Wales already. I am confident that with the co-operation of all the other agencies involved in the prosecution process this goal can be attained.

"Warfare as a Whole"

Mr. McNamara asked the Attorney-General when he became aware that General Sir Frank Kitson intended to publish a book entitled "Warfare as a Whole".

The Solicitor-General: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him today by my right hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Armed Forces.

Industrial Tribunals

Mr. Terry Davis asked the Attorney-General which part-time chairmen of industrial tribunals in Birmingham are barristers.

The Solicitor-General: Mr. D. B. Akehurst and Mr. G. R. Sneath.

EMPLOYMENT

Community Programme

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Paymaster General how many places have been removed from the planned community programme targets in each region, Scotland and Wales; and what is the saving as a result.

Mr. Lee: The planned maximum allocation for the community programme in 1986-87, together with the provisional allocation of places for 1987-88 for each region, Scotland and Wales are given in the table.

Community programme expenditure is planned to be some £1,120 million in 1987-88 compared with £1,038 in 1986-87.

The net saving to the Exchequer is estimated to be about £15 million.

The programme will continue to provide opportunities for some 300,000 people in 1987-88.

Dr. Godman asked the Paymaster General if he will list in the Official Report the percentage of community places under the Manpower Services Commission's community programme granted to religious bodies in each of the past five years; and if he will break this figure down by way of religious denomination.

Mr. Lee: It is not possible to give a breakdown of places in the form requested from records held centrally and this could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, the table shows at March 1984, the earliest date for which detailed statistics are available, and for each subsequent year, the total number of authorised community programme places, the number of those places sponsored by religious bodies and the percentage this represents of the total.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Murphy asked the Paymaster General if he will indicate the number of jobs that have been created in the Welwyn Hatfield constituency since May 1979; and what are the comparable figures for (a) Hertfordshire and (b) the country as a whole.

Mr. Lee: The precise information requested is not available. Net changes in employment can be provided but, for areas smaller than regions, only for those dates when censuses of employment are taken.

The table gives the latest available set of comparable figures from the June 1978 and the September 1981 census of employment. No census was taken in 1979 and small area results from the September 1984 census are not yet available. Because constituency figures are not available for years prior to 1981, figures are given for the area covered by the jobcentre areas of Welwyn Garden City and Hatfield with corresponds most closely to the Welwyn Hatfield constituency.

Employees in employment

(thousands)

	June 1978	September 1981	Net change 1978 to 1981 Absolute	Per cent.
Welwyn Garden City and Hatfield	52·0	51·9	−0·2	−0·3
Hertfordshire	408·9	412·4	+3·5	+0·9
Great Britain	22,273·0	21,309·0	−964·0	−4·3

Between censuses, employment estimates are based on small scale sample inquiries which cannot produce reliable results for areas smaller than the standard economic regions.

These estimates show that at March 1983 there were 20,402,000 employees employed in Great Britain compared with 21,169,000 in September 1986 (the latest date for which figures are available); a net increase of 767,000. Between the same dates the employed labour force (that is including the self employed and Her Majesty's forces) increased by 1,317,000.

Mr. Forth asked the Paymaster General if he will give the unemployment figure for the constituency of Mid-Worcestershire for January 1986, June 1983 and June 1979.

Mr. Lee: The following information is in the Library. On 9 January 1986 the number of unemployed claimants in the Mid-Worcestershire parliamentary constituency was 6,491. The corresponding number on 9 June 1983 was 6,608. This comparison is affected by seasonal factors and by the 1983 Budget provisions for certain older men. Unemployment statistics for parliamentary constituencies are derived from the ward-based system and are available only from June 1983.

Mr. Winnick asked the Paymaster General (1) what is the number of those over 45 years now unemployed in (a) the west midlands region, (b) the black country area of the west midlands and (c) the Walsall travel-to-work area and the respective figures for May 1979 and the percentage change in each category;

(2) if he will state the number of those aged 20 years and under who are unemployed in (a) the west midlands region, (b) the black country area of the west midlands and (c) the Walsall travel-to-work area and the figures for May 1979 and the percentage change in each category.

Mr. Lee: The following information is in the Library. The table gives the latest figures of unemployed claimants aged under 20 years (not available aged 20 years) an over 45 years in the areas requested on 8 January 1987. For April 1979 (not available for May) the figures given are the numbers of unemployed registrants in those age groups in the west midlands region and the travel-to-work areas of the Black Country and Walsall as defined in 1978. The percentage changes have not been calculated because the figures for 1979 and 1987 are not comparable, due to changes in the method of collection and compilation of the data. A list of these changes was published on page 422 of the October 1986 Employment Gazette. Additional discontinuities occured in local area statistics with the introduction of ward-based statistics and the revision to boundaries of travel-to-work areas.

	Aged under 20 years	Aged over 45 years
Unemployed registrants—April 1979
West Midlands region	18,305	37,673

Unemployed claimants—January 1987
West Midlands region	49,710	92,390
Black Country[1]	14,072	26,957
Walsall travel-to-work area (as defined in 1984)	3,805	7,054

[1] Comprising the Dudley and Sandwell, Walsall and Wolverhampton travel-to-work areas as defined at that time.

Mr. Winnick asked the Paymaster General what is the number and percentage of those who had been unemployed for 12 months and more in the (a) west midlands region, (b) in the black country of the west midlands and (c) in the Walsall travel-to-work area in May 1979 and now.

Mr. Lee: The following information is in the Library. The table shows the numbers of claimants who had been unemployed for over 12 months in the areas requested, and the percentage of the total unemployed they represent, on 8 January 1987. Comparisons of unemployment over the period requested are difficult to make because of changes in the method of collection and compilation of the data. However, the table also shows the numbers in April 1979 (not available for May) of unemployed registrants who had been unemployed for over 12 months in the west midlands region and the travel-to-work areas, as defined in 1978, of the Black Country and Walsall.

Claimants—unemployed for over 12 Months, January 1987

	Number	Percentage of total unemployed
West Midlands region	158,086	46·3 per cent.
Black Country[1]	48,290	49·9 per cent.
Walsall travel-to-work area (as defined in 1984)	12,566	48·3 per cent.
Registrants—unemployed for over 12 Months, April 1979
West Midlands region	34,154	28·6 per cent.
Black Country[1]	8,164	27·9 per cent.
Walsall travel-to-work area (as defined in 1978)	2,495	28·8 per cent.

[1] Comprising the Dudley and Sandwell, Walsall and Wolverhampton travel-to-work areas as defined at that time.

Mr. Winnick asked the Paymaster General how many were employed full-time in manufacturing in (a) the west midlands region, (b) the black country area of the west midlands and (c) the Walsall travel-to-work area in May 1979 and now; and if he will give the percentage change.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Separate statistics are not available for full-time employees in the manufacturing industries in the west midlands region. In June 1979 (figures are not available for May) 985,000 people were employed in manufacturing industries in the west midlands whereas in September 1986 (the latest date for which figures are available) the equivalent figure was 707,000 a change of minus 28 per cent. This is not necessarily an exact measure of any loss of jobs overall, as the increasing tendency of manufacturing companies to put out their services to sub-contractors means that jobs previously classified as being in manufacturing industries are now classified as being in service industries.

Employment statistics for local areas such as the Black Country and Walsall are available only for those dates when censuses of employment are taken and the most recent are for September 1981. No census was taken in 1979 and small area results from the September 1984 census are not yet available.

Mr. Allen McKay asked the Paymaster General if he will give for each year from 1979 to 1986 inclusive the percentage unemployment rate for each age group from 17 years to 60 years plus in (a) the Barnsley travel-to-work area and (b) Barnsley, West and Penistone constituency area using (i) the same formula for calculation as used in 1979 and (ii) as at present calculated.

Mr. Lee: The information requested is not available. Unemployment rates by age are calculated only at the national level because regular reliable estimates of the age of the working population are available only at that level.

Project Proposals

Dr. Godman asked the Paymaster General if he will list in the Official Report the project proposals accepted by area manpower boards of the Manpower Services Commission which were submitted by religious bodies; and if he will list these bodies in terms of religious denomination and award made.

Mr. Lee: In November 1986, the latest date for which information is available, there were 12,517 community programme projects, of which 667 were sponsored by churches.

The more detailed information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Portsmouth Jobcentre (Leaflets)

Mr. Hancock asked the Paymaster General why no Action for Jobs leaflets were available in the Portsmouth jobcentre on Friday 13 February.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I am advised by the Manpower Services Commission, which controls the jobcentres, that the "Action for Jobs" booklets were on display and available in the public area of the Portsmouth jobcentre on Friday 13 February.

Steps have been taken to make the display more prominent.

Literacy and Numeracy

Mr. Ashdown asked the Paymaster General, further to his reply to the hon. Member for Yeovil on 11 February, Official Report, column 254, concerning a review of literacy and numeracy skills being undertaken by the Manpower Services Commission, when this review was started; what is the extent of this review; what resources are being used in this review; when he expects results of this review to be available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: In December 1986 a working group was established within the Manpower Services Commission to examine the extent of illiteracy among long-term unemployed people and how the commission might help to remedy it. The group's members included officials involved in managing employment and training programmes relevant to identifying and tackling literacy and numeracy problems, together with observers from my Department and the Department of Education and Science. A report of the group's findings is currently being considered by my right hon. and noble Friend the Secretary of State for Employment and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Science.

Community Schemes and YTS

Mr. Winnick asked the Paymaster General, if he will give the total number of those on all kinds of community schemes and YTS in (a) the west midlands region, (b) the black country area of the west midlands and (c) the Walsall travel-to-work area.

Mr. Lee: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Restart

Mr. Fisher asked the Paymaster General (1) what is the latest estimate of the cost of the advertising campaign for the restart scheme (a) nationally and (b) in Stoke-on-Trent;

(2) what estimates he has of the proportion of advertising for the restart scheme in relation to (a) each employer who makes a positive commitment to take part in the scheme and (b) each employee participating in the scheme;

(3) how many employers have made a positive commitment to take part in the restart scheme.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mr. Fisher asked the Paymaster General what is the latest estimate of the cost of the restart scheme (a) nationally and (b) in Stoke-on-Trent.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: We estimate that in 1986-87 the restart programme will cost about £53 million. The estimated cost in Stoke-on-Trent which was one of the pilot areas is £260,000.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Fresh Start

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the responses that he received from prison officers following his Department's letter to officers seeking to explain his Department's policy on fresh start.

Mr. Mellor: Correspondence between management and staff in the prison service is normally treated as confidential.

Lincoln Prison (Hepatitis)

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of hepatitis A and B have been notified at Lincoln prison.

Mr. Mellor: In the last statistical year (ended 31 March 1986) eight cases of hepatitis B (five of them acute cases) were reported to the Prison Department. No case of hepatitis A was reported.

Forensic Pathology

Mr. Leigh asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has received the report prepared by the working party on forensic pathology.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No. I understand that the report is at an advanced stage of preparation and that the working party hopes to complete it shortly.

Mr. Leigh asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, when he considers the report of the working party on forensic pathology, he will take into account archaeological techniques now available to investigators of modern buried evidence.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Yes. I understand that the working party has received evidence suggesting that in the investigation of suspicious deaths consideration should be given to the use of a range of specialists, including archaeologists, where appropriate.

Prison Population

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the yearly change since January 1980 in the prison population of England and Wales.

Mr. Mellor: The information is given in the table. The prison population can vary considerably from month to month; annual averages are given each year in Prison Statistics, England and Wales (table 1.4 of the latest issue for 1985, Cmnd. 9903).

Population of Prison Department establishments in England and Wales on 31 December, 1979-86

Number of persons[1]

Year	Population	Change
		Number	percentage
1979	41,152
1980	[1]36,757	−4,395	−11
1981	40,789	4,032	11
1982	42,187	1,398	3
1983	41,310	−877	−2
1984	41,443	133	—
1985	44,419	2,976	7
1986	46,277	1,858	4

[1] Because of the industrial action by the Prison Officers Association which affected the last three months of 1980, the population on 31 December was lower than otherwise; 760 prisoners were held in police cells.

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what response he expects to make to the views expressed this week by prison governors of the problems they face in running prisons in England and Wales due to the increase of the prison population; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The Government are already responding to the adverse conditions in some establishments to which the increase in the prison population has contributed. We are undertaking the largest prison building programme this century which, together with the programme of redevelopment and refurbishment at existing establishments, has already produced 3,500 new places since June 1983 and will provide a total of 17,200 new places by 1995.

The Government have also taken steps to encourage the use of non-custodial disposals by the courts by strengthening the range of alternatives to custody for less serious offenders. Action to reduce the remand population includes the provision of 140 new or replacement court rooms and plans for 270 more, and plans for a scheme of time limits on the period spent on remand in custody.

Expenditure on the Prison Service has increased by 36 per cent. in real terms since May 1979. Staff numbers have increased by 19 per cent. over the same period. To make more effective use of these increased resources, improvements in management systems have been introduced. More recently, a package of proposals known as "Fresh Start" has been drawn up which is designed to produce more efficient and flexible working practices in prisons. The purpose of these efficiency measures is to release further resources for improving prison regimes.

Vincent Jones Hickey

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects the inquiry into the conviction of Vincent Jones Hickey at present detained at Her Majesty's prison Parkhurst to be completed.

Mr. Mellor: We expect to receive shortly the report of the inquiry which has been conducted by officers of the Warwickshire constabulary into the case of Vincent Hickey and others. My right hon. Friend will then decide as quickly as possible whether there are grounds for action.

Police Car Chases

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what response he has given to the representations presented to him in January in relation to the problem of people killed and seriously injured in police high-speed car chases.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I have emphasised that both the Government and the police service deeply regret the occurrence of serious accidents involving police vehicles, and have explained that the police face a genuine dilemma when dealing with drivers who refuse to stop. I have also set out the measures taken by the police service to minimise the risk of accidents taking place in such circumstances.

"The Secret Society"

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, pursuant to his statement of 3 February, Official Report, column 823, he has anything to add in respect of Ministerial knowledge of the steps which the police were proposing to take in the course of their investigation in connection with the BBC series "The Secret Society".

Mr. Hurd: No. I refer the hon. Member to the answers given to him by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland on 11 and 16 February, Official Report, c. 268 and 457.

Mr. Nguyen Von Hai

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when visas to enable the family of Mr. Nguyen Von Hai to join him in the United Kingdom from a refugee camp in Indonesia as promised by his Minister of State in a letter dated 24 October 1985 to the hon. Member for Woolwich, reference N149420/2, were issued; what was the reason for the delay; and what action he has taken to prevent repetition of such delay.

Mr. Waddington: I wrote to the hon. Member on 18 February about this matter.

Metropolitan Police

Dr. Twinn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what will be the total cost to public funds of the Metropolitan police in 1987-88; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: As police authority for the metropolis, I have approved estimates which provide for net revenue expenditure by the Metropolitan police of £929·081 million in 1987-88, an increase of 9 per cent. on the cash limit of £851·800 million which I set for 1986-87.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL FOR SCOTLAND

BBC Scotland (Police Raid)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland pursuant to his answer of 16 February, how frequently the Lord Advocate expects to receive reports from the procurator fiscal on the police search of BBC premises in Glasgow.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate expects to receive reports from the procurator fiscal on the police search of the BBC premises in Glasgow as and when the procurator fiscal has any relevant information or developments to report. The frequency of such reports cannot be predicted.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland why the assistant procurator fiscal sought a warrant for the search of BBC premises in Glasgow concerning material for the whole series of programmes, "The Secret Society", and not just material for the programme on the Zircon satellite project as referred to in the New Statesman on 23 January.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the written question by the hon. Member for Tayside, North (Mr. Walker) on 17 February 1987 at column 546 of the Official Report for 18 February 1987.

National Security

Mr. Dalyell asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland by what method he assesses the extent of the damage to national security for the purposes of determining the need for police inquiries.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: I refer to my reply to the hon. Member's written question on 16 February at column 447.

Publications (Official Secrets Act)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland what steps the Lord Advocate takes to ascertain, in advance of publication, whether a book or article is to be published which may constitute a breach of the Official Secrets Act, or in relation to which the public interest may require him to seek an interdict.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: It is not the practice of the Lord Advocate to disclose the details of operational matters relating to inquiries into potential or suspected breaches of the law.

ENERGY

Coal Imports

Mr. Allen McKay asked the Secretary of State for Energy what was the total amount of coal imported by country of origin for each quarter of 1986.

Mr. David Hunt: Quarterly imports of coal during 1986 were as follows:

Country	Quantity '000 Tonnes Q1	Q2	Q3
Australia	942	867	1,283
United States	763	950	970
Poland	265	424	232

NORTHERN IRELAND

Emergency Provisions

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many persons were detained under the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Acts 1973 to 1978 in the second half of 1986;

(2) how many persons were detained under the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978; and, of those persons, how many were charged with scheduled offences and how many were charged with non-scheduled offences in 1986.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, Official Report, c. 463]: In 1986 there were 903 arrests by the Royal Ulster Constabulary and 71 by members of the armed forces under the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978 (including 409 and 49 respectively in the second half of the year). Some of those arrested by members of the armed forces would be recorded in the Royal Ulster Constabulary figures if they were subsequently handed over to the police.

Of the arrests carried out by the Royal Ulster Constabulary, 159 were subsequently charged with scheduled offences and 11 with non-scheduled offences.

Prison Population

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give the number of prisoners in Northern Ireland jails at 31 December 1986, detailing the numbers by sex, in prison and in young offenders centres separately.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, Official Report, c. 464]: On 31 December 1986, there were 1,765 inmates in Northern Ireland prison establishments, of whom 1,736 were men and 29 were women; 1,575 were in prisons and 190 in young offenders centres.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the size of the present prison population in Northern Ireland divided into terrorist offenders and other offenders categorised by age and by sex in the following groups: under 18 years old, 18 to 25 years, 25 to 30 years, 40 to 50 years, 50 to 60 years and over 60 years, giving a breakdown of the length of sentence being served by each age group under the following headings: (i) up to three months, (ii) over three months and up to six months, (iii) over six months and under 12 months, (iv) over 12 months and under 18 months, (v) over 18 months and up to four years, (vi) over four years and up to eight years, (vii) over eight years and (viii) life, together with a breakdown, divided into terrorist offenders and other offenders under the same sentence headings, of the numbers as a percentage of the total prison population.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 465]: On 25 January 1987 (the latest date for which figures in such detail are available) there were 1,604 sentenced inmates in Northern Ireland prison establishments. This includes those detained in young offenders centres. The requested breakdowns of the population are set out in the table.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in how many cases in each year, since the introduction of the review procedure for life sentenced prisoners, on which the board had recommended that a release date be given, he has rejected the review board's recommendation.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 17 February 1987, c. 547]: There have been no such cases.

DEFENCE

United Kingdom-USA (Trade Ratios)

Mr. Warren asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the total value of purchases from the United States of America and by the United States of America from the United Kingdom under the memorandum of understanding in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It has not been the practice of successive Governments to publish detailed figures for our defence trade with individual countries. The annual defence balance of trade ratios agreed with the United states for each of the last five years, United States: United Kingdom are:

	Ratios
1980-81	2·0:1
1981-82	2·0:1
1982-83	1·9:1
1983-84	2·1:1
1984-85	1·9:1

Royal Navy (Drugs)

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when he expects the inquiry into allegations of drug taking and drug smuggling among Royal Navy seamen to be completed; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what evidence led to the inquiry into allegations of drug taking and drug smuggling among Royal Navy seamen.

Mr. Freeman: The investigation into the recent press allegations of drug taking and drug smuggling by Royal Navy ratings was set in hand solely on the basis of those allegations. It is expected to be completed shortly.

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many inquiries have been held into allegations of drug taking and drug smuggling among Royal Navy personnel since 1980.

Mr. Freeman: The number of drugs investigations by the special investigation squad since 1980 is 279.

Haslar Hospital

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence why the chief medical officer in Haslar hospital released rosters for catering staffs to Gardner Merchant to assist with its planning.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The rosters were released in order that Gardner Merchant would be more fully aware of the details of the service to be provided.

RAF Binbrook

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when he expects to make a decision on the future of RAF Binbrook;

(2) when the Lightning aircraft at RAF Binbrook will be moved to an alternative base.

Mr. Stanley: I cannot at present add to what was said on this matter by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Armed Forces in the debate on the Royal Air Force on 2 February, at columns 1118-19.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many civilians are currently employed at RAF Binbrook.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: On 1 January 1987 the number was 109.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he has received any recent representations from the civilian work force at RAF Binbrook.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: None.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any plans to visit RAF Binbrook to speak to the civilian work force.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has no plans to visit RAF Binbrook.

"Warfare as a Whole"

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he or any officials in his Department have read a draft copy of General Sir Frank Kitson's book entitled, "Warfare as a Whole".

Mr. Stanley: Officials in this Department are currently examining it.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he became aware that General Sir Frank Kitson had written a book entitled, "Warfare as a Whole".

Mr. Stanley: The Ministry of Defence first became aware of the book on 13 February.

Zircon Project

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Defence under which Supply Estimate vote and sub-head expenditure on the Zircon project has been incurred.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is not the practice to publish such information.

Overseas Accommodation

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will make a statement on the living accommodation of troops in Gibraltar; what safety and sanitary inspections have been carried out on military accommodation on the rock over the last 15 years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: A new build of 45 married quarters are under construction, and it is planned to modernise some of the single soldiers' living accommodation. There is also a programme to refurbish the older married accommodation. Once this is complete we shall be able to dispense with mobile homes and the poorer stock of old married quarters situated mostly in the town. Safety and hygiene inspections have been carried out at least annually as a matter of routine.

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of British troops serving overseas are living in mobile homes.

Mr. Freeman: There are 43 service families living in mobile homes overseas. These are all in Gibraltar. This represents about 0·05 per cent. of the total number of British troops overseas.

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many British troops stationed in Gibraltar are living in mobile homes; what were the dates of construction of these homes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: There are presently 43 Army and Navy families living in mobile homes in Gibraltar. These homes were produced in 1971 and 1976 and although well maintained they are approaching the end of their economic life. It is intended in the next two years to phase out these and the poorer old quarters situated mostly in the town.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Alternative Land Use

12. Mr. Bill Walker asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any plans to introduce a new regime to assist Highland farmers in Scotland and other parts of the United Kingdom to develop alternative land use.

Mr. Gummer: In his statement to the House last week my right hon. Friend announced an imaginative package on alternative land use which will assist farmers in the Highlands and elsewhere. This includes a new farm woodlands scheme, some expansion of the forestry programme, further environmentally sensitive areas, aid for diversification on farms, including marketing, and more emphasis on novel crops and livestock in our research and development and advisory programmes.

19. Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he intends to announce his proposals on alternative land uses.

28. Mr. Kenneth Carlisle asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to encourage diversification in the use of land.

43. Mr. Cash asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any plans to extend the scope of the agricultural improvement scheme to offer grants for purposes ancillary to agriculture.

46. Mr. Lord asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he is now in a position to announce his plans on farm forestry.

58. Mr. Gale asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he is now in a position to announce his plans on alternative land use and the rural economy.

Mr. Gummer: I refer my hon. Friends to the statement made by my right hon. Friend the Minister on 9 February and to the written reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Stafford (Mr. Cash) on the same day at columns 70-2.

Farm Land (Taxation)

13. Mr. Heathcoat-Amory asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received urging the introduction of an additional tax at a single national rate on the improved value of farm land.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I have received a number of representations pointing out that this proposal in the Liberal policy document would in fact mean the rating of agricultural land.

Livestock Farms

14. Mr. Thurnham asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has on (a) the average size of beef livestock farms in Britain and (b) comparable livestock farms in the rest of the European Economic Community.

Mr. Gummer: The average size of beef herd in the United Kingdom in 1985 was 17 cows, compared with 11 in the European Community as a whole.

Cereals

15. Mr. Andy Stewart asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last discussed cereals surpluses with the President of the National Farmers' Union.

Mr. Gummer: My right hon. Friend and I frequently discuss all aspects of agriculture with the President of the National Farmers' Union.

31. Mr. Forth asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has on (a) the average size of cereal farms in Britain and (b) comparable cereal farms in the rest of the European Economic Community.

Mr. Gummer: The average area of cereals (excluding maize) grown on farms in Great Britain and the United Kingdom in June 1986 were 46·7 hectares and 43·6 hectares respectively.

Comparable information for other countries in the European Community is available only for 1983 and is shown in the table:

Average area of cereals (excluding maize) on holdings in 1983

	Area
West Germany	8·3
France	13·0
Italy	3·7
Netherlands	9·4
Belgium	6·9
Luxembourg	9·4
United Kingdom	41·2
Ireland	6·7
Denmark	18·6
Greece	2·9
EC 10	7·9

44. Mr. Leigh asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what further representations he has received on compulsory quotas on cereals.

Mr. Gummer: I continue to receive suggestions that the problems of over-production in the cereals sector could best be dealt with by the imposition of compulsory quotas on all cereal growers. I remain opposed to this approach because quotas would stifle initiative, strike hardest at those farmers who are most efficient at growing cereals, who are largely to be found in this country, and would pose enormous administrative problems.

59. Mr. Yeo asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent representations he has received regarding surpluses of cereal products in the European Economic Community.

Mr. Gummer: I continue to receive representations from many different sources.

Fishing Industry (Light Dues)

16. Dr. Godman asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from the fishing industry about the implications for the fishing fleet of the proposed extension to large fishing vessels of liability to light dues.

Mr. Gummer: We have received no representations on this subject, which is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport. My right hon. Friend is considering proposals under which light dues from fishing vessels would go towards costs of the Racal Decca Navigator system which is so important to the industry.

Mr. Stott asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimates he has made of the impact on the British fishing industry of the changes in light dues.

Mr. Gummer: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow (Dr. Godman).

Fishing Fleet

17. Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the current performance and structure of the British fishing fleet.

Mr. Gummer: The United Kingdom fishing industry is in better shape than it has been for a number of years, largely due to the success of the common fisheries policy. The value of landings again increased last year, in spite of a lower catch, and demand for fish is buoyant.

EC (Two-tier Pricing)

18. Mr. Bellingham asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the impact on British cereal growers of a two-tier pricing policy.

Mr. Gummer: A two tier price policy of the sort advocated by the right hon. Member for Plymouth, Devonport (Dr. Owen) would inevitably discriminate against producers in this country. The average United Kingdom cereal farmer would suffer a £6,000 per annum cut in revenue.

48. Sir Peter Mills asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the effect on the net income of the average-sized beef livestock farm in the United Kingdom of a policy of two-tier pricing of beef.

49. Sir Hector Monro asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the impact on British beef producers of a two-tier pricing system.

Mr. Gummer: A two-tier pricing system in the beef sector would presumably operate so that after a certain fixed number of cattle had been sold per holding, further sales would be on the basis of a reduced level of support. An approach of this kind involving a beef premium with a 50 beast headage limit per farm was proposed last year by the European Commission. We rejected it since it would have discriminated severely against United Kingdom producers. Instead, we secured agreement to the continuation of our beef variable premium scheme for a further two years.

54. Mr. Latham asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will make a statement on the prospects for beef producers in the light of the recent European Community agreement on dealing with surplus commodities.

Mr. Gummer: The EC beef support arrangements have been resulting in the production of huge surpluses which could be disposed of only at very substantial cost. The beef regime is now estimated to have cost the Community some 3·5 billion ecu last year (about £2·4 billion) and reform was essential.

The changes agreed by the Council in December ensure that the support regime takes greater account of market realities. The emphasis on intervention buying is reduced leaving support through premia to play a more important role. Some cut back in support was essential but we secured arrangements which protect the interests of our producers. The beef variable premium continues for 2 years and now applies at a higher rate as a result of the 6 per cent. devaluation of the green rate for beef. We have scope to increase the suckler cow premium from £24·74 to over £33 per head. The impact of the changed intervention arrangements is reduced in the United Kingdom by the green pound devaluation and by the adjustment to steer buying-in prices which will follow their harmonisation with those for young bulls. The support level will fall around £36 in the United Kingdom compared with over £40 on French steers and over £80 on French bulls. In Italy and Germany the drop is around £115 to £120 a beast.

The Agriculture Council recognise that the reforms agreed for the milk sector could result in cow culling which would put pressure on the beef market. Accordingly 435 mecu have been set aside for use by the Commission to provide extra support for the beef sector as necessary. The Commission has also accepted that it must be ready to institute emergency support measures if there is undue market weakness.

These arrangements give beef producers firm guidance for the next two years and set the industry on a path towards a better balance between supply and demand.

55. Mr. Nicholas Baker asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the effect on the net income of the average-sized cereal farm in the United Kingdom of a policy of two-tier pricing of cereals.

57. Mr. Key asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received on the implications of adopting a policy in the European Economic Community of two-tier pricing.

70. Mr. Neil Hamilton asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the effect on British agriculture of a system of two-tier pricing.

Mr. Gummer: I refer my hon. Friends to the answer I gave today to the Member for Norfolk, North-West (Mr. Howell).

56. Mr. Cockeram asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the effect on the net income of the average-sized sheep farm in the United Kingdom of a policy of two-tier pricing of sheepmeat.

Mr. Gummer: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Banff and Buchan (Mr. McQuarrie).

Milk Quotas

20. Sir Geoffrey Johnson Smith asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what impact the temporary suspension of quota with compensation scheme will have on the income of the average United Kingdom dairy producer.

76. Mr. McLoughlin asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what impact the temporary suspension of quota with compensation scheme will have on the income of the average United Kingdom dairy producer.

Mr. Gummer: The level of compensation proposed, 6·5p per litre, compares favourably with the average profitability of dairy production, which is some 3 to 4p per litre in England and Wales. So while individual farmers' circumstances differ widely, the compensation will clearly be very valuable to producers in dealing with the cuts in quota.

32. Mr. Knox asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a further statement about the operation of milk quotas.

Mr. Gummer: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave him on 22 January.

33. Mr. Strang asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from the industry about the effect of the planned cut in milk quotas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I have received a number of representations concerning the effect of the December Council agreement on the milk sector. The agreement aims to reduce milk production across the Community by 9·5 per cent. through a mixture of direct cuts in quota, temporary suspension of quota and a tightening up of the quota system. Generous compensation arrangements have been introduced to help producers adapt to the lower level of production required.

Fertilisers

21. Mr. Wrotch asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will now make it his policy to place restrictions on the use of nitrogen-based fertilisers in farming in Britain.

Mr. Donald Thompson: No. However, my Department will continue to publish recommendations on fertiliser use, and to encourage farmers to assess the requirements of their crops accurately.

Food Aid

22. Mr. Burt asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from the charities in charge of giving away free food to the needy.

65. Mr. Steen asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from the charities in charge of giving away free food to the needy.

Mr. Gummer: I have received views both directly and through my Department on a number of matters relating to the efficient and speedy distribution of this food and I intend to continue to keep closely in touch with the admirable work of the charitable organisations concerned.

35. Mr. Page asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which charities have taken up the offer to disburse free food to the needy; and if he will report on progress to date.

41. Mr. Whitfield asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which charities have taken up the offer to disburse free food to the needy; and if he will report on progress to date.

Mr. Gummer: I gave the list of charitable organisations in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley (Mr. Foulkes) on 29 January. As to progress so far, I refer my hon. Friends to the reply I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Jarrow (Mr. Dixon).

62. Mr. Tom Cox asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proportion of the costs of the total surplus food aid so far allocated will be taken up by the costs of preparation of the food in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Gummer: Of the United Kingdom costs covered by Community funds, I estimate that about 6 per cent. of those for butter are accounted for by re-packaging costs. For beef, the costs of preparation are for the charitable organisations themselves. No preparation is required for milk or cheese.

63. Mr. Home Robertson asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many people in Britain are entitled to receive food under the current European Economic Community scheme; and how many have actually received any.

Mr. Gummer: The guidance I have given to charitable organisations on the coverage of the most needy group is in general terms, and I am not in a position to estimate how many people are covered by it. Nor does my Department maintain central records of the number of individuals who have received food.

78. Mr. James Lamond asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the directors of the charities charged with distributing European Economic Community food aid in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Gummer: On 22 January last.

Mr. John asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those commodities available in the United Kingdom for distribution under the European Economic Community food aid scheme which are not being distributed; and if he will give the reasons therefor.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 483]: The information is as follows:

Commodity
Sugar from intervention stocks	There are no intervention stocks in the United Kingdom for these products and supplies would thus need to be transported from elsewhere in the Community. The cost would be disproportionate to likely demand.
Flour milled from intervention stocks of bread-making wheat
Olive oil from intervention stocks
Full milk yoghurt from the open market	We are concentrating on butter, cheese and milk, and not yoghurt, as these are the dairy products most useful to needy people.

Mr. A. J. Beith asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has any plans to make surplus butter available at reduced cost to retirement pensioners not in receipt of non-contributory social security benefit.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 482]: Butter is currently available to charities for distribution to the most needy under Community arrangements which apply until the end of March. There are no plans to introduce the social butter scheme in the United Kingdom.

Food Additives

23. Mr. Patrick Thompson asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to publish information and guidance to members of the public on food additives and labelling.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My hon. Friend will by now have heard that I launched a new booklet "Food Additives: The Balanced Approach" last week. The booklet explains all about food additives and how they are controlled. It has been welcomed by supermarket chains up and down the country. We have so far, in just over a week, had requests for more than 1·4 million copies of the accompanying leaflet. As for food labelling, our earlier publication "Look at the Label" first issued in 1982 has also been a great success. We are currently considering a revision of this booklet to incorporate guidance for consumers on the nutrition information which is appearing on food labels.

Common Agricultural Policy

24. Mr. Nellist asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his latest estimate of Britain's net contribution to the common agricultural policy; and if he will estimate the contribution for 1987-88.

Mr. Gummer: The United Kingdom contributes to the EC budget as a whole, rather than to individual items of expenditure, at approximately 20 per cent. abated by the Fontainebleau mechanism.

The 1987 draft budget provides for expenditure of 24,152 mecu (£15,500 million) under the common agricultural policy. The forecast of United Kingdom receipts from the CAP in 1987-88 is £1,399 million.

45. Dr. Roger Thomas asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he intends providing any means of financial support for beef and dairy farmers as a consequence of quota and price cuts proposed for the common agricultural policy.

Mr. Gummer: The reforms of the beef and dairy regimes agreed at the December Agriculture council, which I announced to the House on 17 December, were urgently needed to take account of the realities of the market for these products, and so assist the development of a better balance of supply and demand.

In the beef sector, the variable premium has been maintained; there is scope to increase the suckler cow premium and the sector has also benefitted from the 6 per cent. devaluation of the green pound also agreed in December. Further, the commission has built 435 mecu into their calculation of expenditure on beef over the next two years to allow for extra support for this sector following the decisions on milk.

In the dairy sector the necessary cuts in production have been accompanied by increased compensation for the Community outgoers scheme; generous rates of compensation were also agreed for the temporary suspension of quota.

Horticulture

25. Mr. Coachman asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the value of horticultural output from commercial holdings in 1985 and 1986.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Broxbourne (Mrs. Roe).

Fishing Industry

26. Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals he has for compensating English fishermen for the drop in their catches and earnings consequent on the new 1987 catch quotas as agreed with the European Economic Community.

Mr. Gummer: It is not the Government's policy to compensate fishermen for the effect of natural fluctuations in the abundance of fish stocks or of measures taken to conserve stocks for the industry's own benefit.

Sheep

27. Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has on (a) the average size of sheep farms in Britain and (b) comparable sheep farms in the rest of the European Economic Community.

Mr. Gummer: The most recent information on the size of sheep farms in the European Economic Community shows that in 1983 the average flock size in the United Kingdom was 397 sheep and in the Community of Ten was 89 sheep.

North Sea Fishing

29. Mr. Henderson asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the operation of the technical conservation regulation and its impact on North sea fishing.

Mr. Gummer: The Community's technical conservation regulation continues to play a vital role in ensuring an improved pattern of exploitation of fish stocks, particularly by reducing the mortality of juvenile fish. Nowhere is this more important than in the North Sea, given the present state of a number of the whitefish stocks there.

Agricultural Support

30. Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will invite the next meeting of the Agricultural Council to consider plans to repatriate agricultural support to individual member states; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: No.

Set-aside Policies

34. Mr. Haynes asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on any set-aside policies agreed by Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. Gummer: In December the Council of Ministers agreed in principle that aid should be offered to divert land out of commodities in surplus. Discussions are continuing on the detailed measures necessary to implement this agreement in principle.

Food Prices

36. Mr. Franks asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will state, for 1986, the rise in the retail prices index and the rise in the price of food during the same period.

60. Mr. Tim Smith asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will state, for 1986, the rise in the retail prices index and the rise in the price of food during the same period.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The increase in the retail prices index over the 12-month period to December 1986 was 3·7 per cent. The comparable increase for the food component of the retail prices index was 3·1 per cent.

37. Mr. Maclennan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the European Commission's price proposals for 1987.

Mr. Gummer: We are studying the Commission's price proposals. In the course of negotiations on the proposals, I shall be seeking to make further progress on the reform of regimes in surplus or which involve excessive budgetary cost, and we shall be seeking an outcome which spreads the burden of reform fairly among all member states and does not discriminate against the United Kingdom.

Pesticides and Herbicides

38. Miss Maynard asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many pesticides and herbicides are presently cleared for use in agriculture in Britain by his Department; and whether any are presently being considered for clearance.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Pesticide approvals in Great Britain are, under the control of Pesticides Regulations 1986 granted by Ministers acting jointly. The term "pesticide" includes herbicides as well as fungicides, insecticides, rodenticides and other control agents. Currently there are some 3,400 products holding MAFF registration numbers and a further 3,000 applications awaiting approval. The vast majority of these relate to changes or extensions of use of existing approved products. Of the first total some 50 per cent. are approved for use in agriculture.

Agricultural Holdings (Rates)

39. Sir Paul Hawkins asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the impact on the net income of the average beef producer in the United Kingdom if rates were imposed on farm buildings and land.

40. Mr. Jackson asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the impact on the net income of the average sheep producer in the United Kingdom if rates were imposed on farm buildings and land.

71. Mr. Marland asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the impact on the net income of the average cereal farm in the United Kingdom if rates were imposed on farm buildings and land.

Mr. Gummer: I refer my hon. Friends to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Crawley (Mr. Soames) earlier today.

Farmers (Marketing Aid)

42. Mr. Patrick McNair-Wilson asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will aid rural diversification by giving help and encouragement to farmers to market more of their own produce.

Mr. Gummer: The measures to encourage diversification, which my right hon. Friend announced on 9 February, will include help with marketing the products of ancillary farming businesses such as food processing. This will be in addition to the encouragement that is already given to farmers to market their primary produce through agricultural co-operatives, by the advice available from Food From Britain and grants under the agricultural and horticultural co-operation scheme.

Farmers (Capital Grants)

47. Mr. Hargreaves asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received seeking the restriction of capital grants to farmers in disadvantaged areas, young farmers and in respect of environmentally beneficial practices only.

74. Mr. Neale asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received seeking the restriction of capital grants to farmers in disadvantaged areas, young farmers and in respect of environmentally beneficial practices only.

Mr. Donald Thompson: We regularly receive suggestions on what items should be included in our capital grant schemes. In addition we consulted widely on the coverage of the agriculture improvement scheme introduced in 1985. This offers the highest rates of grant to less-favoured areas and to environmentally beneficial improvements. It also introduced special premiums for young farmers.

Agricultural Policy

50. Mr. Colvin asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any plans to publish a policy document for agriculture in 1987.

Mr. Gummer: As my right hon. Friend indicated in his statement on 9 February and in the answer he gave on that day to my hon. Friend the Member for Stafford (Mr. Cash) he, together with my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland, for Wales and for Northern Ireland, intends to do so next month.

Fishing Industry (Policy)

51. Mr. Pollock asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the new 10-year structural policy for the fishing industry recently agreed in the European Economic Community.

Mr. Gummer: The new Council Regulation, (EEC) 4028/86, provides the basis for the development and rationalisation of the Community's fishing fleet over the next 10 years and was one of a number of important measures adopted under the United Kingdom presidency.

Fisheries Departments are now discussing with the industry the measures to be introduced to cover the first five years of the structural policy, 1987-1991, with a particular view towards modernising the fleet and adjusting capacity. I recognise that the industry is anxious to know about the new schemes and I shall be making an announcement as soon as possible.

53. Mr. Wallace asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received about levels of national grant assistance to the fishing industry following agreement of the European Economic Community structural policy.

Mr. Gummer: I have received a number of representations about the levels of national grant for the construction and modernisation of fishing vessels which might be made available this year to complement assistance from Community funds. I hope shortly to be able to consult the main industry organisations on a possible new grant scheme.

EC (Food Sales)

52. Mr. Cunliffe asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what will be the estimated cost to the United Kingdom of the projected sale of surplus butter to the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Mr. Gummer: No sales have been finalised so far this year, although some are expected soon. The cost to the Community is the difference between the buying-in price and the release price, which is set by competitive tender, offset by savings in storage costs. The United Kingdom contributes to the Community budget as a whole, rather than to individual items, at a rate of about 20 per cent. abated by the Fontainebleau mechanism.

Green Pound

61. Mr. Colin Shepherd asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the prevailing differential between the green pound and the pound sterling.

Mr. Gummer: The difference between sterling's green rates and market rate against the ecu — the real monetary gap — is expressed as a percentage of the former.

The real monetary gaps applying in the United Kingdom in the week beginning 16 February are 24·746 per cent. for beef, 26·942 per cent. for pigmeat, 31·138 per cent. for dairy products and 32·944 per cent. for crops.

Animals (Exports)

64. Mr. Hardy asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will introduce legislation to extend to the export of cattle and sheep the regulations controlling the export of horses for slaughter.

Mr. Donald Thompson: No. The measures which restrict the export of horses to those intended for breeding, riding or reacreational use, by imposing a system of minimum values, would not be appropriate to the export of cattle and sheep.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

66. Mrs. Virginia Bottomley asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will consider increasing the number of, and funding for, environmentally sensitive areas.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My right hon. Friend announced on 9 February that a further £7 million per year will be made available for new ESAs from early 1988.

Farm Animal Welfare Visits

67. Mr. Spencer asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what programme his Department has for farm animal welfare visits.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Amongst their other duties staff from the state veterinary service visit farms to assess the degree of compliance with the welfare codes. The frequency and pattern of inspections is decided locally. Other ADAS staff are also asked to keep an eye on welfare when visiting farms.

Farm Animal Council (Animal Husbandry)

68. Mr. Greg Knight asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to implement the new Farm Animal Welfare Council proposals on animal husbandry.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I take it that my hon. Friend is referring to the Council's interim statement on welfare regulations published in November 1986.

We are obtaining the views of interested organisations on this and will be looking at them carefully before announcing our response.

Fishing Industry (Catch)

69. Sir Michael Shaw asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the impact of the total allowable catch for 1987 on the fishing industry.

Mr. Gummer: Because of the number of factors involved, it is not possible to make a detailed assessment of the impact on the United Kingdom fishing industry of the changes in the TAC's and quotas agreed for 1987. While opportunities for the whitefish stocks in the North sea are reduced, the effect of this is likely to be offset to some extent by an increase in the unit value of landings, as a consequence of reduced supplies. Quotas for the main pelagic fisheries and for a number of other whitefish stocks have been increased.

Farm Products (Prices)

72. Mr. Deakins asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the annual change in the prices paid to United Kingdom farmers for cereals, milk and beef between 1980-81 and the current marketing year.

Mr. Gummer: Information on the prices received at the first point of sale (on a calendar year basis) is set out in the annual review of agriculture White Papers for 1987 and earlier years, copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Toxic Residues

73. Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what further plans he has to monitor, review and report on toxic residues in agricultural produce in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My Department conducts a continuing programme of monitoring for toxic residues in agricultural produce under the auspices of the steering group on food surveillance. The programmes of its relevant working parties are regularly reviewed to take into account current issues. The results of this programme are assessed by independent advisory committees and regularly published in reports of the steering group on food surveillance.

Rhubarb

73. Mr. O'Brien asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any plans to monitor the import of rhubarb into the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: We have no specific plans to do so. However, my Department regularly monitors developments in markets for horticultural crops, including rhubarb.

Soft Fruit

77. Mr. Moynihan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the performance of the soft fruit sector of the horticultural industry in 1986.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Overall the soft fruit sector performed well in 1986, despite extremes of weather leading to a variable quality of some raspberry and strawberry crops. The value of output of soft fruit was about 8 per cent. higher than in previous years. It is particularly gratifying that growers of soft fruit for processing experienced a considerably better season than in most recent years.

Hormone Legislation

Mr. Dalyell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his latest discussions with European Economic Community Governments about policy on hormone legislation.

Mr. Donald Thompson: EC directives 81/602 EEC and 85/649 EEC require member states to prohibit the use of hormones in farm animals for all but a small number of specified uses. At its meeting in January the committee for veterinary medicinal products began its discussions under article 3 of 85/649 EEC on a list of products and conditions of use which may be permitted.

SCOTLAND

Regional Aid

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the total annual amount of regional aid paid to firms in Dundee in each year from 1976 to 1986; and if he will also express each of these figures at 1986 prices.

Mr. Lang: Total payments of regional selective assistance under section 7 of the Industrial Development Act 1982 to firms in Dundee city are set out in the table below:

Year	Payments at current prices (£ million)	Payments at constant (1986) prices (£ million)
1976-77	0·7	1·7
1977-78	0·9	1·9
1978-79	0·4	0·8
1979-80	0·9	1·5
1980-81	1·4	2·0

1983-84	2·2	2·4
1984-85	2·4	2·6
1985-86	2·0	2·1

Comprehensive information on payments of regional development grant on a local authority basis is not available. However, payments of RDG exceeding £25,000 to firms in the Dundee employment local office area are set out in the table below:

Year	Payments at current prices (£ million)	Payments at constant (1986) prices (£ million)
1976-77	0·7	1·7
1977-78	0·5	1·1

Job Clubs

Sir Russell Johnston asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will list the jobcentres in Scotland, indicating which of them operate the job club facility, which is promoted in the pamphlet, PL782, "Action for Jobs".

Mr. Lang: The information requested — as at 6 February 1987—is set out in the table below. Plans are in hand to increase the present total of 54 job clubs in Scotland to 110 within the next few months.

BBC Scotland (Police Raid)

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish in the Official Report the correspondence of 10 and 13 February between himself and the hon. Member for Glasgow, Garscadden, on the police operations at BBC Glasgow.

Mr. Rifkind: The terms of my reply of 12 (not 13) February to the hon. Member's letter of 10 February are as follows:

Scottish Office
Whitehall
London SW1

Donald Dewar Esq MP
House of Commons
London SW1A OAA

12 February 1987

Dear Donald

Thank you for your further letter of 10 February about whether there was Ministerial involvement in the police operation at the BBC's Glasgow offices.

I had no prior knowledge of the intention of the police to apply for a search warrant. After the warrant had been granted by the Court, on my arrival at the BBC's Glasgow offices on the evening of Friday 30 January—to take part with you and others in the recording of BBC Scotland's "Question Time" programme to be transmitted later that evening — I was informd for the first time by two Strathclyde Police officers, who had been assigned as a matter of routine to accompany me during my visit to Glasgow, that there was likely to be a police operation at the BBC premises the following day. I was given no details of the nature of that operation.

During the remainder of the weekend I received no further information nor did I or my Department communicate with the Police, the Lord Advocate, the Crown Office or any other Minister or Department on any matter relating to the investigation.

On the Monday morning I learned, for the first time, that Strathclyde Police, who were aware that you and I were to be at the BBC on Friday evening, were in touch earlier that day with one of my officials to say that a search warrant was being applied for and that if it were granted a police operation would follow. The police did not discuss the terms of any warrant with my officials.

My officials were in contact with the Prime Minister's Office on the morning of Monday 2 February but only to discuss which Minister might most appropriately answer the Private Notice Question were it to be allowed. On that morning also my officials were in contact with the Lord Advocate's officials about the PNQ.

As regards the point you raise in the final paragraph of your letter, I understand from Strathclyde Police that there is absolutely no truth in the report that appeared in the Glasgow Herald on 6 February.

Yours ever

Malcolm Rifkind

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has had from the National Union of Journalists over the police raid on BBC, Glasgow; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: I have received a letter dated 17 February from one branch of the union.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what information was made available to him as to why the police operation against BBC Scotland was postponed from Friday 30 January to Saturday 31 January.

Mr. Rifkind: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 16 February. I did not ask and was not told the reason for the timing of the police operation.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Scotland for what purpose Strathclyde police notified his office on Friday 30 January about the proposed police operation at BBC Scotland.

Mr. Rifkind: As a matter of courtesy, as it was known that I would be in the BBC building that evening.

Radiation (Dundee)

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when his Department expects to reply to the letter from Councillor Tom McLaughlin, environmental health convenor of Dundee district council, regarding monitoring radiation levels in Dundee during and after the radiation leak at Chernobyl.

Mr. Ancram: Shortly.

Archaeological Heritage

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the provision for the archaeological heritage in Scotland about which the hon. Member for Glasgow, Maryhill has written to him, following representations from the Council for British Archaeology, Scotland.

Mr. Ancram: My right hon. and learned Friend is considering the points made in the letter from the Council for British Archaeology Scotland enclosed with the hon. Member's letter to him of 14 February. He will be replying in due course.

Chiropodists

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many chiropodists are employed in each of the Scottish health board areas; and what were the corresponding figures for each year since 1979.

Mr. John MacKay: The information requested is shown in the table:

Manpower Services Commission Schemes

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the costs of each Manpower Services Commission scheme, and the numbers involved in (a) Scotland, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Greenock and Port Glasgow, respectively, in 1984-85, 1985-86 and 1986-87.

Mr. Lang: The costs and numbers involved in Manpower Services Commission schemes in Scotland for the financial years 1984-85 and 1985-86 were as shown in the following tables. For 1986-87, either estimates or the most recently obtainable figures are given as appropriate in each case. Corresponding information for Strathclyde and Greenock and Port Glasgow is not available.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list in the Official Report the project proposals for Manpower Services Commission schemes under the Manpower Services Commission's community programmes approved by the Renfrewshire, Dumbartonshire and Argyll area manpower board of the Manpower Services Commission in each of the last five years, the names of those bodies to whom awards were made in respect of the aforementioned project proposals and the amount of each of these awards.

Mr. Lang: The information requested is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Kestrel Marine Life, Dundee

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on his consideration of an application to include the Kestrel marine site, Dundee within the boundaries of the Dundee enterprise zone.

Mr. Lang: The Government have no plans to extend the Tayside enterprise zone.

Rape

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many men have been prosecuted for rape in the last five years in Scotland; how many have been convicted in each of these years; and, of these, how many have been sentenced to terms of imprisonment of (i) less than three years, (ii) between three and five years, (iii) between five and 10 years and (iv) over 10 years, respectively.

Mr. Rifkind: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Shettleston (Mr. Marshall) on 13 February 1987 at columns 385-86.

Dog Wardens

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will now take steps to introduce a statutory dog warden scheme in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: Existing legislation already enables local authorities to appoint dog wardens. Under the Dogs Act 1906, as amended by the Civic Government (Scotland) Act 1982, such wardens, where appointed, have the same powers as the police to seize, detain and dispose of stray dogs. There are at present no plans for further legislation on this matter.

PRIME MINISTER

EC Commission (Meeting)

Q113. Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on the outcome of her meeting with Mr. J. Delors of the European Economic Community Commission on 5 February.

The Prime Minister: My discussions with Mr. Delors concentrated on the financial situation in the Community, the reform of the common agricultural policy and on the reorganisation of the structural funds called for by the Single European Act. I emphasised that the main reason for the Community's serious financial problems was inadequate control over expenditure. I made clear that the Community's first priority should be to agree new and effective budgetary control arrangements. In particular there was a need for effective stabilising mechanisms to control Common Agricultural Policy expenditure.

Light Dues

Q116. Dr. Godman asked the Prime Minister what assessment Her Majesty's Government have made of the implications for the viability of the United Kingdom fishing industry of the proposed extension to larger fishing vessels of liability for light dues; what assessment has been made of the impact on the merchant fleet of the proposed 14 per cent. increase in dues; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: My right hon. Friend will be holding discussions shortly with the fishing industry about the implications of extending light dues liability to its larger vessels. Light dues are typically a small fraction of ships operating costs. Less than 10 per cent. of dues are paid by United Kingdom registered ships.

Government Achievements

Mr. Soames asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on the achievements of Her Majesty's Government since 1983.

The Prime Minister: Since the 1983 election, the inflation rate has remained low, and in recent months has been around the lowest level for 20 years. Gross domestic product has grown at an average annual rate of about 3 per cent., the United Kingdom is now in its sixth successive year of growth and GDP is at an all-time high. Since 1983, the United Kingdom has topped the European Community's growth league, reversing the position in the previous decade when we came bottom. Non-oil export volumes have risen by an average 8 per cent. a year and investment by an average of 4½ per cent. Manufacturing productivity has risen by over 4 per cent. a year and company profitability is at its highest level for over 20 years. Total employment has risen continuously since early 1983, the longest period of sustained employment growth for almost 30 years, and over 1 million new jobs have been created. The level of the United Kingdom's net overseas assets has almost doubled to £80 billion, yielding annual income approaching £5 billion a year.

The Government have continued to maintain sound public finances. Government programmes have provided better value for money. Public expenditure has been falling as a percentage of GDP since 1982-83 and is planned to fall further over the next three years. The public sector borrowing requirement in both 1985-86 and 1986-87 is likely to be lower as a percentage of GDP than in any year since 1971-72—with or without privatisation proceeds.

The Government have pursued a substantial programme of tax reform. Business taxation has been radically restructured: the United Kingdom now has one of the lowest rates of corporation tax of any industrialised country. For income tax payers, thresholds have been raised in real terms and the basic rate reduced. New schemes for tax relief have been introduced to promote wider share ownership and encourage charitable giving. Stamp duties have been reduced and restructured. Four taxes — the national insurance surcharge, development land tax, investment income surcharge and capital transfer tax on lifetime giving—have been abolished completely.

The programme of privatisation has continued to be highly successful. There have been 11 share sales since June 1983 including most recently the sale of British Airways. The privatisation of British Gas in December 1986 was the largest flotation ever in Europe or America and led to a further substantial increase in the number of people holding shares. The National Bus Company's programme to dispose of its subsidiaries is well under way. Preparations are well in hand for the privatisation of Rolls-Royce, Royal Ordnance, and BAA (formerly the British Airports Authority), and the Government have also announced their intention to privatise the water authorities in England and Wales in the next Parliament.

Further measures have been introduced to improve the operation of markets. Tax changes and the restructuring of national insurance contributions have increased incentives. Changes in employment legislation, the reduction in the powers of Wages Councils effected by the Wages Act 1986 and measures to increase labour mobility have improved the operation of the labour market. Regulations applying to a wide field of industry and finance have been removed entirely; the Building Societies Act 1986 gives societies new lending powers and permits the provision of other services. The small firms sector has been helped by a variety of schemes and the Government's programme of employment and training measures has been improved and extended. The Government have encouraged more competition in the professions.

Following a review in 1983 the Government have introduced a more cost effective and job related regional industrial policy. In 1986 British Steel returned to profitability for the first time in 10 years. The Government have supported a wide range of measures aimed at increasing the amount of research and development undertaken by industry including the Alvey programme in advanced information technology, the LINK programme which brings together academic and industrial researchers in collaborative projects, and the EUREKA initiative for collaborative research in Europe. The National Space Centre has been established.

Productivity per person in agriculture has continued to improve and has helped this sector to provide food to consumers at prices which have risen more slowly than the retail price index. The value of agricultural feed, food and drink exports has risen by an estimated 26 per cent. since 1983.

The task of tackling costly surpluses under the common agricultural policy has been considerably advanced by the agreement of the Agriculture Council in December 1986 during the United Kingdom's presidency of the Community, on reforms of the CAP milk and beef regimes and on an outline package of structural measures. The agreements in the milk sector to reduce Community production with compensation, and in the beef sector to restrict access to intervention whilst retaining the United Kingdom's beef variable premium, constitute the most important single contribution to the process of reform already begun with the agreements to curb over-production in the milk and wine sectors in 1984, and with successive reductions in CAP support prices in real terms in each year since 1983.

The Government have introduced grants to encourage farmers to diversify their sources of income. We have carried forward policies designed to ensure that landscape and conservation interests are maintained, and where possible enhanced, as farmers respond to change.

We secured in January 1983 a common fisheries policy on terms very favourable to the United Kingdom. Subsequent arrangements for the incorporation of Spain into the CFP have fully protected our fishermen's interests. Conservation, control and structural measures have been strengthened, particularly under the United Kingdom presidency of the Fisheries Council.

We have substantially increased the manpower and resources available to the police and have strengthened their powers to deal with public disorder and the controls on their use of firearms. An independent Crown prosecution service is now in operation throughout England and Wales. Measures have been taken to ensure that the terms of imprisonment served by violent offenders fully reflect society's abhorrence of their crimes. Government assistance to the victim support movement has been greatly expanded: £9 million will be provided over the next three financial years to help local schemes.

A wide range of measures are being taken to counter drug misuse. The Video Recordings Act has brought video nasties under control. Legislation has also been put through for data protection; to provide more rigorous control of animal experimentation; to provide a framework for the development of broadcasting by satellite and cable television; to set out a new framework for police powers, for providing safeguards for the citizen and for handling complaints against the police, in the Police and Criminal Evidence Act; and to control the possession and sale of alcohol in connection with football matches. The Government have played a major role in developing international co-operation in the fight against terrorism and has strengthened police powers under the Prevention of Terrorism Act.

The Government have continued to be active in strengthening safeguards against fraud and in ensuring that the probity of our financial institutions is maintained without undermining their competitiveness. The Insolvency Act 1985 increased the scope for disqualifying directors of companies which have gone into liquidation or receivership, and introduced a new liability of directors for wrongful trading. The Financial Services Act 1986 broadens the general regulatory framework within which people in financial institutions have to operate.

The Criminal Justice Bill provides for the establishment of a serious fraud office and other improvements in the investigation, prosecution and trial of fraud offences, based on the recommendations of the Roskill committee.

In education, the Government have introduced many major initiatives to raise educational standards. Many of those affecting the schools were set out in the White Paper "Better Schools" (Cmnd. 9649). We have embarked on a reform of the school curriculum to prepare pupils better for adult and working life. We have given financial support to promote technical and vocational education for 14 to 18-year-olds in schools and colleges and supported pilot programmes for improving the education of lower attaining pupils. We have introduced the GCSE based on national criteria. We are introducing the AS level to broaden A-level studies. We are developing records of achievement for all school leavers. The Education (No. 2) Act 1986 promotes the more effective management of maintained schools and teaching quality within them.

In higher education the number of home students has risen by about 49,000 since 1983 without loss of quality and with a higher proportion studying science and engineering, thanks partly to the Government's information technology initiative and engineering and technology programme. Greater cost-effectiveness has been achieved, especially in the polytechnics where unit costs have fallen substantially. The funding of universities now includes greater selectivity in the interests of concentrating research activity in the best centres.

In further education, development plans have been introduced with gains in relevance and efficiency. Course and qualification patterns continue to evolve, including the certificate of pre-vocational education, which the Government launched in 1983. The work of the Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education is leading to improvements in initial teacher training, and new specific grant support for in-service teacher training is being introduced in 1987-88. Education support grants are now well established.

The Government have revolutionised vocational education and training for young people through TVEI and two-year YTS. TVEI becomes a national scheme from autumn this year. YTS has given vocational training to over 1 million young people and already over 300,000 have entered two-year YTS. Every unemployed young person under the age of 18 is now guaranteed training leading to a recognised qualification: unemployment need no longer be an option for this group. We have recently announced a major new programme of quality training — the job training scheme — aimed particularly at long-term unemployed people aged under 25. We have established the National Council of Vocational Qualifications to ensure that in future there will be a clear system of relevant vocational qualifications. Through the restart programme, for the first time in this country, we are offering personal counselling and assistance to all long-term unemployed people.

The Government have encouraged new business, particularly through the expanded enterprise allowance scheme, which has helped nearly 200,000 unemployed people to start up in business.

We have continued the reforms which have transformed the industrial relations climate in this country. The Trade Union Act 1984 has promoted and protected democracy in trade union affairs.

In the Health Service, we have continued to develop services for patients. NHS spending has been increased to record levels — nearly £19 billion this year. More patients are being treated than ever before — 5·6 per cent. more in-patient cases in England alone in 1985 than in 1983, and 18·4 per cent. more day cases. We are investing in the largest sustained capital programme ever, costing over £1 billion in the current year. In England, over 400 schemes, each costing over £1 million, with a total value of about £3 billion, are at various stages of planning, design and construction.

There are more doctors and nurses working in hospitals and the community. Since April 1984, the first settlement from the Pay Review Body which this Government established, nurses' pay rates have gone up by just over 10 per cent. in real terms.

The drive for better management continues. Health authorities in England have achieved cash-releasing cost improvements worth over £240 million in the last two financial years, and plan further cash savings of some £150 million this year. A further £130 million is expected to be freed this year from sales of land which the National Health Service does not need.

We have also launched the first major reviews of primary care and community nursing since 1948.

In the social security field, the Government have protected and improved the real value of nearly all the major social security benefits. Expenditure on social security as a whole has never been higher—both in cash and real terms. For example, real spending on the long-term sick and disabled has risen by nearly £6 billion. We have also conducted a major review of the social security system and the Social Security Act 1986 will make the system easier to understand, target help more effectively on those who need it and improve work incentives. Choice will also be widened in pension provision.

In energy, domestic gas and electricity prices have gone down in real terms, gas by 7 per cent. and electricity by 10 per cent. Britain has launched a successful energy efficiency campaign with savings already stimulated of more than £500 million a year in the industrial and commercial sectors. Energy efficiency in the home is proceeding apace and the Government are helping to fund voluntary groups who insulate the homes of low-income families and pensioners. Over 300,000 such homes have been insulated.

Deep mined productivity of coal production is now 60 per cent. higher than it was during the last year of the Labour Government.

In local government, the Greater London council and metropolitan county councils were abolished without the chaos predicted in some quarters, and to the substantial benefit of ratepayers. Legislation has been passed to regulate local authority publicity activities. We are considering the response to consultation on the report of the Widdicombe committee on the conduct of local authority business. We have prevented extravagant authorities from using creative accounting to get more than their fair share of resources, either at the expense of other authorities or, ultimately, their ratepayers. The Rates Act is protecting ratepayers from huge increases in rates in the highest spending councils. The Abolition of Domestic Rates etc. (Scotland) Bill now before Parliament, provides for the abolition of domestic rates in Scotland starting at 1 April 1989. It has been confirmed that a Bill similarly to replace domestic rates in England and Wales will be introduced as soon as possible and not later than the first session of a new Parliament.

Between May 1983 and December 1986 there has been a net increase in the number of dwellings of about 660,000 through new building and conversion in England which has more than kept pace with the growth in the number of households over the period. Since May 1983 the number of owner-occupied dwellings has increased by about a further million and 63 per cent. of all dwellings are now owner-occupied. The discounts available on the sale of council houses and flats have been further increased to encourage tenants to exercise their right to buy.

The Government have encouraged greater diversity in the rented sector by assisting housing associations and private sector landlords. A new Estate Action team has helped local authorities with more than 120 schemes to tackle problems of rundown estates. A scheme of assistance has been provided to the owners of defective houses previously in the public sector.

The Government have continued to promote enterprise, improve the environment and encourage self-help in the inner cities. Five new urban development corporations have been announced in addition to those existing in London and Merseyside docklands. The urban programme, which supports some 12,000 inner city regeneration projects, has been concentrated on the areas of greatest need and potential, and its management improved. The derelict land reclamation programme has been increased substantially and directed towards commercial, industrial or housing development on urban land. Some 34,000 acres have been removed from the land register of unused or under-used public land. Enterprise zones have continued to attract substantial private investment. Powers have been taken to pay urban regeneration grant to support private sector development packages. The UK2000 initiative has been launched to promote environmental improvement. The Scottish development agency continues to be a major instrument of urban renewal in Scotland and both Scottish and Welsh development agencies continue to play a vital part in economic and environmental policies.

The Government have taken a wide range of steps to simplify and improve the planning system and to speed up its operation, without reducing necessary protection to the environment in town and country.

In transport, London Transport has been transferred from the GLC to London Regional Transport and targets set for better value for money. In its first full financial year under Government control, LRT very nearly achieved its target of halving subsidy for which the Government have allowed three years, while providing additional services to meet increasing demand. The subsidy to British Rail has been reduced by 25 per cent., targets set for a further 25 per cent. reduction in the current level of subsidy and the improvement of customer service, and major new investments approved. The deregulation of local bus services has seen service levels maintained and has stimulated innovation through competition while cutting subsidies. A number of National Bus Company subsidiaries have also been privatised. In England alone during this period the Government have invested £2 billion in the motorway and trunk road system; 110 major road schemes have been completed of which 40 are bypasses and relief roads. The Government are supporting 310 major local authority road schemes through transport supplementary grant, two thirds of which help bypass or relieve communities. Private investment in the Channel tunnel project has already begun even though the Bill has not yet completed its passage through Parliament.

Since 1983 receipts from sales of new town assets have totalled £900 million. Basildon development corporation was wound up on 1 April 1986 and the Government have announced proposed wind-up dates for each of the remaining six corporations. The finances of the corporations have also been put on a more satisfactory basis.

In defence, the capability of our armed forces has continued to be strengthened. The Government have played their full part in implementing NATO's 1979 decision to modernise intermediate range nuclear weapons. Increased efficiency is being pursued by the continuing transfer of resources from the support areas to the frontline, and by introducing increased competition in defence contracts and promoting collaboration with our international partners. A major reorganisation of the headquarters structure of the Ministry of Defence has been introduced.

In foreign policy we have maintained Britain's firm commitment to national defence and the NATO Alliance, and promoted closer European defence co-operation, notably through a revived Western European Union. At the same time we have worked vigorously for a more stable relationship between East and West and for balanced and verifiable reductions in nuclear and conventional weapons, and for a global ban on chemical weapons. British Ministers and representatives have been active in building up an East-West dialogue and in promoting the arms control process. We played a leading role in the Conference on Disarmament in Europe negotiations which were successfully concluded last autumn. At Camp David last November President Reagan and I agreed upon priorities for arms control after the Reykjavik Summit meeting.

Within the European Community we negotiated a favourable settlement of the longstanding budgetary dispute. We were instrumental in bringing about an agreement on amendments to the EC treaties which should improve Community decision-taking and hasten the creation within the Community of a genuinely free market for goods and services as well as giving for the first time a treaty basis to co-operation in the foreign policy field. The latest British presidency reached agreement on internal market measures and on significant reforms to the common agricultural policy. We have worked actively for maintenance of the world open trading system and the launch of a new round of multilateral trade negotiations.

We reached agreement with China about the future of Hong Kong. The Gibraltar border has been reopened, and negotiations started with Spain aimed at overcoming all our differences over the rock. We have stood by the people of the Falkland Islands.

We have at the United Nations and elsewhere supported the international rule of law and respect for human rights. With our Commonwealth and European partners we have worked towards ending apartheid in South Africa by peaceful means. We have worked successfully for financial and administrative reform in the United Nations and have promoted international co-operation to combat terrorism and drug-trafficking. We have maintained a substantial aid programme—totalling nearly £4,000 million since 1983. We have responded swiftly and generously to appeals for emergency aid to sub-Saharan Africa and bilaterally we have provided effective long-term assistance to some 120 developing countries.

Government Objectives

Mr. Soames asked the Prime Minister what are the objectives of Her Majesty's Government for the rest of this Parliament.

The Prime Minister: At home, we shall continue prudent and sound financial policies, designed to strengthen prospects for employment, involving a more flexible and competitive economy, which encourages initiative and enterprise. We shall aim to continue to keep public spending falling as a proportion of GDP, to keep public sector borrowing low and to reduce taxation. We will work for the still wider spread of wealth and ownership in our country, based upon the privatisation of industries, and an increase in individual home and share ownership.

We will help industry and commerce to increase the national production of wealth by creating the climate within which consumer choice and markets can properly operate. We will be active in ensuring that the rules by which markets are regulated are vigorously enforced.

We will use our legislation to protect householders and businesses from excessive rate demands and we will continue our efforts to ensure efficient and effective local government.

We will continue to promote private sector involvement in the regeneration of inner cities, and carry on our work to simplify and improve the planning system in the interests both of the economy and of the environment.

Through the Development Commission and in other ways, we will foster the diversification of rural economies in a way which protects the environment.

We will continue to promote consumer choice and efficiency through competition in the provision of transport services. We expect to privatise BAA (formerly the British Airports Authority) in the summer; we are proceeding with the third Dartford Crossing and legislation on the Channel tunnel project is currently before Parliament.

We shall continue to ensure that the increasing resources we are making available to the NHS go to improve the quality of service. We are launching a new drive to tackle hospital waiting lists and times. We shall continue the fight against AIDS, which will include the establishment of a new Health Education Authority, with powers to carry forward the public education campaign on AIDS.

Changes to the social security system will be implemented which will target help to those who most need it while improving incentives to work and widening individual choice in pension provisions.

We shall vigorously uphold the rule of law and fight crime, especially drug misuse and crimes of violence. The Criminal Justice Bill now before Parliament will improve the law on measures against fraud, on the sentencing of offenders, on compensation for victims and on confiscating the proceeds of crime.

We shall continue to work for a better educational system, by giving parents more say in the education of their children, by extending the training and vocational elements in teenage education, and by laying greater emphasis on higher standards.

We will press on with the implementation of our policies for a better school curriculum and examination system. We shall pursue the establishment of city technology colleges in urban areas and the extension throughout the country to 14-18 year olds of the technical and vocational education initiative.

In further and higher education we shall continue to increase opportunities for study, to put increasing emphasis on vocational education, especially in science and engineering, and to promote higher quality and greater efficiency.

In the energy field, our policies will promote the best use of our rich endowment of natural resources and scientific and innovative talent in a responsible, market-orientated environment.

We shall continue policies designed to promote employment and enterprise and to assist the unemployed back into work; to remove unnecessary constraints and burdens from the wealth and job creating sectors of the economy; and to encourage the spread of democratic procedures within trade unions.

We will continue to contribute to peace with freedom and justice in Europe by maintaining effective defences in co-operation with our NATO allies. We will ensure that Britain maintains an independent nuclear deterrent. We will continue to discharge our defence responsibilities and protect British interests outside the NATO area. We will maintain our drive to secure better value for money from the defence budget, particularly through increased competition and international collaboration in the procurement of equipment. We will work from strength for balanced and verifiable reductions in nuclear and conventional weapons as well as a global ban on chemical weapons. We also want greater co-operation and trust between East and West: I am looking forward to visiting Moscow at the end of March.

We shall promote the prosperity of the United Kingdom and that of its Allies and the developing countries by working to sustain and improve the world open trading system. We shall work with others to promote non-inflationary economic growth and the liberalisation of world trade both at the Venice economic summit and in the Uruguay round of negotiations under the general agreement on tariffs and trade.

Within the European Community we shall work for sound financing and strict budgetary discipline, further improvements in the common agricultural policy, a single market for goods and services and other policies where we can achieve more by co-operation in the Community than on our own. We shall seek to ensure that Europe plays its full part in international affairs, by working to improve Europe's competitive position in world trade and to achieve closer co-operation between the Twelve over foreign policy.

We shall continue to work for an effective United Nations Organisation. We wish to see human rights and the rule of law upheld internationally. We shall press for an end to the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan and Vietnamese aggression in Cambodia, so that both countries can regain their independence. With our European and Commonwealth partners we shall continue to promote peaceful dialogue in South Africa, as the most effective way of replacing the apartheid system by a form of government which commands the support of all South Africans and will ensure South Africa's future prosperity and stability. We shall work to promote peace in the Middle East and to lessen tensions in Central America. We shall continue to stand by the Falkland Islanders. We shall sustain our efforts to combat hunger, disease (particularly AIDS) and the scourges of international terrorism and drug trafficking.

European Community

Mr. Deakins asked the Prime Minister if she will publish a White Paper on the specific economic benefits accruing to the British people during United Kingdom membership of the European Economic Community.

The Prime Minister: No. Since November 1974 successive Governments have produced six-monthly White Papers on developments in the European Community.

10 Downing Street (Television Sets)

Mr. Deakins asked the Prime Minister, pursuant to her answer to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton (Mr. Kaufman) on 31 January, Official Report, column 569, if all the televisions used at No. 10 Downing street are for Government purposes only.

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply that I gave the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton (Mr. Kaufman) on 21 January 1987 at column 569.

Law Officers

Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister if she will set up an inquiry into the role and responsibilities in Government of the Law Officers.

The Prime Minister: No.

European Investment Bank

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Prime Minister if she will raise at the next meeting of the European Council the activities and operation of the European Investment Bank; and if she will seek a decision from the Council on whether the investments of member states in this organisation are to be treated as a commercial investment or a vehicle for the promotion of public investment.

The Prime Minister: I have no plans to raise this matter.

Engagements

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 19 February.

Mr. Greg Knight asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 19 February.

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 19 February.

Mr. Greenway asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 19 February.

Mr. Leigh asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 19 February.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with Ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House I shall be visiting Yorkshire later today.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Perivale Hospital

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will now reply to letters from the hon. Member for Ealing, North to the Minister for Health dated 6 January and 13 January concerning Perivale hospital; and if he will make a statement;

(2) when he expects to answer the question due for answer on 6 February relating to replies to letters from the hon. Member for Ealing, North of 6 January and 13 January concerning Perivale hospital; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I regret the delay in writing to my hon. Friend. I am urgently seeking a further report from the regional health authority.

Maternity Payments

Mr. Silkin asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Lewisham, Deptford, claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Lewisham, Deptford, are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

It is not possible to predict how many women in Newham, South will qualify for statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance from April 1987. However, it is estimated that in total some 230,000 women will qualify for statutory maternity pay and 84,000 for maternity allowance in 1987-88.

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Newham South claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Newham South are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Newham, South constituency is covered by the Department's offices at Canning Town, Plaistow and Woodgrange Park although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The numbers of claims received for maternity grant in each of the three local offices during the calendar year 1986 were as follows:

	Number
Canning Town	612
Plaistow	1,613
Woodgrange Park	1,848

It is not possible to predict how many women in Newham, South will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in (a) Islington, South and Finsbury and (b) Cambridge received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in (a) Islington, South and Finsbury and (b) Cambridge are expected to receive statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, the following numbers of claims to maternity allowance were made at the Department's offices which cover the above constituencies although the boundaries are not conterminous:

(a) Islington South and Finsbury

	Number
Hoxton	695
Finsbury Park	1,209
Westminster	[1]

[1] Claims for these offices are dealt with at Aldershot Out-Station. A total of 2,999 claims were dealt with at that office but this total includes claims proper to other offices.

(b) Cambridge

	Number
Cambridge	2,390

It is not possible to predict how many women in Islington, South and Finsbury and in Cambridge will qualify for statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance from April 1987. However, it is estimated that in total some 230,000 women will qualify for statutory maternity pay and 84,000 for maternity allowance in 1987-88.

Mr. Ron Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Edinburgh, Leith claimed maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Edinburgh, Leith are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Edinburgh, Leith constituency is covered by the Department's offices at Edinburgh City and Edinburgh North although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The numbers of claims received for maternity grant in each of the two local offices during the calendar year 1986 were as follows:

	Number
Edinburgh City	325
Edinburgh North	1,050

It is not possible to predict how many women in Edinburgh, Leith will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mr. Ron Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Edinburgh, Leith received maternity allowance in the past year for which figures are available; and how many women in Edinburgh, Leith are expected to receive statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 736 claims to maternity allowance were made at Edinburgh (North) and 839 claims at Edinburgh (City), the Department's offices which cover the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

It is not possible to predict how many women in Edinburgh, Leith will qualify for statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance from April 1987. However, it is estimated that in total some 230,000 women will qualify for statutory maternity pay and 84,000 for maternity allowance in 1987-88.

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley are expected to receive statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 272 claims to maternity allowance were made at Cumnock and 881 claims at Ayr, the Department's offices which cover the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

It is not possible to predict how many women in Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley will qualify for statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance from April 1987. However, it is estimated that in total some 230,000 women will qualify for statutory maternity pay and 84,000 for maternity allowance in 1987-88.

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested. The Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley constituency is covered by the Department's offices at Ayr and Cumnock although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The numbers of claims received for maternity grant in each of the two local offices during the calendar year 1986 were as follows:

	Number
Ayr	1,381
Cumnock	431

It is not possible to predict how many women in Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Ayr constituency claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Ayr constituency are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested. The Ayr constituency is covered by the Department's offices at Ayr and Kilmarnock although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The numbers of claims received for maternity grant in each of the two local offices during the calendar year 1986 were as follows:—

	Number
Ayr	1,381
Kilmarnock	1,460

It is not possible to predict how many women in the Ayr constituency will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Ayr constituency received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Ayr constituency are expected to receive statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 920 claims to maternity allowance were made at Kilmarnock and 881 claims at Ayr, the Depatment's offices which cover the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous. It is not possible to predict how many women in the Ayr constituency will qualify for statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance from April 1987. However, it is estimated that in total some 230,000 women will qualify for statutory maternity pay and 84,000 for maternity allowance in 1987-88.

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Bury St. Edmunds constituency received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Bury St. Edmunds constituency are expected to receive statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 1,527 claims to maternity allowance were made at Bury St. Edmunds, the Department's office which covers the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous. It is not possible to predict how many women in the Bury St. Edmunds constituency will qualify for statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance from April 1987. However, it is estimated that in total some 230,000 women will qualify for statutory maternity pay and 84,000 for maternity allowance in 1987-88.

Miss Maynard asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Sheffield, Brightside constituency claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Sheffield, Brightside constituency are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested. The Sheffield, Brightside constituency is covered by the Department's offices at Sheffield, North-East and Sheffield, North-West although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The numbers of claims received for maternity grant in each of the two local offices during the calendar year 1986 were as follows:

	Number
Sheffield, North East	1,579
Sheffield, North West	1,933

It is not possible to predict how many women in Sheffield, Brightside constituency will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Miss Maynard asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (i) how many women in Sheffield, Brightside constituency received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available and (ii) how many women in Sheffield, Brightside constituency are expected to receive statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 790 claims to maternity allowance were made at Sheffield, North-East and 1,142 claims at Sheffield, North-West, the Department's offices which cover the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous. It is not possible to predict how many women in the Sheffield, Brightside constituency will qualify for statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance from April 1987. However, it is estimated that in total some 230,000 women will qualify for statutory maternity pay and 84,000 for maternity allowance in 1987-88.

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in the Western Isles constituency claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in the Western Isles are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: The Western Isles constituency is covered by the Department's office at Stornoway. The number of claims received for maternity grant in Stornoway local office during the calendar year 1986 was 349. It is not possible to predict how many women in the Western Isles will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in the Western Isles constituency received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in the Western Isles are expected to qualify for statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 430 claims to maternity allowance were made at Stornoway, the Department's office which covers the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

It is not possible to predict how many women in the Western Isles constituency will qualify for statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance from April 1987. However, it is estimated that in total some 230,000 women will qualify for statutory maternity pay and 84,000 for maternity allowance in 1987-88.

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Leyton claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Leyton are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Leyton constituency is covered by the Department's offices at Leytonstone and Walthamstow although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The numbers of claims received for maternity grant in each of the two local offices during the calendar year 1986 were as follows:

	Number
Leytonstone	1,529
Walthamstow	1,901

It is not possible to predict how many women in Leyton will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many claims for maternity grants have been made in Dundee in each of the past two years.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested as the Department's local offices in Dundee cover areas outside Dundee. The numbers of claims received for maternity grant in each of the two local offices during the 1985 and 1986 calendar years were as follows:

	1985	1986
Dundee East	1,488	1,940
Dundee West	1,126	1,091

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many claims for maternity allowance have been made in Dundee in each of the past two years.

Mr. Major: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to him on 12 February at column 352 in respect of the number of claims to maternity allowance in the 12 months ending April 1986.

In the year to April 1985, 1,060 claims were made at Dundee, East and 837 at Dundee, West, the Department's offices which cover Dundee, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

Local Office (Camberwell)

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether the Camberwell Department of Health and Social Security office at Blenheim Grove meets normal civil service requirements with regard to the space available to house all the staff allocated to the office.

Mr. Lyell: The staff complement of the Camberwell local office is 135 and the space requirement using agreed standards is 1,269 sq m. The staff areas at Blenheim Grove amount to 666 sq m. In addition, the office occupies space in another building at Red Cross Way, SE1 where the staff area is 850 sq m. The total space occupied in the two buildings is, therefore, in excess of agreed space standards.

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps are being taken to locate larger premises in the area covered by the Blenheim Grove office for use as a local supplementary benefit office.

Mr. Lyell: The Property Services Agency has acquired the local Odeon cinema site for development where it plans to build two new local offices for the Department. The new offices will cover the area at present administered by the office at Blenheim Grove as well as areas from other neighbouring offices.

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what consideration has been given to using 72 Rye Lane, Peckham, as a temporary overflow office from the Camberwell Department of Health and Social Security office at Blenheim Grove.

Mr. Lyell: Rye Lane was used as outhousing for Camberwell office for 18 months to June 1986. Further use of these premises was not considered appropriate because of an inadequate ventilation system. The cost of improving the system would be uneconomical for a temporary occupation.

Ms Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what repair work has been carried out at the Department of Health and Social Security office in Blenheim Grove, Camberwell, since its closure on 18 August 1986:

Mr. Lyell: Following damage caused to the public caller area, the interview counters and protective screens have all been replaced. New seating has been installed. Security doors have been fitted in place of the existing internal doors adjacent to the caller section.

Ms Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what repair work will be carried out at the Department of Health and Social Security office in Blenheim Grove, Camberwell, by his Department over the next two years; and when the work will be carried out.

Mr. Lyell: No repair work is scheduled for the nest two years. Subject to the availability of funds, there are plans for major adaptations on the ground floor which will increase the public caller area and convert the staff area into an open plan office.

Ms Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many telephone lines are available for incoming calls at the Camberwell Department of Health and Social Security office in Blenheim Grove; and if he will publish details of the British Telecom survey presently being carried out into the demand for telephone lines at the office.

Mr. Lyell: The switchboard at the Blenheim Grove office is not open to receive incoming calls. Inquirers are advised by a prerecorded message to contact the Red Cross Way office where the majority of the Camberwell office staff are outhoused. At Red Cross Way there are eight lines available for incoming calls.

The survey that has been conducted by British Telecom is to assess the telephone service provided by the Red Cross Way office. The report is still awaited. When received, consideration will be given to placing a copy in the Library.

Organ Donors

Dr. Michael Clark asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what information he has received from the Lifeline Wales scheme about the expenditure involved in establishing its scheme for computerising organ donors;

(2) whether he will make a statement on the Lifeline Wales scheme which is partly funded by his Department for computerising organ donors and indicate whether he is considering extending it;

(3) whether he will consider a national computerised system for registering organ donors along the lines suggested by the Womens Gas Federation, a copy of which has been sent to him.

Mrs. Currie: Details of the Lifeline Wales scheme are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales, and it is his Department which is funding the project.

A national computer register is a possible way of increasing organ donation but we are not certain at the present time that the additional benefits would justify the considerable expense of establishing and maintaining it. We have asked to be kept informed of the effect of the Welsh scheme on the supply of donor organs in Wales and we will also be taking into account the effect of the local computer registers in Manchester and Glasgow.

Breast Cancer Screening

Mr. Michael Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to publish the Forrest report on breast cancer screening.

Mrs. Currie: The Forrest report on breast cancer screening has been sent to the printers and will be published shortly.

Mr. Michael Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the latest estimate of the cost of introducing a national breast screening service.

Mrs. Currie: The Forrest report on breast cancer screening includes an estimate of the cost of introducing a breast cancer screening service. However, it would be inappropriate for me to quote extracts from the report in advance of its publication.

Prescription Charges

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what is his Department's policy regarding issuing reminders for renewal of pre-payment certificates for National Health Service prescription charges; and what effect the present policy has had on the effective rate of renewal;

(2) what is his Department's policy with regard to late renewal of pre-payment certificates for National Health Service prescription charges and for re-imbursement regarding prescriptions dispensed during any intervening period.

Mr. Newton: Family practitioner committees have been asked to issue reminder letters about 14 days before certificates expire. However, the responsibility for ensuring that an application is made on time rests with the applicant and prescription charges are payable for any period not covered by a valid certificate. Information distinguishing between renewals and other applications is not collected.

Severe Weather Payments

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many persons received exceptionally severe weather payments in (a) Scotland, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Greenock and Port Glasgow in each of the categories of those persons entitled to such payments; what was the amount of money paid to each category; and what was the average payment made.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of exceptionally cold weather payments made to persons in each of the categories is not available.

Statistics are being maintained on the total number of exceptionally cold weather payments made, the amount of those payments and the number refused, and will be published in due course.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give an estimate of the numbers of persons in (a) Scotland, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Greenock and Port Glasgow in each of the categories of those persons entitled to claim exceptionally severe weather payments.

Mr. Major: The information requested is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Limited List Prescribing

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has yet reached a decision on the recommendations of the Advisory Committee on National Health Service drugs regarding the possible addition of mucodyne to the limited list of drugs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Perry Barr (Mr. Rooker) on 21 January at column 635.

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he last asked the Advisory Committee on the Limited List to re-examine adding to the list of permitted drugs (a) Frisium, (b) Actifed, (c) Phensedyl, (d) Dimotapp and (e) Triominic; and what recent representations he has received about these five medicines.

Mr. Newton: The Advisory Committee on National Health Service Drugs reviewed the position of Dimotapp in July 1985, Frisium in September 1985 and Actifed in January 1986. We accepted the advice of the committee that there should be no change in the status of these drugs under the selected list scheme. No representations have been received about Phensedyl and Triominic but recent, further, representations about Dimotapp are under consideration.

Claims (Stretford)

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the average time taken for decisions on claims at Social Security offices serving the Stretford constituency; and if he will publish comparative figures for each year from 1979.

Mr. Lyell: Figures are not available for the period before the statistical year which ended in April 1984.

Three of the Department's local offices serve the Stretford constituency, Chorlton, Rusholme and Sale, but their boundaries ar not conterminous with the constituency. Details of the average number of days taken to deal with claims to the benefits listed below are as follows:

Benefit	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86	1986-87[3]
(a) Chorlton
Maternity	5 (See note[1])	20	11	11
Sickness/Invalidity (See note[2])	6	12	6	7
Supplementary	5	5	9	10
(b) Rusholme
Maternity	8 (See note[1])	14	9	15
Sickness/Invalidity (See note[2])	10	11	9	14
Supplementary	10	8	11	10
(c) Sale
Maternity	6 (See note[1])	19	16	12
Sickness/Invalidity (See note[2])	8	14	12	11
Supplementary	6	4	6	6

[1] Includes non-contributory maternity grant. The information given for other years relates to maternity allowance claims only.
[2] Separate figures not available.
[3] To 13 January.

Benefits

Mr. Winnick asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the number and percentage of those of working age in receipt of supplementary benefit in the (a) west midlands region, (b) in the black country area of the west midlands and (c) the borough of Walsall in May 1979 and at present.

Mr. Lyell: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Allen McKay asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the number of persons in receipt of supplementary benefit in (a) the Barnsley area and (b) Barnsley, West area for the year 1986.

Mr. Lyell: Barnsley is covered by the Department's local offices at Barnsley, East and Barnsley, West, but their boundaries are not conterminous with those of the town of Barnsley. The total numbers of people receiving supplementary benefit from these offices and from Barnsley, West alone, on 10 December 1986 were:

	Number
Barnsley	19,387
Barnsley, West	8,284

Source: 100 per cent. count of cases in action.

Hospital (Eastbourne)

Mr. Gow asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects phase two of the district general hospital, Eastbourne to be completed and operational; and what is the estimated total cost of phase two.

Mrs. Currie: I understand from the South East Thames regional health authority that phase two of the district general hospital, Eastbourne is expected to be completed on 31 December 1988 and operational in April 1990 at an estimated total cost (including fees and equipment) of £16 million.

GPs (Patient Lists)

Mr. Gow asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what proposals he has to seek to improve the accuracy of the lists of patients of general practitioners.

Mr. Newton: Family practitioner committees are required to maintain up-to-date lists of patients for each doctor on their medical lists. The accuracy of this informatin is improving significantly as a result of using computers to maintain FPC records. A programme of computerisation is under way and is due to be completed by March 1988.

Psittacosis

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the number of deaths in the last five years from psittacosis; if there are any plans to include psittacosis in the list of notifiable diseases; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: Deaths recorded by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys as attributable to this disease were as follows:

1981	0
1982	1
1983	1
1984	0
1985	0
1986	[1]

[1] Not yet available (provisionally 2 in first 6 months).

There are no plans to make psittacosis a notifiable disease nationally.

Free Food for the Needy

Mr. Colvin asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will take steps to permit the endorsement of pension books with records of receipts by pensioners of free food under the Free Food for the Needy scheme.

Mr. Major: I understand that some of the organisations distributing food under the European Community scheme sponsored by my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food have been marking pension order books to show the receipt of food by pensioners and others. Although record-keeping by the food-distributing bodies is a matter for themselves, we cannot support the marking of pension books. The endorsement of pension books is not required for any social security purpose and may, in some circumstances, prejudice the encashment of these books.

Meningitis

Mr. Aspinwall asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps are being taken to discover the continuing high incidence of bacterial and viral meningitis in certain localities; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 16 February 1987, c. 510]: Acute meningitis in its various forms is a notifiable disease within the terms of the Public Health (Control of Diseases) Act 1984. The incidence of the disease is therefore monitored continuously. In addition, the Department is supporting a research project at Stonehouse to measure the incidence of carriers in the population there.

Cervical Cancer

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Social Services to what factors he attributes the increase in the combined registrations for malignant neoplasm of cervix uteri and carcinoma-in-situ of cervix uteri among women under 35 years of age.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 18 February 1987]: The reasons underlying changes in the incidence of cervical cancer in any age group are not fully understood. The latest medical and epidemiological information and ideas are regularly reviewed by the expert and independent Committee on Gynaecological Cytology. The Government are deeply committed to reducing deaths from cervical cancer among women of all ages and have taken urgent steps to improve the effectiveness of the screening programme.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Personal Incomes

Mr. Forman asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report data from the most recent survey of personal incomes on (a) total income, (b) total deductions, (c) total income tax, (d) total tax units and (e) total tax units paying tax for each country in the United Kingdom and each standard region in England.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The latest available information is for 1984-85 and is given in the table. As with most published information from the survey of personal incomes, the information is confined to tax units with income above the pay-as-you-earn threshold (£2,000 in 1984-85). Coverage of the survey is incomplete below this level.

	Total income £ million	Total deductions[1] £ million	Total income tax[2] £ million	No. of tax units Thousands	No. of tax-paying units Thousands
United Kingdom:	191,000	1,210	37,300	21,900	20,500
England	163,000	1,100	32,100	18,600	17,400
Wales	7,650	49	1,380	961	875
Scotland	16,600	38	3,130	1,900	1,770
Northern Ireland	3,790	24	702	467	439

[1] Deductions do not include relief on mortgage interest given at source.
[2] Income tax liabilities have been calculated without deduction for reliefs given at source at basic rate, but after allowance for relief due in excess of basic rate.

Committee of Public Accounts (Recommendations)

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will list those recommendations of the Committee of Public Accounts since 1983 affecting his Department which have been implemented.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I refer the hon. Member to the Treasury minutes published in response to the relevant PAC reports: Cmnd. 9178, 9325, 9368, 9452, 9755, 9859 and 9917. The Committee, on which the hon. Member serves, monitors departmental progress with accepted recommendations.

Privatised Industries (Value)

Sir Peter Hordern asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the value of privatised industries (a) at privatisation and (b) at privatisation uprated by the gross domestic product deflator.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The information for privatisation proceeds in each financial year and the figures adjusted to 1985-86 prices using the GDP deflator are as follows:

Year	Privatisation proceeds £ million	Privatisation proceeds (1985-86 prices) £ million
1979-80	370	597
1980-81	405	551
1981-82	493	611
1982-83	488	564
1983-84	1,142	1,262
1984-85	2,132	2,260
1985-86	2,702	2,702

The central estimate for the current year is £4·75 billion in cash terms, but it is too soon to know the exact outcome.

Industrial Buildings Allowance

Mr. Lawler asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer during the last year of operation, what was the cost of the industrial buildings allowance scheme for buildings of less than 1,000 and 1,500 square feet.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The small workshops allowance scheme expired on 26 March 1985. During the last two years of operation, the allowance was available only for workshops of up to 1,250 sq. ft. Detailed statistics are not available, but it is estimated that the cost of the full allowance in respect of 1984-85 was about £5 million.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer why he has been unable to include in the public expenditure White Paper manpower projections for local government, the National Health Service and nationalised industries; and if he will take steps to ensure that such forecasts can be included in next year's public expenditure White Paper.

Mr. MacGregor: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer that I gave him on 11 February at column 233.

The Government do not directly control manpower in local government, the National Health Service or nationalised industries and can provide projections of manpower only where they exercise direct responsibility.

Taxation

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the effect on the income of a family of four on average earnings of the changes in the level of income tax and value added tax, respectively, since 1979.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Figures for 1978-79 and 1986-87 are shown in the table.

	1978-79 £/week	1986-87 £/week
Average earnings	92·80	213·40
Income tax net of child benefit	13·32	27·36
VAT	2·42	10·22

The figures are for a family on male average earnings, with wife not working and with two children under 11. The level of average earnings in 1986-87 is illustrative and assumes 7·5 per cent. growth on 1985-86. Figures for income tax alone are not strictly comparable since 1978-79 figures are affected by child tax allowances. For information, income tax was £18·46 in 1978-79 and £41·50 in 1986-87. The estimates of VAT are derived from the 1985 family expenditure survey.

Public Sector Expenditure

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to ensure improved value for money in public sector expenditure.

Mr. MacGregor: In the annual review of public spending we look not only at the money spent but also at what is being achieved and how to get better value for the money. We use reviews and scrutinies to look in depth at particular areas; measures and targets for output and performance to set out in advance what a programme is expected to achieve, by when and at what cost, and better financial management in departments for better choices in the day to day management of programmes.

Earnings (Reductions)

Mr. Meacher asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the proportion of gross income paid in income tax, national insurance contributions and value added tax by a married man with a non-earning wife and two children at half, one, one and a half, two, three, five and 10 times national average earnings; and what were the comparable figures in 1979.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The available figures for 1978-79 and 1986-87 are in the table. VAT payments cannot reliably be estimated at 50 per cent. or above 150 per cent. of average earnings.

Tax and national insurance contribution as a percentage of gross earnings for a married man with a non-earning wife and two children

Multiple of average earnings	1978-79	1986-87
50 per cent.
Income tax less child benefit	−4·1	−3·4
National insurance contribution	6·5	9·0
100 per cent.
Income tax less child benefit	14·4	12·8
National insurance contribution	6·5	9·0
Value added tax	2·6	4·8
150 per cent.
Income tax less child benefit	20·6	18·2
National insurance contribution	5·6	8·0
Value added tax	2·7	5·2
200 per cent.
Income tax less child benefit	23·7	21·6
National insurance contribution	4·2	6·0
300 per cent.
Income tax less child benefit	32·0	29·8
National insurance contribution	2·8	4·0
500 per cent.
Income tax less child benefit	47·1	40·5
National insurance contribution	1·7	2·4
1,000 per cent.
Income tax less child benefit	64·8	50·2
National insurance contribution	0·8	1·2

Note:

Average earnings are taken to be the average gross weekly earnings of full-time males on adult rates with pay unaffected by absence. The figure for 1986-87 is illustrative and assumes 7½ per cent. growth on 1985-86. The estimates of value added tax are derived from the 1985 Family Expenditure Survey. The figures for income tax are shown net of child benefit: figures for income tax alone would not be comparable since 1978-79 figures are affected by child tax allowances.

Imports

Mr. Meacher asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the marginal propensity to import for each additional increment of consumer demand for each year since 1979.

Mr. MacGregor: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

EC Rebate

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the corrected rebate for the European Economic Community payable in respect of 1986 contributions; and when he expects to receive it.

Mr. Brooke: The latest estimate of the United Kingdom's abatement in respect of 1986 of £1,338 million (2020 mecu) is published in table 3.3.1 of the "Public Expenditure" White Paper 1987-8 (Cm 56-II). We expect to receive 1,633 mecu (£1,080 million) in the main budget for 1987 and the balance no later than the main budget for 1988.

Note: figures quoted at PEWP rate of £1 = 1.51 ecus.

European Investment Bank

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer why he included contributions to the European Investment Bank within the amounts of the United Kingdom's contribution to the Community in the public expenditure Blue Paper; if this has been the traditional practice of Her Majesty's Government; if such contributions rank for calculation of United Kingdom abatement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: It is the established practice to include contributions to the European Investment Bank in the public expenditure White Paper under the heading "net payments to Community institutions" because the EIB is a Community organisation set up under the Treaty of Rome. Since the EIB's expenditure and revenue do not form part of the Community budget, our contributions to the EIB are not included in the White Paper figures for our net contribution to the Community budget. Nor do they rank for calculation of the United Kingdom abatement under the Fontainebleau agreement.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the total sum which has been subscribed to the European Investment Bank by the United Kingdom since 1973; and what dividends have been received from this investment during those years.

Mr. Brooke: The subscribed capital of the European Investment Bank is 28,800 million ecus (at current exchange rates, about £21,429 million). The United Kingdom share of this is 5,509 million ecus (about £4,099 million). Only a small part of subscribed capital is actually paid in. Since 1973, United Kingdom payments have been £207.4 million.

Upon joining the EIB, the United Kingdom also paid a contribution of £20.1 million to the EIB reserves. Further, there is in progress at the moment a small redistribution of the reserves of the EIB resulting from a decision in 1985 that Italy should have the same subscribed capital as Germany, France and the United Kingdom; so far this has resulted in a rebate to the United Kingdom of some £4.4 million. The EIB does not pay dividends.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the total sum which has been lent by the European investment bank since 1973; and what is the largest single loan offered for a project during the period.

Mr. Brooke: In the years 1973 to 1986, European Investment Bank own resources loans and guarantees totalled 44,016·5 million ecus. Using average £/ecu exchange rates for each of the years, this was approximately equivalent to £26,611 million. Of this total, 39,814·5 million ecus was for loans inside the Community, including loans in the United Kingdom totalling 7,957·0 million ecus (approximately equivalent to £4,842 million).

The EIB has lent for many large projects in the Community. Examples of large loans disbursed over a number of years include:

(i) 1,952 million ecus for the European Gas Network (at current exchange rates roughly £1,450 million.)
(ii) a billion ecus to the South of Scotland Electricity Board for development of its electricity network (at current exchange rates roughly £740 million).
(iii) a billion ecus to Electricite de France.

Maintenance Payments

Mr. Favell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will state the cost of the revenue forgone of allowing court maintenance payments to children against tax during the last fiscal year.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 17 February 1987, c. 544]: I regret that the information requested is not available. However, the cost of taxing maintenance payments to both children and former spouses as the income of the recipient rather than of the payer is estimated to be about £100 million in 1986-87.

Government Trading Fund

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report a table updating the reply of 25 October 1984, columns 678-9, on the numbers of employees in Government trading funds; if he will additionally provide comparable information on the Royal dockyards, Ordnance Survey and the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority.

Mr. McGregor [pursuant to his reply, 17 February 1987, c. 545]: The information is as follows:

Civil Service Trading Funds (Staff in Post, 1 April)

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Ulyana Germanyuk

Sir Peter Blaker asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations Her Majesty's Government have made to the Soviet authorities, under the Helsinki declaration of 1975, concerning the imprisonment in Kharkov of Ulyana Germanyuk.

Mr. Renton: We take every suitable opportunity to raise human rights issues with the Soviet authorities. I raised the plight of religious believers in my talks in Moscow in January. We shall continue to press for an end to the unjustifiable persecution of Soviet Christians, and for the release of those who are imprisoned.

Non-Self-governing Territories

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any plans to seek to amend article 73 of the United Nations charter to provide for a right for self-determination for non-self-governing territories.

Mr. Eggar: No. Article 73 of the United Nations charter already provides that the interests of the inhabitants of non-self-governing territories are paramount, and for the development of their free political institutions. In addition, the United Kingdom and numerous other states are party to either the international covenant on civil and political rights or the international covenant on economic, social and cultural rights drawn up by the United Nations, each of which states in its article 1 that "All peoples have the right of self-determination".

Article 1 further requires states administering non-self-governing territories to promote the realisation of the right of self-determination.

Palestine Refugees (Lebanon)

Mr. Winnick asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps Her Majesty's Government are taking through international organisations to assist Palestinians in the refugee camps in the Lebanon.

Mr. Renton: Together with our European partners and other members of the Security Council we have urged that relief agencies should carry out their vital humanitarian work unhindered. We are already contributing to ICRC and UNRWA and are ready to consider urgently any further requests for emergency aid.

Hawk Aircraft

Mr. Terry Davis asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has taken any steps to ensure that Hawk aircraft supplied by the United Kingdom are not used by the Indonesian Government in East Timor.

Mr. Renton: The Hawk aircraft were supplied for Indonesia's legitimate training and defence needs. After delivery we do not monitor on a regular basis the use which a purchaser makes of such equipment. It would not be practicable to do so. However, we have no evidence to suggest that Hawk aircraft have been used in East Timor.

Diplomatic Immunity

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if, pursuant to his answer of 11 February, Offical Report, column 231, he will list the country of origin of the 11 diplomats in respect of whom waivers have been requested;

(2) if he will list all the countries of origin of diplomats or their families, and offences alleged, in respect of which Her Majesty's Government have requested a waiver of diplomatic immunity in each year since 1982.

Mr. Eggar: It has not been our practice to identify countries of origin when giving statistics about reported criminal offences by diplomats.

Hong Kong

Mr. Lilley asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the annual report on Hong Kong will be laid before Parliament.

Mr. Renton: I am laying the annual report on Hong Kong before Parliament today. It will be published on 20 February.

Overseas Students

Sir Anthony Kershaw asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards overseas students in the light of the document published by the Overseas Students Trust, a copy of which has been sent to him.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: On 9 June 1982 my predecessor welcomed the Overseas Students Trust's major report on overseas student policy. The Government now welcome this follow-up report as another constructive contribution to the development of policy in this important sector.

I note that the report fully supports the general lines of the Government's policy to welcome overseas students and to provide awards for a wide range of selected candidates. The report will now be carefully considered in the interdepartmental group on overseas student matters, and at the forthcoming round table meeting on overseas student affairs. This latter body involves interested individuals and organisations as well as Government Departments, and will be chaired by my hon. Friend the Member for Buckingham (Mr. Walden) the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Education and Science.

Strategic Defence Initiative

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the United States of America about the implications for continued United Kingdom participation in the strategic defence initiative of Her Majesty's Government's interpretation of those parts of the anti-ballistic missile treaty dealing with the development, testing and deployment of anti-ballistic missile systems or components; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to the right hon. Member for Islwyn (Mr. Kinnock) on 19 February at column 1054.

United Nations

Mr. Proctor asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the total United Kingdom contribution to the United Nations and all its related agencies for the most recent 12 months for which figures are available, and for the preceding 12 months; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The total United Kingdom contributions to the United Nations and its agencies in 1986 was £132,760,885. The equivalent amount in 1985 was £155,219,130. The fall in value of the dollar in which many budgets are assessed is in large part responsible for the difference.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Student Grants

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the numbers of students in receipt of a maximum grant, part grant and minimum grant, respectively, for each year since 1978-79 to the latest date for which figures are available, expressing these figures both in actual (absolute), and percentage terms.

Mr. Walden: The information is as follows:

All students with a mandatory or full value discretionary award[1]

England and Wales — Academic years

Further Education

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many pupils remained in education after (a) 16 years, and (b) 17 years, but under 19 years, in each local education authority in England at the latest date for which figures are available; and what was the amount granted in discretionary awards by each local education authority in that year.

Mrs. Rumbold: The table provides expenditure figures on lesser value discretionary awards, but does not include expenditure in support of school pupils. Expenditure information is not collected by students' age, but practically all lesser value award holders will fall within the 16-18 age group. The student numbers are given for 16 and 17-year-olds in full-time education at school and in non-advanced further education. Figures for 17 and 18-year-olds together are not readily available.

Training (Expenditure)

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what discussions have taken place between officials of his Department and the Manpower Services Commission on increasing provision of adult training courses at colleges of further education in 1987-88 and beyond; what account has been taken in such discussions of the fees charged by colleges of further education in relation to fees at Manpower Services Commission skillcentres; what information is available to his Department on the comparative value for money offered by colleges of further education in providing such courses; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: Officials from my Department and the Manpower Services Commission are currently engaged in discussions with the local authority associations for England and Wales about the level of fees to be charged for MSC funded adult training courses provided by colleges of further education in the 1987-88 academic year. The commissioning of provision by the MSC and the account it takes of the comparative costs of college courses and those provided by the commission's skills training agency are matters for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Employment.

Schools (Capital Expenditure)

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science, further to his reply to the hon. Member for Yeovil on 16 February, Official Report, column 443, concerning local education authorities' allocations of prescribed capital expenditure on schools for 1987-88, when the formula used in such allocations was last revised or updated; if he will place copies of the current formula in the Library; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: The formula has been in use in broadly the same form since the 1981-82 allocations. It involves the distribution of resources in part pro rata to those elements of LEAs' planned schools expenditure which are not allowed for elsewhere in the allocations methodology; and in part pro rata to the incidence of substandard school accommodation in each authority's area.

Further and Higher Education (Capital Expenditure)

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) further to his reply to the hon. Member for Yeovil on 16 February, Official Report, column 443, concerning local education authorities' allocations of prescribed capital expenditure on further and higher education for 1987-88, if he will publish a table showing for each local education authority a breakdown of capital allocation into (a) committed expenditure, (b) expenditure on tertiary projects arising from statutory proposals to remove surplus places, (c) expenditure on provision of computers and technical equipment and (d) other expenditure; and if he will make a statement;

(2) further to his reply to the hon. Member for Yeovil on 16 February, Official Report, column 443, concerning local education authorities' allocations of prescribed capital expenditure on schools for 1987-88, if he will publish a table showing for each local education authority a breakdown of capital allocation into (a) committed expenditure, (b) expenditure on projects required to meet basic need, (c) expenditure required in connection with the removal of surplus school places, and (d) other expenditure; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: No. Local authorities receive block allocations in respect of prescribed capital expenditure which they are free to use in accordance with their own priorities.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what analyses are available to his Department of expenditure on (a) education support grants, (b) technical and vocational education initiative, (c) in-service training (INSET); if he will publish an analysis of expenditure on each such programme in each of the last three years showing (i) the amount of grant given for new projects; (ii) the proportion of total expenditure on such projects calculated to be provided by the grant; (iii) the amount of grant given for continuation of existing projects; (iv) the proportion of total expenditure on existing projects in that year calculated to be provided by the grant; (v) the total outturn expenditure on all grant-related projects, including expenditure from other sources; (vi) the overall proportion of such outturn expenditure provided by the grant; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold [pursuant to her reply, 18 February 1987]: The available information is given in the table. All the figures are based on the amount of grant paid out in each financial year.

ENERGY

British Nuclear Fuels

Mr. Corrie asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement about the financial support given to British Nuclear Fuels plc for centrifuge collaboration.

Mr. Goodlad: My Department has been considering with BNFL the terms of the centrifuge agreement reached between the Department of Trade and Industry and BNFL which was announced to the House on 24 July 1973 at columns 385-6. Under the terms of the agreement, the Government provided £47·8 million in financial support to BNFL for the collaboration with the Netherlands and West Germany on exploitation of the gas centrifuge process for enriching uranium. The agreement provided for the grant to be repaid out of profits earned from subsequent commercial exploitation of the centrifuge process and for the Department to take a continuing share of the profits for a further period. Such payments would be made annually, once profits materialised, until 2002-03. It has now been agreed that these payments should be commuted into a single lump sum. The amount agreed is £47·5 million; it will be paid shortly and brought to account as a Consolidated Fund extra receipt on class VI, vote 2.

Disused Offshore Platforms

Mr. Proctor asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the recent report of the International Maritime Organisation working group on removal of disused offshore platforms.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: I have today arranged for copies of the report to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Power Stations

Mr. Barron asked the Secretary of State for Energy what applications he has received from the Central Electricity Generating Board and the South of Scotland Electricity Board for coal-fired power stations in the next five years, showing the sites and capacities.

Mr. Lang: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. and learned Friend has received no such applications.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Ten-minute Rule Bills

Mr. McLoughlin asked the Lord Privy Seal how many ten-minute rule Bills have been promoted over the last 20 years; and how many of these have reached the statute book; and if he will publish a table showing the relevant numbers in each year.

Mr. Biffen: Following is the information:

TRANSPORT

Search and Rescue Helicopter Service

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) when he last discussed the question of locating a helicopter on the west coast of Scotland for search and rescue work with the United Kingdom Search and Rescue Committee; and what was the result of these discussions;

(2) what further progress he has made in setting a date for locating a helicopter on the west coast of Scotland for search and rescue work; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: We have not discussed Search and Rescue helicopter coverage for north-west Scotland with the United Kingdom Search and Rescue Committee as a body but receive regular reports from its chairman.

Tendering action is in hand. The precise date on which a search and rescue helicopter will be provided for north-west Scotland will depend on consideration of the responses to invitations. It will, of course, be as soon as possible.

Weighbridges

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the locations of the five weighbridges in the west midlands; and how many days each has (a) been used and (b) not been available for use since 30 June 1986.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The five weighbridges provided in the west midland traffic area are located at A449 Warndon, M5 Quinton, A45 Dunchurch, A5 Wall and M6 Doxey. West midland traffic examiners have carried out 121 vehicle weight checks at these weighbridge sites since July 1986. A further 26 weigh checks have been held using other public or private weighbridges. All of the Department's weighbridges were in operation except for the A5 Wall site, which was out of operation for a total of 16 days in September and November, and the A45 Dunchurch site, which has been out of operation since mid-November and where remedial work is in hand.

Local authority trading standards staff and the police also use the Department's weighbridge sites but figures for how often the west midland sites have been used by these other enforcement agencies are not available.

Coaches (Speed Governors)

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he intends to take action to require the fitting of speed governors to coaches.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Work on a British standard for speed limiters is almost complete. We expect to be able to consult interested parties on a regulation based on the standard within the next two months.

British Airways

Mr. Bill Walker asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will issue guidelines to the Civil Aviation Authority following the privatisation of British Airways, with a view to ensuring free and fair competition in British civil aviation.

Mr. Michael Spicer: It remains one of the main objectives of the Government's airline policy to ensure adequate safeguards against anti-competitive or predatory behaviour. At my right hon. Friend's request the CAA is currently considering what information it needs to monitor airlines' activities. He has no power, however, to issue guidelines to the CAA and the authority must in any case be bound by its duties under the Civil Aviation Act 1982. But as the 1984 White Paper "Airline Competition Policy" (Cmnd. 9366) made clear, the Government are satisfied that the authority's existing powers are adequate in this respect.

Vehicle Excise Duty

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Transport what was the total revenue received in respect of road fund licences in 1985-86 for both private and commercial vehicles.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Vehicle excise duty collected in the United Kingdom in 1985-86 on private and goods vehicles amounted to £2,384 million, of which £1,936 million related to private and light goods vehicles up to 1,525 kgs, and £448 million to goods vehicles above that weight.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Transport what was the cost of collection of road fund licences for private and commercial vehicles in 1985-86.

Mr. Michael Spicer: A separate figure for the cost of collection of vehicle excise duty is not available. The combined cost of collecting VED and registering vehicles in the United Kingdom in 1985-86 was £94 million.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will estimate the level of evasion of road fund licences in 1985-86 as a percentage of vehicles on the road.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The latest estimates of VED evasion in Great Britain are based on a survey undertaken in June 1984. Some 5 per cent. of the vehicles then in use on the roads were estimated to be unlicensed. The gross loss of revenue from evasion was assessed at about 4 per cent., equivalent to some £99 million in 1985-86 excluding recoveries from enforcement. No recent Northern Ireland estimates are available.

NORTHERN IRELAND

European Regional Development Fund

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what grants have been allocated to Northern Ireland from the European regional development fund during each year since its inception; how many of these allocations have been decommitted each year; and for what reasons.

Mr. Viggers The number and value of commitments to Northern Ireland from the European regional development fund and of decommitments during each year since the Fund's inception are contained in the table below. Commitments on industry projects have been decommitted either in full or in part because of failure to achieve job creation targets, failure to complete an investment as envisaged when commitment was sought or total failure of the company. Decommitments on infrastructure projects generally arise through overestimates of expenditure and consequent over-commitment or failure to proceed with projects as originally envisaged.

EMPLOYMENT

Petroleum Products and Explosive Substances (Licence Fees)

Mr. Beith asked the Paymaster General (1) if he will list the fees charged for licences to store petroleum products; if he will indicate the proportion of those fees which relate to the time of the police or fire service; and if he will publish the work sheets upon which that portion of the fee has been calculated;

(2) if he will list the fees charged under the Explosives Acts; if he will indicate the proportion of those fees which relate to police time; and if he will publish the work sheets which form the basis for the charge made in respect of the time of the police.

Mr. Trippier: The tables set out the fees charged for licences under the Explosives Act and The Petroleum (Consolidation) Act. The fees are intended to cover the full economic costs of administering applications for, and issue of, licences. It is not possible to identify separately an element for police or fire service time.

Community Programme

Dr. Godman asked the Paymaster General if, pursuant to his answer of 16 February, Official Report, column 427, he will publish details of the numbers and position of those involved, their offences and the sentences of the nine convicted to date.

Mr. Lee: The information requested is provided in the table:

	Number of people involved	Position	Offences (described in lay terms)	Sentence (described in lay terms)
1.	1	Sponsor	Deception (6 charges)	9 months' imprisonment on each count to run concurrently
2.	1	Participant	Theft by deception	120 hours' Community Service; ordered to pay £341 compensation
3.	1	Book keeper	Embezzlement	18 months' suspended sentence
4.	1	Finance manager	Theft; false accounting; forgery	4 months' imprisonment
5.	1	Manager	Theft; receipt of stolen items (2 charges)	9 months' suspended sentence; restitution order for £150 (materials costs); ordered to pay £250 towards court costs
6.	1	Participant	Deception	100 hours' Community Service; ordered to pay £100 compensation

8.	1	Participant	Theft	Fined £50; bound over for 1 year
9.	1	MSC staff	Theft (5 charges)	2 years' imprisonment

Note

The details of offences and sentences are provided from information held centrally by the Manpower Services Commission and may not agree in precise terms with court records.

Dr. Godman asked the Paymaster General if he will place a copy of the report of the Manpower Services Commission inquiry into certain community programme projects in the west of Scotland in the Library.

Mr. Lee: The Manpower Services Commission's report of the inquiry is an internal document which includes information on the conduct of individual members of its staff.

Dr. Godman asked the Paymaster General if the Strathclyde police were involved in the Manpower Services Commission inquiry into certain community programme projects in the west of Scotland.

Mr. Lee: The police have not been involved in the Manpower Services Commission inquiry.

Manpower Services Commission (Induction Training)

Dr. Godman asked the Paymaster General if appointees to Manpower Services Commission area manpower boards receive induction training when taking up their appointments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: Yes. Training for area manpower board members is an ongoing process and is arranged locally by the board secretary in order to tailor the training to meet particular needs. Training includes:

Provision of information documents (such as the AMB guide, which contains detailed guidance on the work of boards, briefing packs and booklets), presentations and briefing sessions; and visits to local MSC schemes.

Community Schemes and YTS

Mr. Winnick asked the Paymaster General if he will give the total number of those on all kinds of community schemes and YTS in (a) the west midlands region (b) the black country area of the west midlands and (c) the Walsall travel-to-work area.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 19 February 1987]: The most recent figures for December show that the total numbers of people on the community programme, community industry and the voluntary projects programme were as follows:

	West Midlands	Black[1] Country	Walsall[2] Wolverhampton
Community Programme	27,152	8,231	4,502
Voluntary Projects Programme	1,224	232	97
Community Industry	278	—	—
TOTAL	28,654	8,463	4,599
In January the numbers on YTS were	44,942	13,804	2,864

[1] The black country figures include Dudley, Sandwell, Wolverhampton and Walsall.

[2] It is not possible to give figures for the Walsall travel-to-work area. The figures given are for Walsall and Wolverhampton.

WALES

Sheep

Mr. Geraint Howells asked the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has on (a) the average size of sheep flocks in Wales and (b) comparable sheep flocks in the rest of the European Economic Community; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The information is as follows:

(a) The average size of sheep flocks[1] in Wales in recent years was as follows:

	Size
1983	526
1984	540
1985	541
1986	[2]554

(b) The average size of sheep flocks[1] in the countries in the European Economic Community in 1983, the latest year for which data are available, are as follows:

Belgium	15
Denmark	14
France	66
Greece	37
Ireland	92
Italy	38
Luxembourg	13
Netherlands	38
United Kingdom	397
West Germany	25

Parrot Corporation

Mr. Abse asked the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the total cost to public funds of each current job at Parrot factory in Cwmbran new town; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Welsh Office financial assistance payable to the project and the accumulated value of the associated rent concession provided by the Welsh Development Agency amounts to about £6,900 per person currently employed by the company at Cwmbran. The Welsh Development Agency has also made a commercial investment in the company of £1·658 million, on which it expects to make a return.

Roads (Deeside)

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer on Monday 16 February, Official Report, column 451, if he will specify in each of the three cases mentioned the improvements that would have to be made to the roads on the eastern side of the River Dee if, in each case, the crossing was carrying traffic at capacity.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: In the case where additional capacity can be provided by widening the A494 trunk road where it crosses the River Dee, the trunk road on the eastern side would have to be improved by adding a third lane in each direction. With construction of a local link or an outer link, the trunk road on the eastern side of the River Dee would not need improvement.

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer on Monday 16 February, Official Report, column 451, if he will estimate the daily volume of traffic which he expects to cross the River Dee in the Queensferry area in (a) five, (b) 10 and (c) 15 years' time.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The forecast annual average daily volumes of traffic crossing the two River Dee bridges in the Queensferry area in 1992, 1997 and 2002 are:

	1992	1997	2002
A494 trunk road bridge	44,000	51,000	58,000
Old B road	13,000	14,000	15,000

GPs (Patient Lists)

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 16 February, Official Report, column 451, what are the reasons for the higher average figure of patients on general practitioners' lists in Rhyl compared with Clwyd; and whether he proposes to take any action to reduce the figure.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The size of general medical practitioners' lists relate directly to the number of doctors available in the practice area. Relative to population there are fewer doctors in Rhyl than in the rest of Clwyd. General medical practitioners are independent business men contracted to the National Health Service. The control of the distribution of general medical practitioners in England and Wales is the responsibility of the medical practices committee — a body independent of Government. This control is exercised negatively, i.e. the medical practices committee cannot direct doctors to any particular area but it can tell them where they may not practise. There is no mechanism available to Health Ministers to intervene. I am advised that, in respect of the Rhyl practice area, the medical practices committee would routinely approve applications for properly qualified doctors to be included in the medical list of Clwyd family practitioner committee.

NHS Staff

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give the total of job losses by category of worker since 1979 in the National Health Service by region and district.

Mr. Mark Robinson [pursuant to his reply, 9 February 1987, c. 83-6]: I am afraid that, due to a clerical error, some figures given in my reply to the hon. Gentleman's recent question about job losses in the NHS in Wales since 1979 were incorrect. The figures concerned relate to nursing and midwifery staff in Dyfed (including Pembrokeshire), with consequential errors in the total figures for those authorities and for Wales. The correct figures are shown in the following table.

ENVIRONMENT

Nuclear Waste

Sir Trevor Skeet asked the Secretary of State for the Environment at what locations in the United Kingdom low-level waste is currently being stored; and what are the tonnages in each case.

Mr. Waldegrave: Quantities of low-level nuclear waste arising in the United Kingdom are set out by installation in the UKAEA report to United Kingdom NIREX and the Department of the Environment—"The 1985 United Kingdom Radioactive Waste Inventory" (Reference DOE/RW/86/087). A copy has been placed in the Library of the House. The report for 1986 should be available in about two months. Minor users of radioactive substances, such as hospitals, may hold very small quantities of low-level waste pending disposal by authorised means.

Sir Trevor Skeet asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what tonnage of nuclear waste is currently held at Bradwell; and for what period it has been deposited.

Mr. Waldegrave: Details of the stocks of nuclear waste held at Bradwell nuclear power station were published in the UKAEA report to UK NIREX and the Department of the Environment (DOE/RW/86/087) "The 1985 United Kingdom Radioactive Waste Inventory" a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. Low-level waste is routinely disposed of at Drigg; other items in the inventory have accumulated at Bradwell during the life of the power station.

Urban and City Development

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list every parliamentary constituency which includes areas which will continue to receive urban programme assistance and inner city initiative support in the next financial year.

Mr. John Patten: The information requested follows. The urban programme authorities listed are those invited to submit inner area programmes for 1987-88. Constituencies with inner city initiative task forces are indicated.

Green Belt

Mr. Murphy asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has had any recent discussions with local authorities in Hertfordshire regarding the preservation of the green belt; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: My right hon. Friend has had no recent discussion with Hertfordshire authorities concerning the green belt. Our policy to protect the green belt is unchanged.

Bed and Breakfast Accommodation

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many people are living in bed and breakfast accommodation at local authority expense.

Mr. Tracey: At 30 September 1986, 6,480 households were in bed and breakfast accommodation, having been placed there by local authorities in fulfilment of their duties under part III of the Housing Act 1985. No information is available on how many of these households were having their accommodation charges met in the whole or part by the local authorities concerned.

Homelessness

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many homeless people there are in (i) England, (ii) Wales, (iii) Scotland and (iv) Northern Ireland.

Mr. Tracey: Information on Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland is a matter for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State concerned. In England, in the 12 months ending 30 September 1986, local authorities accepted responsibility for 101,280 formerly homeless households under part III of the Housing Act 1985, and found them accommodation.

Inner City Projects

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the projects currently supported by his Department under the inner city programme; which are sponsored by the Council for Community Relations in Lambeth; and if he will give details of the monitoring which has taken place in these projects over the last two years.

Mr. Tracey: The projects approved by this Department for funding in the 1986-87 Lambeth inner area programme are listed below.

This list includes the following projects which are sponsored by the Council for Community Relations in Lambeth:—

Black Civil Servants

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many black civil servants are employed by his Department at principal level or above in work involving black ethnic minorities.

Mr. Ridley: My Department does not keep records in a form which allows this type of information to be obtained.

Ministry of Defence, Scotland (Construction Work)

Mr. O'Neill asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the value of any construction work undertaken either by the Ministry of Defence or the Property Services Agency on behalf of the Ministry of Defence in Scotland in 1984, 1985 and 1986; and what is the projected expenditure for 1987.

Mr. Chope: I shall answer this question shortly.

Property Services Agency (Tendering)

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the Property Services Agency will be able to tender for (a) maintenance work and (b) new work for museums and galleries, after the new arrangements for it come into force after April 1988.

Mr. Chope [pursuant to his reply, 18 February 1987]: No, because the Property Services Agency is not a trading organisation.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Senior Registrars (Upgrading)

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what estimate he has of the additional cost of upgrading 500 currently employed senior registrars to consultant grade, assuming no accompanying increase in junior staff and no overtime payments for the new consultants.

Mr. Newton: The average salary cost of a whole-time equivalent senior registrar is estimated to be some £21,000 at 1984-85 prices, and of a consultant some £32,000. The long-run net salary cost of replacing a senior registrar post by a consultant will therefore be about £11,000 (in the short term it will be rather smaller because newly appointed consultants will start at or near the bottom of the incremental scale). These costs include the employer's contribution to superannuation and national insurance, but exclude wider effects such as the possible effect of increased throughput.

The Government do not envisage that the changes in the hospital medical staffing proposed in "Achieving a Balance" will require as many as 500 senior registrar posts to be converted to consultant.

"Achieving a Balance" includes a number of other proposals for stimulating the rate of consultant expansion, including a pump priming scheme for 100 new consultant posts in general medicine and related specialties and in general surgery/traumatic and orthopaedic surgery. As my right hon. Friend announced on 5 February, funds have already been set aside for this.

Personal Social Services (Capital Allowance)

Mr. Rowe asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many representations he has received since his most recent authorisation of the level of capital allowance for personal social services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tony Newton: Four local authorities have made representations about the level of 1987-88 capital expenditure allocations for the personal social services which were notified to authorities on 22 January 1987. The Government believe that restraint in public spending is essential in the national economic interest. The objective is to make and keep to plans for available expenditure. There has to be a limit, therefore, on the total available for local authority spending. It is for local authorities themselves to determine their actual levels of capital spending on particular service blocks, including personal social services, within their overall expenditure limit based on allocations, capital receipts and other sources of spending power.

Cancer Diagnosis (Delays)

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will take steps to collect centrally the figures for delays between a general practitioner recommending a patient to see a specialist for cancer diagnosis and the date on which the patient is actually seen by a consultant; at what level of the National Health Service these figures are currently kept; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: We are implementing the recommendation of the Körner steering group that there should be research to identify the most relevant and easily administered measure of the time patients in all specialties wait between referral by a general practitioner and an outpatient appointment. Data on outpatient waiting times are collected by individual district and regional health authorities but the form of the information varies. We would expect consultants and Health Service managers to regard referrals for the diagnosis of cancer as high priorities and to monitor them closely to prevent unacceptable delays.

Maternity Payments

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Bury St. Edmunds constituency claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Bury St. Edmunds constituency are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Bury St. Edmunds constituency is covered by the Department's office at Bury St. Edmunds although its boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The number of claims received for maternity grant in Bury St. Edmunds local office during the calendar year 1986 was 2,260.

It is not possible to predict how many women in Bury St. Edmunds constituency will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Ms. Clare Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Birmingham, Ladywood claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Birmingham, Ladywood are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Birmingham, Ladywood constituency is covered by the Department's offices at Edgbaston, Handsworth and Ladywood, although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The numbers of claims received for maternity grant in each of the three local offices during the calendar year 1986 were as follows:

	Number
Edgbaston	811
Handsworth	2,049
Ladywood	1,618

It is not possible to predict how many women in Birmingham, Ladywood will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in (a) Islington South and Finsbury and (b) Cambridge claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in (a) Islington South and Finsbury and (b) Cambridge are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the precise form requested. But in the 12 months ending 31 December 1986 the following numbers of claims to maternity grant were made at the Department's offices which cover the above constituencies, although the boundaries are not conterminous:

	Number
(a) Islington South and Finsbury
Hoxton	321
Finsbury Park	1,318
Westminster	[1]

[1] Claims for this office are dealt with at Aldershot Out-Station. A total of 3,085 claims were dealt with at that office but this total includes claims proper to other offices.

	Number
(b) Cambridge
Cambridge	3,899

It is not possible to predict how many women in (a) Islington South and Finsbury and (b) Cambridge will qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Leytoh received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Leyton are expected to receive statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 1,321 claims to maternity allowance were made at Walthamstow and 1,048 claims at Leytonstone, the Department's offices which cover the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

It is not possible to predict how many women in Leyton will qualify for statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance from April 1987. However, it is estimated that in total some 230,000 women will qualify for statutory maternity pay and 84,000 for maternity allowance in 1987-88.

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Middlesbrough received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Middlesbrough are expected to receive statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested. But in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 1,299 claims to maternity allowance were made at Middlesbrough, the Department's office which covers the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

It is not possible to predict how many women in Middlesbrough will qualify for statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance from April 1987. However, it is estimated that in total some 230,000 women will qualify for statutory maternity pay and 84,000 for maternity allowance in 1987-88.

Mr. Freeson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in the constituency of Brent, East received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Brent East are expected to receive statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 489 claims to maternity allowance were made at Cricklewood, 1,363 claims at Neasden and 967 claims at Harlesden, the Department's offices which cover the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

It is not possible to predict how many women in Brent, East will qualify for statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance from April 1987. However, it is estimated that in total some 230,000 women will qualify for statutory maternity pay and 84,000 for maternity allowance in 1987-88.

Mr. Freeson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in the constituency of Brent, East claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Brent, East are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Brent, East constituency is covered by the Department's offices at Cricklewood, Harlesden and Neasden although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The numbers of claims received for maternity grant in each of the three local offices during the calender year 1986 were as follows:

	Number
Cricklewood	633
Harlesden	1,911
Neasden	1,143

It is not possible to predict how many women in Brent, East will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mr. McTaggart asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Glasgow, Central claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Glasgow, Central are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the precise form requested, but in the 12 months ending 31 December 1986 the following number of claims to maternity grant were made at the Department's local offices which cover the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous:

	Number
Glasgow (Rutherglen)	1,082
Glasgow (Southside)	1,430
Glasgow (City)	485
Glasgow (Lauriston)	1,542
Glasgow (Springburn)	927
Glasgow (Parkhead)	903
Glasgow (Craigton)	876

It is not possible to predict how many women in Glasgow, Central will qualify for a maternity payment from the Social Fund after April 1987.

Mr. McTaggart asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Glasgow, Central received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Glasgow, Central are expected to receive statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the precise form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, the following numbers of claims to maternity allowance were made at the Department's offices which cover the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous:

	Number
Glasgow (Rutherglen)	746
Glasgow (Southside)	902
Glasgow (City)	261
Glasgow (Laurieston)	1,405
Glasgow (Springburn)	744
Glasgow (Parkhead)	900
Glasgow (Craigton)	522

It is not possible to predict how many women in Glasgow, Central will qualify for statutory maternity pay or maternity allowances from April 1987. However, it is estimated that in total some 230,000 women will qualify for statutory maternity pay and 84,000 for maternity allowance in 1987-88.

Mr. Robert C. Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Newcastle-upon-Tyne, North constituency claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Newcastle-upon-Tyne, North constituency are expected to qualify for a maternity payment form the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise from requested.

The Newcastle-upon-Tyne, North constituency is covered by the Department's office at Newcastle St. James, although its boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The number of claims received for maternity grant in that local office during the calendar year 1986 was 691.

It is not possible to predict how many women in the Newcastle-upon-Tyne, North constituency will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The City of Durham constituency is covered by the Department's office at Durham, although its boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The number of claims received for maternity grant in the Durham local office during the calendar year 1986 was 854.

It is not possible to predict how many women in the City of Durham constituency will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mr. Robin Cook asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Livingston constituency claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Livingston constituency are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Livingston constituency is covered by the Department's offices at Bathgate and Edinburgh, West, although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The number of claims received for maternity grant in each of the two local offices during the calendar year 1986 was as follows:

	Number
Bathgate	2,091
Edinburgh	1,821

It is not possible to predict how many women in the Livingston constituency will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mr. Robin Cook asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Livingston constituency received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Livingston constituency are expected to receive statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 1,434 claims to maternity allowance were made at Edinburgh (West) and 2,109 claims at Bathgate, the Department's offices which cover the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

It is not possible to predict how many women in Livingston will qualify for statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance from April 1987. However, it is estimated that in total some 230,000 women will qualify for statutory maternity pay and 84,000 for maternity allowance in 1987-88.

Mr. Robin Cook asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Basildon claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Basildon are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Newton: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Basildon constituency is covered by the Department's office at Basildon, although its boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The number of claims received for maternity grant in the Basildon local office during the calendar year 1986 was 3,702.

It is not possible to predict how many women in Basildon will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Mr. Robin Cook asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Basildon received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Basildon are expected to receive statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 3,060 claims to maternity allowance were made at Basildon, the Department's office which covers the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

It is not possible to predict how many women in Basildon will qualify for statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance from April 1987. However, it is estimated that in total some 230,000 women will qualify for statutory maternity pay and 84,000 for maternity allowance in 1987-88.

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Peckham claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Peckham are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested. The Peckham constituency is covered by the Department's offices at Kennington Park and Peckham, although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The numbers of claims received for maternity grant in each of the two local offices during the calendar year 1986 were as follows:

	Number
Kennington Park	731
Peckham	1,958

It is not possible to predict how many women in Peckham will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Dulwich claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Dulwich are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested. The Dulwich constituency is covered by the Department's offices at Brixton, Crystal Palace and Peckham, although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The numbers of claims received for maternity grant in each of the three local offices during the calendar year 1986 were as follows:

	Number
Brixton	1,375
Crystal Palace	459
Peckham	1,958

It is not possible to predict how many women in Peckham will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Dulwich received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Dulwich are expected to receive statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested. But in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 1,431 claims to maternity allowance were made at Peckham, 1,030 claims at Brixton and 1,301 claims at Crystal Palace, the Department's offices which cover the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

It is not possible to predict how many women in Dulwich will qualify for statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance from April 1987. However, it is estimated that in total some 230,000 women will qualify for statutory maternity pay and 84,000 for maternity allowance in 1987-88.

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Peckham received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Peckham are expected to receive statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 1,431 claims to maternity allowance were made at Peckham and 410 claims at Kennington Park, the Department's offices which cover the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

It is not possible to predict how many women in Peckham will qualify for statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance from April 1987.

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Greenwich claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available: and how many women in Greenwich are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Greenwich constituency is covered by the Department's offices at Greenwich Park and Woolwich, although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The numbers of claims received for maternity grant in each of the two local offices during the calendar year 1986 were as follows:

	Number
Greenwich Park	1,246
Woolwich	2,482

It is not possible to predict how many women in Greenwich will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Greenwich received the maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are availalble: and how many women in Greenwich are expected to receive statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 855 claims to maternity allowance were made at Greenwich Park and 1,624 claims at Woolwich, the Department's offices which cover the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

It is not possible to predict how many women in Greenwich will qualify for statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance from April 1987. However, it is estimated that in total some 230,000 women will qualify for statutory maternity pay and 84,000 for maternity allowance in 1987-88.

Mrs. Golding asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Newcastle under Lyme received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Newcastle under Lyme are expected to receive statutory maternity pay or allowance after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 1,265 claims to maternity allowance were made at Newcastle and 1,640 claims at Stoke, North, the Department's offices which cover the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

It is not possible to predict how many women in Newcastle-under-Lyme will qualify for statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance from April 1987. However, it is estimated that in total some 230,000 women will qualify for statutory maternity pay and 84,000 for maternity allowance in 1987-88.

Mrs. Golding asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Newcastle under Lyme claimed maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women in Newcastle under Lyme are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Newcastle-under-Lyme constituency is covered by the Department's offices at Newcastle (Staffs) and Stoke, North, although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The numbers of claims received for maternity grants in each of the two local offices during the calendar year 1986 were as follows:

	Number
Newcastle (Staffs)	1,572
Stoke North	2,605

It is not possible to predict how many women in Newcastle-under-Lyme will qualify for maternity payments from the social fund from April 1987.

Local Office (Oval)

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, when he intends to reply to outstanding parliamentary questions from the hon. Member for Norwood in relation to the conduct of the Oval social security office.

Mr. Lyell: I have written to the hon. Member today.

Mr. A. T. L. Khurt (Correspondence)

Sir Hugh Rossi asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when the hon. Member for Hornsey and Wood Green may expect to receive a reply to his letter of 25 September 1986 and subsequent reminders on behalf of Mr. A. T. L. Khurt, regarding student finance and housing benefit.

Mr. Lyell: I wrote to my hon. Friend yesterday.

Casualty Officers

Mr. Hayes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what plans he has to investigate high charges to casualty officers by private agencies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I assume that my hon. Friend has in mind the charges made by agencies to health authorities for the supply of temporary medical staff. We have at present no plans to investigate such charges, but have advised authorities that in agreeing terms with agencies they should have regard to the rates of remuneration payable to directly employed staff. Several authorities are taking steps to improve arrangements for the provision of temporary medical staff, and we shall keep the position under review in consultation with them.

Hepatitis Vaccine

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to the reply of 8 December, Official Report, column 69, if he will publish, as a matter of urgency, the revised guidance on hepatitis B vaccine proposed by the joint committee on vaccination and immunisation.

Mrs. Currie: The issues raised in considering the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation proposals have not yet been finally resolved. I hope that an announcement will be made very shortly.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Middlesex Crown Court

Mr. Lawrence asked the Attorney-General when he now expects the Middlesex Crown court in Parliament square to be re-commencing its operations.

The Solicitor-General: The extensive programme of work on this court is now due to be completed by the early summer of 1988. It is expected that it will re-open as a Crown court centre by the end of the summer.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Michael Delaney

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to when he expects police inquiries into the death of Michael Delaney at Wapping on Saturday 10 January to be completed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from the Commissioner that the police investigation is nearly completed.

AIDS

Sir Dudley Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce legislation to require an inquest to be held on people who have died as a result of contracting AIDS; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No; but coroners are required under the Coroners Act 1887 as amended by the Coroners (Amendment) Act 1926 to inquire into all cases reported to them of violent or unnatural deaths; or sudden deaths the causes of which are unknown.

Liquor Licences

Mr. Beith asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the fees charged for licences for the sale of intoxicating liquor under the Licensing Acts; if he will isolate the part of that fee which relates to the time taken by police on making inquiries, reporting and being represented at court; and if he will publish the work sheets showing how the proportion of the fee relating to police time was calculated.

Mr. Waddington: The current fee of £12·50 for the grant of a liquor licence includes no specific element for the cost of police time. The fees for authorisations granted under the Licensing Act 1964 are being reviewed to reflect more accurately the full costs involved and police time will be one of the factors taken into account.

Economic League

Mr. Winnick asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has as to what information has been given by the Economic League to (a) police forces and (b) other agencies of the state for which he is responsible in the past two years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have no such information.

Mr. Winnick asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from chief constables as to the practices of their forces in respect of the handling of information on named individuals from the Economic League; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The police receive information from many different sources. Whether such information is retained and how it is evaluated and used is, subject to the law, a matter for individual chief officers of police. If the hon. Member has specific evidence of misuse of information, we will take it up with the chief officer concerned.

Mr. R. J. Garcia (Visa Application)

Mr. Maxwell-Hyslop asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the result of the visa application made by Mr. R. J. Garcia which was referred to his Department on 8 August 1986, after being processed by the British embassy in Manila.

Mr. Waddington: We regret the delay which has occurred in this case, due to the papers having been overlooked in the Immigration Department. A reply was sent to the British embassy in Manila today instructing that Mr. Garcia's application should be refused. Mr. Garcia will have a right of appeal against this decision, exerciseable from abroad.

Prison Medical Service (Report)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Government intend to reply to the third report from the Social Services Committee of Session 1985-86 on the prison medical service.

Mr. Mellor: The Government reply to the Social Services Committee report on the prison medical service is about to be sent for printing after which it will be issued directly as a Command Paper.

Road Traffic Offences

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will assess the feasibility of collecting information in a more detailed form than at present concerning prosecutions in the Metropolis for offences against the Road Traffic Acts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Collection of more detailed information would involve disproportionate cost. The police make individual returns to the Home Office on some 2 million motoring offences dealt with in court proceedings each year. These returns already include information on the age and sex of the alleged offender, the court where the proceedings are conducted, the date of appearance, any court remands and the disposal. More detailed information may not be readily available to those submitting the returns and so is liable to be inaccurate.

Wapping (Inquiry)

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects the Metropolitan police inquiry on the Wapping disturbances to be completed; and whether he will place a copy in the Library.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer the hon. Member to the replies I gave to questions from the right hon. Member for Bethnal Green and Stepney (Mr. Shore) on 11 February at column 217. It is too soon to say when Chief Superintendent Wyrko's investigation will be completed.

DEFENCE

Open Government Document 87/01

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he decided to publish defence open government document 87/01.

Mr. Stanley: Work on updating material published in defence open government documents 80/23 and 82/1 began in the summer of 1986. It was envisaged last autumn that this would be likely to be published in the form of a third open government document. The final decision to do so was taken on 20 January 1987.

Ulster Defence Regiment

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the present organisation and operations of the Ulster Defence Regiment.

Mr. Stanley: The Ulster Defence Regiment continues to make an indispensable contribution to Army operations in support of the RUC in Northern Ireland and currently provides first line support in 85 per cent. of the Province. Improvements in organisation and training continue to be made, in order to enable the regiment to maintain the high standards of operational performance necessary to meet its commitments. These include the implementation of the training improvements referred to in my reply to the hon. Member for Kingston upon Hull, North (Mr. McNamara) on 19 December 1985 at columns 245-46.

United States (Discussions)

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he last met the United States Secretary for Defence; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. Younger: The United States Defence Secretary and I last met together on 17 February in Washington, when a range of issues of mutual defence interest was discussed.

Surface Fleet

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the role of the EH101 in the surface fleet and, in particular, to the type 23 frigate and the AOR; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stanley: The EH101 is intended to become the Royal Navy's principal anti-submarine warfare helicopter. It is planned that it will operate from type 22 and type 23 frigates, as a replacement for the Lynx. When it is deployed in the type 23 some of the maintenance will be carried out in the auxiliary oiler replenishment since we judge that this will be particularly effective in conserving skilled manpower and spares during high intensity operations. Later the EH101 is planned to replace the Sea King as the ASW helicopter operated from Invincible-class carriers.

Helicopters

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Defence what deliveries of new helicopters are planned between 1989 and 1991; what plans he has to increase deliveries of helicopters; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: On present plans we are expecting eight Sea King helicopters to be delivered by 1990. The future defence requirement for support helicopters is under consideration.

HM Forces (Leave Periods)

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether any members of Her Majesty's forces on duty in the Persian gulf are taking leave periods in Kenya.

Mr. Stanley: Her Majesty's Ships from the Gulf patrol make periodic visits to Kenya to carry out routine maintenance. Whilst there, ships' companies normally take a few days' rest and recreation.

Committee of Public Accounts (Recommendations)

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will list the recommendations of the Committee of Public Accounts since 1983 affecting his Department which have been implemented.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the Treasury Minutes published in response to the relevant PAC Reports (Cmnd. 8995, 9178, 9368, 9452, 9464, 9546, 9638, 9696, 9776, 9808, 9859 and 9917). The Committee on which the hon. Member serves monitors departmental progress with accepted recommendations.

Missile Systems

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received in response to his publication of Trident and the alternatives, and in particular on the relative merits of the Tomahawk missile system and the Trident system; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stanley: My Department has received no representations specifically on this matter since the publication of defence open government document No. 87/01 "Trident and the Alternatives" on 30 January. As I said in the debate on the Royal Navy on 2 February at column 708 a United Kingdom minimum deterrent based on either sea-launched or air-launched cruise missiles would be likely to be about double the cost of Trident.

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will declassify information relating to the number of warheads for Trident D5.

Mr. Stanley: No. I cannot add to what is said in paragraph 2 of defence open government document No. 87/01 "Trident and the Alternatives", a copy of which is in the Library.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is his most recent estimate of total expenditure at present prices for the Polaris rocket motor system.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: £373 million at 1986-87 prices and £1 = $1·50.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what was the forecast in-service date at the time of first approval for the Trident nuclear missile;

(2) what is the present forecast in-service date for the introduction of the Trident.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The United Kingdom Trident II D5 project remains on programme to enter service in the mid 1990s as originally announced by the then Secretary of State for Defence on 11 March 1982.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what was the forecast in-service date at the time of first approval for the Polaris rocket motor system;

(2) what is the present forecast in-service date for the introduction of the Polaris rocket motor system.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The deployment of new Polaris rocket motors commenced on time in September 1986.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Defence what was the estimated cost of Trident at the time the original approval for work was given.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The original estimate of United Kingdom Trident II D5 costs was £7,500 million at September 1981 prices and £1 = $1·78.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Defence what was the extended cost of the Polaris rocket motor system at the time the original approval for work was given.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: £392 million at 1982-83 prices and £1 = $1·52.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the level of expenditure to 31 March 1986 in terms of outturn prices for Trident.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: £634 million.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the level of expenditure to 31 March 1986 in terms of outturn prices for the Polaris rocket motor system.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: £279 million.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Defence what was the estimated cost of Trident at the time the original approval for work was given updated to present day prices.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: £10,769 million at 1986-87 prices and £1 = $1.50.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Defence what was the estimated cost of the Polaris rocket motor system at the time the original approval for work was given, updated to present day prices.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: £549 million at 1986-87 prices and £1 = $1.50.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the level of expenditure to 31 March 1986 at present prices for Trident.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: £708 million.

Civil Servants (Scotland)

Mr. O'Neill asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many Ministry of Defence civil servants currently employed in Scotland were recruited locally.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The information required on local recruitment of Ministry of Defence civilians in Scotland is not held centrally, and could only be made available at disproportionate cost.

Mr. O'Neill asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the number of (a) male and (b) female civil servants employed by the Ministry of Defence in Scotland.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The numbers of male and female full-time equivalent civilian staff employed by the Ministry of Defence in Scotland at 1 January 1987, excluding casual staff, were 14,953 males and 3,177 females.

Companies (Scotland)

Mr. O'Neill asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the companies or subsidiaries of companies based in Scotland, which are currently engaged in defence contracts or sub-contracts.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I will answer shortly.

Military Establishments (Scotland)

Mr. O'Neill asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the approximate value of goods locally purchased by military establishments located in Scotland in the last year.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The approximate value of goods locally purchased by Ministry of Defence establishments located in Scotland in 1985-86 the latest period for which figures are available, was £8·8 million. A further £1·5 million was spent on local contracts for the provision of services.

Civilian Employees (Scotland)

Mr. O'Neill asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many civilians are currently employed by the Ministry of Defence in Scotland.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The number of full-time equivalent civilian staff excluding casual staff employed by the Ministry of Defence in Scotland at 1 January 1987 was 18,130.

Service Personnel (Scotland)

Mr. O'Neill asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel are currently employed in Scotland.

Mr. Freeman: The number of United Kingdom service personnel deployed in Scotland on 1 January 1987 was 20,846. This figure includes RN/RM personnel serving on ships whose home port is in Scotland and which were in home waters on 1 January 1987.

IDEA '87 Exhibition (Ankara)

Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for Defence what assistance is being given to the British arms manufacturers who are taking part in the IDEA '87 arms exhibition in Ankara, Turkey in April.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We are providing a range of advice and assistance to those United Kingdom companies attending, in view of the IDEA'87 exhibition's potential for promoting United Kingdom defence exports in near and middle eastern markets. As with many other such exhibitions worldwide, this will include joint venture assistance from the British Overseas Trade Board which will be provided to those companies attending through the United Kingdom Defence Manufacturers' Association.

Tornado Programme (Costs)

Mr. Wilkinson asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give the estimates of the total cost of the Tornado programme up to the delivery of the last aircraft at constant 1987 prices.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The total estimated cost to the United Kingdom of the Tornado programme is £10,180 million at estimated September 1987 economic conditions.

General Sir Frank Kitson

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence what action he intends to take against General Sir Frank Kitson under section 12 of Queen's Regulations.

Mr. Freeman: I shall reply shortly.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

ABM Treaty

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether his Department has received any representations from United States' officials regarding interpretation of the anti-ballistic missile treaty.

Mr. Renton: We have discussed the question of treaty interpretation with the United States as part of the regular bilateral consultations on arms control issues over a number of months. We look forward to continuing exchanges with the United States on this as on other arms control issues.

Visas

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the extent to which visa-issuing offices of his Department in eastern Europe are sufficiently resourced to enable them to deal with all applications in the coming year in a speedy and orderly manner.

Mr. Eggar: Her Majesty's embassies in the countries concerned are consulted as a matter of course. As a result, seasonal reinforcements are provided where required to ensure a speedy and efficient service.

Disarmament

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what, pursuant to the answer of 9 December, Official Report, columns 117-18, was the outcome, in respect of arms control negotiations directed towards the goal of removing all intermediate range nuclear missiles from continental Europe, of the North Atlantic Council meeting of 11 to 12 December.

Mr. Renton: I refer the hon. Member to paragraph 5 of the North Atlantic Council communiqué of 11-12 December 1986, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House.

Middle East

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which European Economic Community states did not vote against UNGA resolution 41/162A on the middle east; and what information he has as to the reasons each gave for not doing so.

Mr. Renton: Greece voted in favour of United Nations General Assembly Resolution 41/162A, giving as the reason her support for the principles expressed in the resolution. Spain maintained her abstention from the previous year.

Western European Union

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to make a regular report to Parliament on the activities of the Western European Union.

Mr. Eggar: I refer my hon. Friend to the answers I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Welwyn, Hatfield (Mr. Murphy) on 26 February at column 595 and 8 May 1986 at column 227, and to my statement of Government policy towards WEU in the Adjournment debate on 13 February 1987 at column 632. The next report to Parliament on WEU activities will be made after the spring meeting of Foreign and Defence Ministers in Luxembourg on 27-28 April.

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to review the composition of the permanent council of the Western European Union.

Mr. Eggar: None.

Mr. C. Bennet (Detention)

Sir Patrick Wall asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what protests were made about the illegal detention of Mr. C. Bennet in Zambia; and how often he was visited by consular officials.

Mr. Eggar: Mr. Bennet was detained on 13 December 1986. He was unfortunate enough to have been the innocent travelling companion of a man who has since pleaded guilty to having explosives and a timing device in his vehicle.

His arrest was in accordance with Zambian law. It would not therefore have been appropriate for a protest claiming illegal arrest to have been made. Mr. Bennet was visited on 19, 23 and 30 December by a consular official. He was released on 2 January.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

United States Aircraft Industry (Subsidies)

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will place in the Official Report any information available to him on the extent of federal and state subsidies in the United States of America to indigenous airframe and aero-engine manufacturers.

Mr. Pattie: As I stated in my reply of 3 February to the hon. Member for Eccles (Mr. Carter-Jones) at column 560, the American aerospace industry continues to derive benefit from a wide range of Government support. Considerable information on such support is available, and the Airbus partner Governments have produced a summary position paper on this and related issues. In view of its length, I have asked for a copy of this position paper to be placed in the Library of the House.

ERDF (Grants)

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what grants have been allocated to each of the English regions from the European regional development fund during each year since its inception; how many of these allocations have been de-committed each year; and for what reasons.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The following table gives the available information. Decommitment — which may be of the entire sum allocated or part of it — occurs when the project in question is not completed as specified in the relevant Commission decisions.

Notes:

(1) For years 1982 and earlier commitments have been converted from European units of account or European currency units into sterling at the average exchange rate for the year.

(2) Decommitments for the years 1981-85 are shown in the year that they were requested. In most cases this would not be the same year as that of the original commitments.

(3) Data includes both full and partial decommitments.

Extraterritoriality

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list in the Official Report each occasion on which he has made an order or given directions under the protection of the Trading Interests Act 1980; if he will specify in each case the section or sections of the act under which the order was made or the directions were given, the person or persons to whom they applied, and their purpose and their effect; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: I shall reply to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

THE ARTS

British Theatre Association (Library)

Mr. Freud asked the Minister for the Arts what support his Department gives to the library of the British Theatre Association; if he was invited to attend the official opening of the library by Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother on Tuesday 17 February; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: No direct support is provided from my Department, but the British Theatre Association library has received a grant of £4,685 this year through Greater London Arts Association which was matched pound for pound by the London boroughs grants scheme; this contribution represents full replacement of the previous GLC funding.

I was invited to attend the opening of the library in its new premises but, unfortunately, could not be present due to parliamentary commitments.

NATIONAL FINANCE

EC Budget

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer which European Economic Community states supported the Commission's proposals on the 1987 budget at the European Economic Community Budget Council on 16 January.

Mr. Brooke: I regret that details of the internal proceedings of Council meetings are confidential. I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 27 January at column 283 reporting the outcome of the 16 January Budget Council.

Own Resources

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the ratio decidendi of the EEC Court of Justice in ruling on 18 December 1986 that requests by the European Economic Community Commission for advance payment of non-value added tax own resources impose an obligation on member states to comply with them.

Mr. Brooke: The ratio decidendi was that the decision of 21 April 1970 and Regulation 2891/77 conferred autonomy on the Commission with regard to the management of own resources. Consequently the exercise by the Commission of their power in Article 10(2) of Regulation 2891/77 to request advance payments of own resources was not dependent on the agreement of the various member states, who were therefore under an obligation to comply with the Commission's request.

Diesel Fuel Oil (Taxes)

Mr. Bermingham asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total received by petroleum revenue tax and tax on diesel fuel oil used in private and commercial vehicles in 1985-86.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

European Commission

Mr. Forth asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the European Commission's latest cash position and the implications for the United Kingdom.

Mr. Brooke: The European Commission estimates that its spending obligations this month will again exceed available revenues under the provisional twelfths system.

The Commission has therefore requested member states to advance from March into February the payment of our own resources other than VAT in accordance with Article 10(2) of Council Regulation 2891/77: a similar advance was made last month, which I announced to the House on 20 January (Official Report, c. 467). The Government consider that this request is justified and will accordingly make today an advance payment of some £142 million from the Consolidated Fund, under Section 2(3) of the European Communities Act, 1972. The payment of levies and duties on 20 March will be reduced by the amount of the advance.

The Commission has informed us that it expects in addition to have to overdraw its accounts with member states this month in accordance with article 12(2) of Council Regulation 2891/77. The amount involved for the United Kingdom is expected to be of the order of £36 million. Subject to confirmation that use of this facility is needed as well as the article 10(2) advance, the Government propose to meet this obligation, too, from the Consolidated Fund in accordance with section 2(3) of the European Communities Act, 1972. Repayment of any drawing under this facility will be made by deduction from our March own resources payments. Neither of these facilities will involve increasing the total amounts which the Community is authorised to spend during 1987. There will therefore be no net additions to public expenditure.

CIVIL SERVICE

Ethnic Recruitment

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Minister for the Civil Service what has been the percentage increase in recruitment of (a) blacks and (b) Asians to the Civil Service over the most recent period for which figures are available.

Mr. Luce: The collection of data about the ethnic origin of applicants and recruits to the Civil Service began only in 1986. It is not yet possible therefore to say whether there has been an increase in recruitment from the ethnic minorities.

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Minister for the Civil Service if he will institute an urgent project for setting specific recruitment targets in the Civil Service for blacks and Asians.

Mr. Luce: Recruitment to the Civil Service is conducted on the basis of fair and open competition and selection on merit. The Government would welcome an increase in applications from suitably qualified people from the ethnic minorities and a number of steps are being taken to encourage this, including strengthening schools liaison, use of the ethnic press and outreach work to make more direct contacts with minority communities. The results of ethnic monitoring will be used to evaluate the effectiveness of these measures and to assess the fairness of selection procedures between candidates. The Government will be considering in the light of monitoring experience what other specific actions would add significantly to the effectiveness of its equal opportunity policy.

The Manpower Services Commission has adopted, an action plan to encourage the recruitment of ethnic minority staff. The plan involves the use of statistics of the working population in the locality as one target against which managers can measure their success in recruiting suitably qualified staff from the ethnic minorities. These targets are not fixed quotas, which are unlawful, but they do provide a measure of progress and a focus for identifying where outreach to particular communities is needed. The Manpower Services Commission's experience will be evaluated to see what impact this initiative is having.

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Minister for the Civil Service if he will list the measures used for monitoring the recruitment of blacks and Asians to the Civil Service.

Mr. Luce: Since February 1986 the Civil Service Commission has been asking candidates for executive officer who sit the written qualifying test to complete a questionnaire on their ethnic origin. The information provided by candidates is being used to evaluate the success of the Civil Service in attracting ethnic minority candidates and to assess the fairness of the selection process. In September 1986 monitoring was extended to the other schemes for recruitment run by the Civil Service Commission, an ethnic origin questionnaire being issued with each application form. In the latter part of 1986 pilot schemes of monitoring departmental recruitment over a three month period were caried out. Arrangements for a comprehensive programme of monitoring departmental recruitment are under discussion.

SCOTLAND

Disabled People (Tayside)

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish information for Tayside region for each year since 1982 showing the number of disabled people receiving help with: telephone installations, telphone attachments, telephone rental, television supply, television licence, radio supply, other personal aids, assistance with holidays and places for the mentally ill at day centres.

Mr. John MacKay: Local authority statistical returns of persons in need who have been provided with assistance do not distinguish disabled persons from others.

The available information for all persons assisted in Tayside region is as follows:

	1982	1983	1984	1985	[1]1986

ERDF (Grants)

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will specify what grants have been allocated to Scotland from the European regional development fund during each year since its inception; how many of these allocations have been de-committed each year, and for what reasons.

Mr. Lang: Total European regional development fund awards and the decommitments by year for Scotland are set out in the table below. Decommitments are the result of projects or investments not proceeding, or not on the scale originally envisaged.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Food Additives

Mr. Warren asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the food additives which are permitted in the United Kingdom but are not permitted in other member states of the European Economic Community; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: There are EC directives covering the use of the four major classes of additives, namely preservatives, antioxidants, emulsifiers and colours. Member states must permit the use of the additives listed in these directives although they may impose conditions of use upon them. All other additives may be permitted at member states' discretion. Because such matters as consumer requirements, manufacturing practice and historical usage vary between member states, the pattern of approval of additives for use in food and conditions for such use is very complex between the 12 members states. It is therefore not possible to produce a comprehensive list in the way that my hon. Friend has requested but if he would care to write to me indicating those food additives or groups of food additives in which he is particularly interested I will endeavour to give him a detailed reply.

Farm Buildings

Mr. Heddle asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received regarding alternative use for redundant farm buildings.

Mr. Donald Thompson: It is often suggested to us that redundant farm buildings could be converted to non-agricultural uses as part of a diversified farm business. Grants are already available in the less favoured areas under the agricultural improvement scheme to assist in the conversion of farm buildings for craft and tourism activities and as my right hon. Friend the Minister announced in the House on 9 February we shall shortly be extending this to cover a wider range of diversification uses. In addition the development commission offers grants in its rural development areas for the conversion of redundant rural (including farm) buildings to light industrial and other uses.

Plants and Seeds

Mr. John Carlisle asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the future of plant variety testing and seed certification in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Gummer: The present arrangements for plant variety testing and seed certification have been in existence for many years and I believe it is now time to take a fresh look at these systems. Accordingly my right hon. Friends and I have asked a small team of officials to conduct a comprehensive review using the following terms of reference:

(i) to review the operation of the plant variety test and trials systems for Plant Breeders' Rights and the National List in the United Kingdom and their relationship with the non-statutory Recommended list systems;

(ii) to review the operation of seed certification in the United Kingdom;

(iii) to examine the legal, technical and financial requirements of these systems;

(iv) to examine the possibilities for rationalising these and associated systems to meet the future needs of government, industry and consumers efficiently and cost effectively; and to make recommendations.

The review team will start work straight away with the aim of producing a report by the end of this year.

PRIME MINISTER

Agricultural Policy

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Prime Minister when she next plans to meet the president of the National Farmers Union to discuss Her Majesty's Government's policy towards agriculture.

The Prime Minister: I have no plans to do so.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 110

SESSION 1986-87

9th February–20th February 1987

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc, between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instrument etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Mr Speaker and his deputies are brought together under the heading Speakers rulings and statements.

Other contributions by Mr Speaker and his deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates, Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates etc (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Com = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
